Farewell Message

Phelan Leaving 'Extremely Proud' Of Accomplishments

The past six years have provided me with the unparalleled honor as serving as the Mayor of the city which I grew up in and love. I cannot properly explain to you how great an honor it was to serve as your mayor.

And I truly never intended to run for mayor. I became involved in politics over an issue of paramount importance to the education of my children; and children throughout the city. I sought help to address a glaring weakness in our school system and that plea for help fell on deaf ears, forcing more deliberative action. That decision to originally run for School Committee in 1999 led me on a journey that would have been unimaginable at the outset.

None of the successes the city has experienced would have been possible without the efforts and support of the entire organization; from department heads, and managers, police, fire, teachers, clerical, public works, parks and all City personnel.

My wife, Tracey, and children Rachael, Brianne, Kerry, and William Arthur deserve my gratitude for the ultra-important role they have played in guiding and supporting me throughout the past six years. They have lived all aspects of being part of a family in the limelight with dignity and pride and I am truly blessed as both a husband and

I leave office extremely proud of the accomplishments of my administration and hopeful for the future of our great city. Quincy is a city with a bright future, a future that will include revitalization of our downtown, a new state-of-the-art Quincy High School, the creation of a new waterfront park at Broad Meadows, and energy efficient schools and municipal buildings throughout the city.

I am extremely proud of the financial strength of the city. I leave behind the largest Stabilization or "Rainy Day" fund in city history. We have grown our reserves from a deficit of $5 million to a surplus of approximately $12 million in just six years. Our reserves will help stabilize the residential tax rate and weather any potential crises in the foreseeable future. We have helped create a predictable climate for our residential taxpayers while concurrently balancing the tax rate for the past four years to a level lower than any other city in Massachusetts.

Our $2.6 million Free Cash Reserve from the prior fiscal year can also help the new administration deal with any outstanding issues such as unresolved employee contracts, debt payments on our energy management program, potential snow costs, and other budgetary situations that arise during the course of the current fiscal year.

Quincy's bond rating has been increased twice by both Moody's and Standard and Poor's, two prestigious Wall Street financial firms that have recognized Quincy's sound financial management.

But our success is no accident; it was the result of prudent financial planning and a discipline of best-practices financial management. My administration implemented financial planning philosophies across the spectrum of local government. Our Payment Management Plan not only paved more than 100 streets, it established a long-term planning tool for investment in our infrastructure. Our Capital Improvement Plan addressed much-needed repairs to schools and city buildings in a sys-

Extends Open Invitation To Inaugural Reception

Koch To Take Oath Monday As 33rd Mayor

By TOM HENSHAW

There'll be a touch of grandeur to the inauguration of Quincy's 33rd mayor which takes place Monday, Jan. 7, at 10 a.m. in the august ballroom of the Quincy Marriott Hotel with its capacity of more than 1,000 people.

And there'll be a touch of the common man, too.

"I want to invite every Quincy resident to this celebration of our great city," said Mayor-to-be Tom Koch. "It will be a great event where the entire community can come together, have a good time and celebrate Quincy's future."

Mayor Thomas P. Koch, to give him his formal title, will take the oath of office from City Clerk Joseph P. Shea shortly after 10 o'clock, following it up with his inaugural address.

A gala reception will be held in the Marriott Ballroom at 7 p.m. featuring the music of the popular band Java Jive and a disc jockey. The gala is free and open to the public.

Members of the City Council, all of them reelected, will be sworn in by Shea and reorganize for the 2008-09 year, electing a new president, probably Jay Davis of Ward 4, who will deliver his remarks.

The Rise Of Plan A And Fall Of Plan E

By FRANK McCAULEY

Shortly after 10 a.m. on Monday, January 7, 2008, Thomas Koch will take over the oath of office as Quincy's 33rd mayor. Mayor Koch will be the 30th individual to serve as Quincy's mayor since Charles H. Porter was inaugurated as the city's first mayor on Jan. 7, 1889.

The discrepancy between the 33rd mayor and the 30th individual comes about because three mayors served split terms in office. Gustave Bates was the 14th and 17th mayor while Charles A. Ross was the 20th and 22nd and Thomas S. Burgin was the 21st and 23rd mayor.

The city's original charter was drafted by two Quincy lawyers, Josiah Quincy and Sigourney Butler. The proposed charter was passed by the legislature, signed by the governor and adopted at a special town meeting held on Monday, June 11, 1888. The vote was 812 in favor and 454 against the charter change.

The charter, referred to as a "Homemade Charter" due to the fact that it was drafted by local citizens, provided for a mayor who would be the city's executive officer, as well as a 23 member city council. Voters of each of Quincy's six wards would elect three individuals to serve as ward councillors while the residents of the entire city would elect five individuals to serve as councillors at large. Terms of office were to be of one year duration. The school committee would be comprised of nine members, one member from each of the six wards and three members elected by the citizens of the whole city.

School committee mem-

bers would serve staggered terms of three years duration.

The original charter was in effect for 28 years (1889-1916). During that period 14 individuals served as mayor, an average of one every two years.

PLAN A PHASE TWO

During the early 1900's dissatisfaction arose with the so-called "Homemade Charter" form of government. City council meetings were often lengthy, sometimes running into the early morning hours and annual elections were placing a burden on the election department.

In 1915, the state legislators adopted legislation creating standard forms of charters, including Plans A,B,C and D. In 1938 the legislature added Plan E to the list of standard city charters.

At the national election held on Tuesday, November 7, 1916, the question of whether to adopt a standard Plan A charter was on the ballot. The results of the election showed that the Plan A (a strong mayor, weak council) form of government was adopted by Quincy voters by a vote of 2,616 in favor and 2,025 in opposition.

In early January 1917, Joseph L. Whiton was sworn into office as Quincy's first Plan A mayor. Under the provisions of the new charter the mayor would be elected for a term of two years while a city council of nine members elected at large, would serve staggered terms of two years. The mayor would serve staggered terms of three years.

The "strong mayor-weak council" stemmed from the fact that under the Plan A Charter the mayor could appoint his department heads without confirmation by the city council. The Plan B Charter form of government requires the mayor to submit his nominations for the various city department heads for the council's ratification (approval). Hence, the Plan B charters are referred to as "the weak mayor-strong council" form of government.

The City of Quincy was governed under the Plan A Charter for 33 years. (1917-1949). Several amendments to this charter were adopted by the voters, among them:

An act passed in 1920 providing for Ward Council representatives.

An act passed in 1926 providing for preliminary (primary) elections.

An act passed in 1941 eliminating staggered election for council and school committee.

During this 33 year period seven individuals served as Quincy's mayor.

Joseph Whiton, 4 years; William Bradford, 2 years; Gustave Bates, 2 years; Perley Barbour, 2 years; Thomas McGrath, 6 years; Charles Ross, 9 years plus; and Thomas Burgin, approximately 8 years.

The average tenure of a mayor during this period was slightly under 5 years. Three of the incumbent mayors,

Bradford in 1922, Bates in 1924 and McGrath in 1932, were defeated for re-election.

PLAN E - CITY MANAGER FORM OF GOVERNMENT

Shortly after Gov. Leverett Saltonstall signed into law in 1938, legislation that provided for the city manager form of government (Plan E), a group of Quincy citizens obtained sufficient signatures to have the question of a charter change placed on the ballot in the November 1938 state election. The proposal was defeated by a wide margin (yes) 11,598, (no) 17,029.

The group once again obtained enough signatures to place the issue before the voters in the November 1940 presidential election. Once again the proposal went down to defeat (yes, 11,139; (no 19,519).

The issue did not come up during the war years (World War Two 1941-1945), however, Plan E adherents; made a third try in the city election held in 1947. This time they were successful; when the voters by a wide margin, (yes 17,187, no 7,745) votes, a majority of 9,442 votes, adopted the Plan E form of government, to take effect on January, 2, 1950.

Under Plan E, voters would elect seven individuals to serve on the city council as councillors at large. The council would elect, by a majority vote, one of their members to serve as mayor.

The mayor under Plan E would function much as the council presidents do under Plan A form of government. He or she would serve as chairperson of the school committee, however, the chief executive officer of the city would be elected by the city council and would hold the title of city manager.

PLAN E COMES TO QUINCY

On Monday, January 2, 1950, Quincy's first Plan E council was sworn into office. The seven member city council unanimously elected Councillor Thomas S. Burgin, a former Plan A mayor and the top vote-getter in the November 1949 election, as Quincy's first Plan E mayor. The council then unanimously elected William Deegan, the city manager in Superior, Wisconsin, city manager.

The city manager form of government was based on the premise that while politicians were good at winning elections they were not good at managing cities.

The city manager, not having to face the city's voters at election time, could concentrate on managing the affairs of the city government. In reality, a city manager had to satisfy and "keep happy" for members (a majority) of the city council to keep his or her job.

The Plan E city manager of government lasted eight (often stormy) years. Twice, Plan A adherents tried to place the question of a return to Plan A on the ballot and each time they fell short of the required number of signatures. Finally, in 1955 they succeeded in having the question of a charter change placed on the ballot in the November city election.

On election day, November 8, 1955, 65.2% of the voters went to the polls and returned Plan A to the city, effective January 6, 1958. 14,378 (52.8%) voted in favor while 12,851 (47.2%) voted against the return to Plan A.

On Monday, January 2, 1956, the city council organized for the last time under the Plan E City Manager (Cont'd On Page 10)

A Suprise Visit From Iraq

A Christmas Menz Family Won't Forget

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Christmas Eve was indeed magical this year for the Menz family who celebrated a Christmas Eve Mass that they will likely never forget.

The 5 o'clock Mass at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, Holy Trinity Parish, Merrymount, was nearly over when Deacon John Menz, Jr., spoke to the assembly.

Deacon Menz said that a very special visitor had arrived.

According to Doug Menz, the deacon then said, "The visitor had traveled further than Santa Claus" to be with them.

To nearly everyone's surprise, Deacon Menz then introduced U.S. Army Sgt. Matthew Menz, 26, who was home on an unexpected leave.

Sgt. Menz arrived in Boston at 2:30 p.m. Christmas Eve. He had traveled in planes for 15 hours from Baghdad where he is serving on active duty with the Yankee Division.

No one, not even Sgt. Menz himself, expected him to get holiday leave this year. He was granted the leave on Dec. 20 and called his cousin that Thursday before beginning his journey from Baghdad to Kuwait to Germany to Atlanta to Boston.

The sergeant's presence at the Mass surprised his father, Alan, his stepmother Denise, his sisters Judith and Michaeline, and his brother Tim, and nearly a dozen cousins, as well as the 500 parishioners who gave him a warm welcome.

Then, there was a very special treat for Sgt. Menz. He held the baby who was portraying the Christ-child in the church's Christmas pageant.

Baby Jesus was played by Celia Killion, the six-month-old daughter of Matthew's sister Judith and her husband Ted of Abington. Celia was the niece he had never seen or held as she was born while Sgt. Menz was serving in the Middle East.

"It was a pretty happy Mass," said Sgt. Menz.

Douglas Menz arranged the family gathering at Our Lady of Good Counsel by calling family members and inviting them to the five o'clock Mass to pray with family member Deacon Menz.

The reunion in Quincy was just the beginning for the young soldier who then drove 35 miles to Billerica where he also surprised his mother, Margaret Menz-Calabro and sister Kelly Nurjzynski.

"She was shocked," he said.

Sgt. Menz who expects to return to active duty in a few weeks said his holiday at home was a major surprise to him as well. He had planned to take his R and R leave in Costa Rica later this year but home is the only place to go at Christmas.

During his holiday visit, Sgt. Menz compared notes on the current combat with a family friend David Becker of Braintree, a veteran of World War II. Both agreed that there are so many differences.

In fact, Becker said that today's elusive enemy, the terrorist, makes this combat so difficult. "We had objectives. You guys are just sitting ducks."

"We were on the move all the time," said Becker who lost his right arm while serving as a corporal in the 78th Infantry Division.

"They knew who the enemy was," Sgt. Menz said but now, "They could be anyone. It's more of a guerilla (war)."

Sgt. Menz described a terrorist attack in an army mess hall when 21 soldiers were killed. The terrorist had posed as an Iraqi police officer when he entered the hall.

Then, the two soldiers, generations apart, compared other differences, particularly food.

"We didn't have any mess halls," said Becker who described K rations that soldiers packed in the linings of their field jacket and the socks they needed to fend off trench foot in the cold dampness of Germany.

In contrast, Sgt. Menz is serving in a desert where, "You don't have to worry about trench foot. The highest temperature I saw was 125 degrees."

"We have the best food in the country," said Sgt. Menz who described prime rib dinners for the soldiers on Sundays.

Sgt. Menz will be back on the front line within the month. It is quiet there, now, he said.

When he is discharged, he will live in Quincy and return to his job as a Weymouth firefighter.

Meanwhile, he's keeping up with hometown news through a gift subscription to The Quincy Sun.

Joann's Special Present

It's probably none of my business, guys, but was your wife happy with what you gave her for Christmas? Or was she a little disappointed? Maybe hoping for something special. Something unique. Something really different. Something she could hardly wait to tell her friends about.

Like maybe the gift Joann Sheets got from her husband, Jim, the former mayor: a 600-pound water buffalo.

Sometime before Christmas she said to him:

"You know what I would really like for Christmas?"

"What's that?" he asked.

"A water buffalo," she said.

"Oh, one of those skins you put water in?" he asked.

"No," she said. "I mean a real live water buffalo."

And, unfazed, he got her one.

But you won't see it grazing in the Sheets' Furnace Brook Parkway backyard.

And you won't see Joann with it on a leash at Black's Creek.

In fact, you won't see it anywhere in Quincy.

It's in India.

It seems Joann heard about Global Action, an inter-denominational, not-for-profit Christian ministry based in Colorado Springs, CO.

One of their projects is creating a self-sufficient Christian community to raise orphans in a family setting with long-term foster parents and siblings.

The goal is to provide a new world of opportunity for the children who otherwise would be confined to an orphanage.

Global Action, with the help of donations, is developing the community in a poor village in northern India.

They are building houses that would each be home to seven orphans and foster parents.

Many things are needed to make the community self-sufficient. Among them: water buffalos.

Jim purchased one through Global Action in Calcutta to be assigned to one of the houses in the new community.

"A water buffalo," notes Joann, "gives milk. So the children will have milk to drink and cheese made from milk to eat."

And to help feed them more, Joann and Jim later ordered 10 chickens — one for each of their grandchildren — for the new community.

So now the children will have milk, cheese and eggs.

Jim is running a family contest to name Joann's water buffalo.

"Global Action," Joann says, "goes to the poorest of the poor."

Dairy and poultry farms, a green house, shops, a medical clinic, sewing and welding machines and more water buffalos and chickens are needed to make the community self-sufficient.

Global Action is located at 7660 Goddard St., Suite 200, Colorado Springs, CO 80920-8236. Telephone: 888-725-3707.

"My water buffalo is one of the best gifts I have ever received," says Joann. "It made me feel so good this Christmas."

In appreciation, Joann created a special Christmas card for Jim with a picture of a water buffalo on the front and this note inside:

"Thanks, Jim, for a gift that will keep giving and giving for many years to come. I love it, and you, too."

Raymondi will be the new Public Works Commissioner is still flying around town. But don't believe it.

"No truth to it," says Raymondi.

The rumor may have taken wing when Raymondi endorsed Mayor-elect Tom Koch over Mayor William Phelan.

A Koch spokesman also says there's nothing to the rumor.

Be Prepared For Perils Of Winter

The December snow storm that struck just before Christmas served as a reminder that, in spite of global warming, a winter in New England can be perilous to life and limb.

"Now is the proper time for individuals and families to take the necessary steps to ensure their safety both on the roads and at home as we anticipate what will undoubtedly come during this winter season," said Don Boyce, executive director of the Mass Emergency Management Agency (MEMA).

With that in mind, MEMA issued list of items you should keep in your car in case of emergency during a winter storm:

Flashlight with extra batteries, charged cell phone, basic first aid kit, necessary medications, pocket knife, blankets or sleeping bags, extra clothes (include rain gear, mittens, socks), high-calorie, non-perishable foods (dried fruits, nuts, canned goods), container of water, shovel, road flares, sand for generating traction, tires chains or traction mats, basic tool kit (piers, wrench, screwdriver), tow rope, brightly colored cloth to utilize as a flag.

Make sure your tires have adequate tread and keep your gas tank at least half full. Check your windshield wiper fluid and keep a windshield scraper and small broom for ice and snow removal.

Plan long trips carefully, listening to your car radio or NOAA (National Oceanic and Atmospheric Agency) Weather Radio for the latest news, weather forecasts and road conditions. Travel during the day, and if possible try to take someone along with you.

MEMA recommends that the following items be kept around the house in case of emergency during a winter storm:

Flashlight and extra batteries, charged cell phone, portable radio or NOAA Weather Radio with extra batteries, basic first aid kit, essential prescription medicines, non-perishable food, non-electric can opener, water (one gallon per person/per day), baby items, pet food and supplies, extra blankets and sleeping bags, fire extinguisher.

Check the condition of your fireplace and chimney. Ensure that your smoke detectors and carbon monoxide (CO) detectors are working properly. Always follow the manufacturer's instructions for proper use, installation, maintenance and testing procedures.

"Every household should develop a Family Emergency Communication Plan in case family members are separated from one another during a storm," said Boyce. "That is a real possibility during the day if adults are at work and children are in

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1910 real photo postcard is a view of the Wollaston Tennis Club that was located on Everett Street between Beale and Granger Streets in Wollaston. This view is to the south: the two houses in the distance are on the opposite side of Beale Street; the white one on the left is on the corner of Beale and Everett. After nearly 100 years, it is seemingly unchanged. The clubhouse, whose porch is on the immediate right, is no longer standing, but was just next to the house, out-of-view, that is still standing on the corner of Granger and Everett Streets.

The flat land used for the courts was later developed into the 26-unit Everett Court Apartments and the four-story brick Marion Apartments that are here today. The tennis club had used this land for over 10 years before the apartments were built. Thanks to Tom Costello of Lincoln Avenue for helping to find the location of the tennis club. Plan A Returns As Della Chiesa Takes Oath As Mayor

By FRANK MCCAULEY

The Plan A form of government returned to Quincy after an eight-year absence as Amelio Della Chiesa was sworn into office.

Della Chiesa, who served as the ceremonial mayor under the Plan E-City Manager Charter for four years, delivered his inaugural address in the City Council Chamber.

The mayor called for, "a more equitable distribution of tax assessments throughout the city." He recommended that, "our Board of Assessors approach the New Year with a determined effort to bring about an equitable tax distribution of all properties in our city."

Mayor Della Chiesa's other recommendations included: More off-street parking, retention of Old Colony passenger service and encouragement of further industrial development in areas zoned for industry.

Praise For Councillor McNamee

I have been a resident of Squantum for over 25 years and know only so well about plowing streets, especially when living on a dead end street. "Out of sight, out of mind." I really do have to call almost every snowstorm so they do not forget my street.

I am also a subscriber to The Quincy Sun. The Dec. 20 issue I was reading an article, "Councillors Blast Response To Snow, Ice Storm." It was very nice for what Ms. Rachel Picard had done on this terrible day. I think I have one better.

I am a Disabled Vietnam Veteran, and have two hip replacements, and a lot of other things that we need not talk about. Councillor Brian McNamee knows about these conditions of mine. My hip had dislocated six times in the past from slipping on ice, or snow, including other events that one does on a daily basis. I am totally housebound if I am not plowed out, or sanded if there is ice. I had noticed in this issue of The Sun his name was not brought up and most likely the reason is because he did not complain.

After the first storm had passed, and we were not plowed out I had said: forgot us again. The second storm started up and I left a message for Brian and before I knew it the plow was here, but not alone. There was Brian right behind him. When the street was done, Brian stopped by and asked if it was done right and could I get out.

I really do not know of many people would have done what he did, never mind a councillor. This is a true hero.

Thank You Brian,
From A Marine

Concerned About Safety In Quincy Schools

Could the schools in Quincy survive a Columbine type of attack? In this writer's professional and personal opinion, the answer is absolutely no.

I am appalled at the lack of safety in our schools. Many of you may wonder how I could make such a statement like this especially since I do not work in the school system. Well, I will tell you that I presently have five certifications in Death Education and Grief counseling. I have spent the last two years writing a paper on teenagers and death. I have talked to a number of school officials across this country, including a large number of people involved in the Columbine shooting. I also spoke to people in the city that are involved in the safety of our children. Unfortunately no one wanted to hear what I had to say.

After speaking briefly to Mr. McPhee, the head of school security, the conversation left me feeling even more concerned. The superintendent, so far, has failed to return any of my phone calls. The Mayor was too busy running for re-election to return my calls. I was able to speak with a police officer and was provided with some information I was looking for. Unfortunately, the information provided to me, only served to confirm my opinion about the poor security that exists in our schools.

I was told that I could have four-minute and a half minutes to speak in front of the School Committee. However, four minutes in front of the school wouldn't even break the ice of the city's school safety. It was very interesting that at the last School Committee meeting several people were allowed to speak more than four minutes. If you don't believe me, just check out the re-run on cable channel 22. I could never provide all the information in this brief column. However the people of Quincy deserve to hear the facts. Every parent who sent their children to our schools should feel safety is a priority. Unfortunately it is not.

Just remember it took 41 minutes for the Columbine shooters to kill 11 students, one teacher, wounding a number of other students before killing themselves. As recently as three months ago, a student walked through the metal detector carrying a fully loaded weapon.

Hopefully the new mayor will take school security more seriously than Mayor Phelan and other city officials did. It is always easier to look the other way until something happens. Most people believe it could never happen. Tell that to the students and professors at Virginia Tech.

Lastly, it is my desire to present my information on school security to someone who cares about our children.

Volunteers Needed At Beechwood Center

Volunteers are needed for almost every program at Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St., according to Maryann Mahony who helps organize many of the center's events. The center serves all ages.

"We are a private, charitable organization and have a very small budget for our Senior Center. That's the bad news," said Mahony who added, "The good news is that wonderful caring folk help us as volunteers."

"Volunteers are always needed to help with inter-generational activities at Beechwood On The Bay," said Mahony. "In response to a recent article in The Quincy Sun, we have received wonderful inquiries and offers for volunteer time."

Brian's Chicken, Bacon Marsala

It was our annual Christmas Eve dinner at our granddaughter Jennifer and husband Michael's house. They are both excellent cooks. Their menu seemed endless from seafood casserole to grilled tenderloin roasts, - a spectacular buffet.

As I mingled with the guests, one was a chef named Brian who works on Cape Cod. We began talking about what else, food?

He told me about one of his own creations. Chicken marsala like you've never had it. Today's recipe can be expanded depending on how many you are feeding.

Brian's Chicken, Bacon, Brown Sugar Marsala

4 pieces of chicken breast (pounded until thin)
8 slices of bacon
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/4 cup marsala wine
2 cloves garlic

2-3 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms (cut)
1 cup chicken stock

First off, coat each bacon strip with brown sugar. Place the bacon strips on a cookie sheet in a 350 degree oven until the bacon is almost done and the sugar is caramelized (about 10 minutes). Remove and set aside.

While this is cooking, prepare the chicken marsala by flouring the chicken. In hot oil, saute the garlic add the mushrooms and the chicken and then the wine. Add the chicken stock, blending it all together. When the chicken is almost done, remove from the pan and set aside.

Now wrap each piece of chicken with the bacon. Place back in the pan and slowly cook spooning the mixture over the top. You don't have to turn the chicken. Cook until done and serve. It is so different and worth the extra effort.

Prescriptions, Supplements Topic At Beechwood Center

Beechwood, according to Beechwood's Senior Coordinator Maryann Mahony who said the center's Senior Advisory Council asked Seeley to speak.

Virginia "Gia" Waldron, of Quincy, celebrated her 100th birthday Monday in the company of more than four generations of family and friends who marked the centennial milestone at a celebration at the Sheraton Tara in Braintree.

Born Virginia Mary Waldron, she grew up in Jamaica Plain with her older brother Walter, now deceased. When Virginia turned 17 years old, her mother gave birth to another daughter, Muriel (Waldron) Sweeney, with whom Virginia currently resides and has lived with in Quincy for more than 40 years.

At an early age, Virginia developed an affinity for numbers, and subsequently became an accountant at a time when that position was considered "off-limits" to women. For more than 50 years, Virginia worked as an accountant for her brother. In fact, up until she reached age 97, Virginia did her own annual income taxes as well as those of several family members.

She also worked as a consultant to Gov. Paul Dever (D), alongside her brother Walter—former chairman of the MTA (now Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority)—and sister Muriel in the 1950s.

While she never married, Virginia has a large extended family, including seven nieces and nephews: the Rev. Walter J. Waldron, pastor of St. Patrick's Church in Roxbury; John "Jack" Waldron, former New York Titans defensive back, retired Boston Public School teacher and Dedham resident; Francis Waldron, resident of the Wrentham State School; Marie (Waldron) Fallon of Barrington, Ill.; Denise (Waldron) Parody of Sharon, Mass.; Jean Sweeney of Braintree, Mass.; and John Sweeney, who was tragically killed in a car accident in 1982.

Virginia is also loved by her eight great-nieces and nephews, two great grand-nieces and a great grand-nephew, all of whom reside in either the Boston area or the suburbs of Chicago, Ill. She has traveled to be there for many of their milestones, including First Communions, high school and college graduations, and weddings. Virginia has traveled extensively throughout the world, including Europe and South America, taking her great nieces along on many of these adventures.

Fondly revered as the "cornerstone" of the Waldron clan, Virginia has always exemplified a steadfast devotion to her family and the Roman Catholic Church. Throughout her lifetime, Virginia has extended her financial generosity to personal charities, the Church and her family. In return, she's been blessed with a zest for life, a hearty sense of humor and an incredibly sharp memory.

Virginia attributes her longevity to "Eating all the foods that I shouldn't and keeping up with my voracious appetite for reading."

Starting with the administration of Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa who served four two year terms (1958-1965), eight mayors have served during the past 50 years.

Mayor Della Chiesa was followed by James R. McIntyre (1966-1971), Walter J. Hannon (1972-1975), Joseph J. LaRaia (1976-1977), Arthur H. Tobin (1978-1981) Francis X. McCauley (1982-1989), James A. Sheets (1990-2001) and most recently, William J. Phelan (2002-2007).

Each of the above individuals made a positive impact on the city during their tenure in the mayor's office.

Mayor Della Chiesa was a pioneer in the privatization of certain city services. Della Chiesa put the collection of rubbish and garbage out on contract. Della Chiesa also championed the development of the off-street parking program in downtown Quincy.

Mayor James R. McIntyre used his dual role as mayor and state senator to bring the MBTA Red Line to Quincy on very favorable financial terms to the city. Mayor McIntyre's insistence that the MBTA locate a station in North Quincy led to the development of the State Street South Complex which today is one of Quincy's largest employers and taxpayers.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon who followed McIntyre to the mayor's office continued to work to bring additional business development to the Montclair area. His then controversial decision to combine the rubbish and garbage pickups back in 1974 has worked well and has saved the taxpayers millions of dollars of refuse removal costs over the years.

Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia, in his single term of office, used an "Anti-Recession" grant of several million dollars to start the planning for a much needed addition to Quincy City Hall. The project which has been discussed since the 1920's was completed during the administration of LaRaia's successor Mayor Tobin.

During the administration of Arthur H. Tobin, the construction of the city hall addition was completed and opened for business. The construction of Quincy Center Plaza, also known as the Stop & Shop Building was constructed. The ten story building brought about 1000 people to work in and patronize downtown Quincy stores, banks and restaurants. Mayor Tobin also filed legislation that placed both Quincy Hospital and Quincy College on self-sustaining Enterprise Accounts. Hospital Corporation of America was also hired to provide experienced professional management of the hospital.

During the eight year administration of Mayor Francis X. McCauley the long-awaited Burgin Parkway extension was completed. This period saw the construction of Presidents Place on the site of the former Bargain Center. The city obtained a state grant of $780,000 to provide infrastructure improvements at the site. The city, also in 1985 obtained a state grant of $1,040,000 to build a 124 space addition to the Ross Parking Garage. In addition, a $60.2 million dollar addition and renovation of the Quincy Hospital, now Quincy Medical Center, was completed.

Mayor James A. Sheets, who tenure as Plan A mayor (6 terms between January 1990 and January 2002,) was the longest in the city's history, instituted the "Cleaner, Greener Quincy" concept where the first Saturday in May each year hosts a city-wide clean-up where city workers and citizen volunteers complete an intensive refuse pickup throughout the city. This program has been continued by Mayor Phelan. Mayor Sheets also presided over the planning and construction of an addition to the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The eighth mayor to serve in the 50 year period is William J. Phelan. Mayor Phelan won public attention with his stand in opposition to the construction of the new Quincy High School on a toxic waste dump on Quincy Avenue. A new Quincy High School facility is rising on the site of the present building and the Quincy Vocational Technical School facility. A long-standing disagreement over funds owed by Quincy College to the city of Quincy was settled during Mayor Phelan's tenure. Mayor Phelan, as chairman of the school committee, instituted a full-day kindergarten program in the school

The Plan A "strong mayor" form of city government has worked well over the past 50 years. The mayor's ability to appoint his department heads and staff without confirmation by the council, along with his sole authority to initiate city spending, has given mayors strong powers.

However, with this broad authority comes accountability. History shows that when the public perceives that things are not going well in the city, it is the mayor, not the city council and school committee who are held accountable.

Hence, it is not surprising that of the eight mayors who have served during the past 50 years, four mayors (50% of the total) have failed re-election.

Walter Hannon (1975), Joseph J. LaRaia (1977), James A. Sheets (2001) and our present mayor William J. Phelan (2007), went down to defeat by aggressive challengers who strongly criticized the mayor's record in office.

Compare the mayors' re-election records with that of the city councillor's re-elections. Since 1961, only three incumbent councillors-at-large seeking re-election have been defeated, while at the ward level, only eight incumbents failed re-election. Incumbents running for re-election to the city council are winners between 93% and 94% of the time.

The 2007 election was one of the most interesting in many years. It featured an incumbent (Mayor William J. Phelan) who came to the mayor's office in 2001, on the strength of a 17 vote margin. Mayor Phelan was the first individual elected under Plan A without serving on the city council since Gustave Bates turned the trick in 1922.

Phelan's sole experience in elective office was a two year stint on the school committee. Mayor Phelan's opposition, Thomas P. Koch had lost races for ward six councillor in 1985, councillor at large in 1987, and county treasurer in 2002.

However, the mayor elect had almost 20 years experience serving in appointive offices under three mayors, Frank McCauley, Jim Sheets and Bill Phelan.

During his six years as mayor, Bill Phelan came across to the many people with whom he interacted as an arrogant, combative chief executive. He became something that every politician wants to avoid.

He became controversial, you either loved the mayor or disliked him intensely. Mayor Phelan had a creditable six year tenure as the city's chief executive but his accomplishments were submerged and his volatile personality emerged as a major issue in the campaign.

Mayor-elect Tom Koch joins a number of other Quincy mayors who had lost prior elections before reaching the mayor's office. Thomas J. McGrath, mayor of Quincy 1927-1932, lost his first four attempts to win a city council seat before he finally won election to the council in 1914. McGrath, who left school after completing the 8th grade, was the first individual to serve three two year terms as Plan A mayor.

Amelio Della Chiesa also lost his first three attempts to win a councillor at large seat before being elected ward three councillor in 1943. Della Chiesa went on to win a total of 19 elections before retiring from public life in January, 1969.

Were mistakes made by our elected officials over the years? You bet! As the saying goes, that's why they put erasers on pencils. Generally speaking, however, the city has been well-governed over the years.

I've known Mayor-elect Tom Koch over the years, in fact, I appointed him to his first position in city government, that of Executive Director of the Council on Aging. In recent years he has skillfully managed one of the city's largest departments, that of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

I am confident that Tom will do an equally good job as our city's mayor. I wish him well.

tematic and financially prudent manner. The purchase of the MUNIS financial software system and training of every single city employee on the new system allowed department managers to better implement budgets and auditors to better track and control our financial dealings. The acquisition of the Vision appraisal system finally ensured equity in our property assessments and fair and balanced taxation throughout the city.

And now we sit on the cusp of a potential economic boom for our city. The future of our city rests heavily on the success of our efforts to revitalize our downtown. Quincy is a densely settled city that must rely on locations such as our downtown, the Crown Colony Office Park, and the Fore River Shipyard property for future development. Our taxpayers need these properties to reach their development potential to benefit from the potential tax revenues that could be generated from all three sites.

Our downtown is primed for major investment. Re-zoning the downtown let investors know we are serious about our future. The new Quincy Center Concourse will provide vital transportation infrastructure to spur investment. The adoption of the District Improvement Financing Plan and Urban Renewal Plan provide a funding mechanism to turn plans into reality. We have laid the groundwork for the much-anticipated redevelopment of Downtown Quincy.

And a new $20 million ramp project at Crown Colony will encourage investment and alleviate traffic congestion in South Quincy. A new office building spells relief for our residential taxpayers and I strongly hope that this ramp project results in significant private investment throughout the adjacent area.

But if I am remembered for only one thing, I would hope it to be the quality of the Quincy Public Schools. There is nothing more central to the quality of a community than the quality of its school system. It drives everything else in a community and we have made tremendous strides in the Quincy Public Schools.

I am proud of what the School Committee, administration, and I have been able to accomplish. The implementation of all-day kindergarten will create lasting improvements in the education of all our young people. We are seeing our smallest class-sizes in years. We have an early intervention literacy program that is touted as a model by the State's Department of Education.

I am proud that we are building a new Quincy High School in the right location, our downtown. We are building the school in a place accessible to children from Quincy Point, South Quincy, Quincy Center, Merrymount, Adams Shore, Germantown, and Hough's Neck. Most importantly, we are not building the new school on the dumpsite from the Fore River Shipyard. I want to thank all of the parents and students that joined with me in the historic fight to block that horrendous plan.

As I leave office, I hope to leave behind a better quality of life and stronger local environment. I am proud to have overseen the largest open space acquisition and park renovation effort in City history, with revenue raised from the city's hotel/motel tax and the Community Preservation Fund. In the past six years we have acquired the bird sanctuary at Lot 23, the Bayswater Boatyard in Hough's Neck, the Cobblestone property at 271 Sea Street, the Joyce property in West Quincy, the Avalon property in Quincy Point and the Souther Tide Mill property along Town River. These properties will protect our local environment, prevent additional development, and provide our residents with a place to put the bustle and jar of the city far away.

Our efforts to renovate

our park system have led to a new FieldTurf surface at Veterans' Stadium, the city's first female sports complex at Mitchell/McCoy Field, the creation of a new soccer field in Germantown, and improvements to all of our neighborhood beaches. New sand and benches were added to ten municipal beaches for the first time in decades. I also added street-tree planting in the municipal budget for the first time in memory.

Quincy is the first community to take advantage of new State law and implement a new energy savings initiative at more than 40 municipal buildings. Our energy efficiency efforts are the equivalent of planting 825 acres of new trees or removing 440 cars from the road. Our new Quincy High School will be a "green" building and we have adopted procurement policies that are environmentally friendly.

In our neighborhoods we have made significant improvements including the construction of a beautiful, new Germantown Neighborhood Center at the site of the former Saint Boniface Church. We have built a new neighborhood center in North Quincy and made improvement to the Fore River Clubhouse in Quincy Point.

I have created the position of Code Enforcement Officer to address quality of life issues in our neighborhoods and the Illegal Rooming House Task Force has done a great job tackling this detrimental and dangerous issue.

In the area of public safety, we have improved dramatically since the tragic events of 9/11. Our police, fire, health and emergency management personnel are better trained and better equipped than anytime in history.

We have added five new fire engines and made repairs to all of our fire stations. We have new interoperable radios for all police and fire personnel and all first-responders have been uniformly trained in national incident management and response techniques.

I take pride in the diversity of the staff that I have hired. The Phelan administration has more women in leadership positions than any administration in City history. I hired Asian-language specific and gender-specific classes for our police department to ensure better representation. We have added multi-lingual personnel in key departments that interface with our diverse population.

More than anything else, I leave office with many new friends and an appreciation for the spirit that embodies our great city. I have seen how many volunteers and community-spirited people add to our city's greatness. Whether it is in youth sports, meals programs, Cleaner-Greener Quincy, relief for Hurricane Katrina victims in Louisiana, elderly programs, city events, or boards and commissions, the residents of our great city have repeatedly stepped-up in the interest of helping others.

That charity, that community spirit exhibited by thousands of people is what I will remember most from my time in office. For even with all of Quincy's notable history and our beautiful natural resources, Quincy's greatness lies within the spirit of the people that call this wonderful city their home.

I wish Tom Koch and his administration the best of luck in guiding our great city.

Thank you for the privilege of serving as your mayor. I wish you all a healthy, happy, prosperous New Year.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Dec. 22, at approximately 10:30 a.m., Officers John Leuchte and Brian Flaherty were dispatched to the South Shore Cooperative Bank at 30 Franklin St. for a male party trying to pass a bad check.

Upon arrival, the officers were directed to the young male who was attempting to cash a check from his mother for $450. The suspect stated he had cashed checks there in the past and didn't understand what the problem was.

As Officer Flaherty ran the suspect through dispatch for warrants, Officer Leuchte interviewed the bank manager, who stated it was true that the suspect had cashed checks in the past few months from his mother's account.

She said conditions changed when the suspect's mother came into the bank two days ago to discuss how she could prevent her son from taking money out of her account. She ended up closing all her current accounts and reopening new ones. The bank manager said the suspect's mother urged them to call the police the next time her son tried to cash a check.

Officer Leuchte also spoke with the bank teller who was familiar with the victim's account. She stated the suspect has been coming in for months cashing checks from his mother's account for various amounts, but today the signature on the check did not match his mother's signature, which is on file in the bank's computer. She stated he would only come to her to cash the checks, which actually turned out to be part of his downfall.

The bank teller said the victim recently noticed her checks were missing and knew who was taking them. To make matters worse, the teller said the suspect and his sister were both cashing checks from their mother's account!

Officer Flaherty placed the suspect under arrest after learning there was an active default warrant. At this point, Officer Leuchte informed the suspect that he was also being charged with uttering a forged document and forgery of the check. The suspect, a 22-year-old Weymouth resident, was pat frisked for weapons, placed into handcuffs and transported to the Quincy Police Station.

For court purposes, a bank photo of the suspect in the bank and the check were placed into evidence.

Nice Work!

In this case, the mother/victim took swift and decisive action against her son to prevent further victimization. She went the additional step of instructing the bank to contact the police if he attempted to steal from his mother again. Although family members stealing from each other is not an uncommon event in police work, a parent taking such strong action against her son is unusual—but very effective.

The mother's actions acted as a deterrent and a preventive measure. I'm sure the son will think twice before trying to scam his own mother and I'm confident that the mother has a completely different relationship (if any) with her son.

TELEMARKETING FUNDRAISERS: Although I recommend people hang up on telemarketing solicitations, on occasion, I hear from someone who tells me that they were convinced the organization soliciting money was doing good work and they supported their efforts.

In this case, I urge donors not give credit card information over the telephone or allow a stranger to come to their home and pick up a check or cash donation. Even though the solicitors may be convincing, there is no guarantee the monies will go to the cause, or how much will go to the cause.

A better way would be to say "no thanks," then find out the address of the charity and send the donation directly, so that the charity gets the full amount, not the telemarketers who often take anywhere from 25% to 85% as administrative costs.

New Year's Resolutions

At a loss for some New Year's resolutions this year?

Here's a list to choose from; feel free to use any one of these fire prevention suggestions. Overall, what better way to start the New Year, considering behavioral changes for a safer home lifestyle?

- I won't leave cooking unattended, and if I must for a moment leave the kitchen, I'll bring along evidence of my efforts, a potholder as a reminder.

- I won't casually store or place combustibles onto the stovetop.

- When I am using candles, I won't do so leaving them unattended in a room.

- When I smoke, I won't do so lying on a couch or mattress.

- I will test my smoke detectors monthly, and change the batteries when I change the clocks.

- I will test my CO detector monthly and make certain the batteries are changed as well.

- I will clean the lint trap in the clothes dryer before or after each use.

- I will not leave the house with the clothes dryer left on.

- If an electrical plug, cord or appliance is faulty, I will see this as an indication that the same should be repaired or replaced before any further use.

- I will maintain a five-foot clearance between my heating system and stored combustibles.

- I will occasionally remind all family members of our home emergency evacuation plan and practice it if need be.

Feel free to start the New Year with any of these safety resolutions, while my hope in doing so; they become second nature and habit for you.

Have a great year, while I plan to be here to continue reminding you to have a safe one as well. I hope that my coaxing, pestering and educating will help you maintain a safe home environment for all. Meanwhile, I appreciate your efforts.

As always, it is my pleasure to serve. Be safe.

TREATING RHEUMATOID ARTHRITIS IN THE FOOT

Rheumatoid arthritis (RA) is a systemic disease that affects multiple joints in the body. If you have RA, it's likely that you have felt it in your feet or ankles, as 90% of RA patients do. The toes and front of the feet are usually the first parts of the feet to have symptoms, but the pain soon spreads to the back of the foot and the ankle. You can treat the pain with over-the-counter pain relievers. If you still feel pain, your podiatrist may prescribe medication, or even inject steroids into the affected joints. Because people with RA in the feet and ankles are susceptible to hammertoes, be sure to wear a shoe with an extra deep toe box.

We're concerned about all aspects of your health, especially in the health of your feet. When your feet have painful joints, are cramping or uncomfortable, or are otherwise trying to tell you something, don't hesitate to call us. Our goal is provide you with a comprehensive diagnosis and treatment plan so that you are out of pain and back on your feet in as short amount of time as possible. For an appointment at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, please call us at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

MEMA recommends:

- Ask an out-of-state relative or friend to serve as family contact. After a disaster it is often easier to call long distance than across town. Calling outside the area will be easier than calling into a disaster area.

- Make sure everyone knows the name, address and telephone number of the contact person.

- Sometimes an emergency can impact your whole neighborhood or small section of town. Decide on an alternate meeting area for family members.

- Be familiar with the Emergency Plan at your children's school and your place of business.

Water-Stained Ceiling

Q. The ceiling in my hallway is showing water stains in two places. Why are these stains appearing there, well below the roof? — Boyd L., Springfield, Mass.

A. Detecting the source of the leak may take a little work, but if there is no sign of water leaking into the attic, the next likely explanation is that a pipe is leaking near or above the hallway ceiling.

If you cannot access the pipe run in that area to check it, you'll need to contact a plumber, who may have to break through a wall (or even the ceiling itself) to repair the leak. However, it's much better to find and solve the problem as fast as possible, rather than risk thousands of dollars in water damage down the road.

Make sure the plumber is licensed in your state and bonded, and get all estimates in writing — insist that you approve all work before it's performed. Invasive repairs — like removing wallboard to get to the pipes behind it — should be made to match as closely as possible to the original wall.

Q. In one of your columns you recommended a product called "Lemi-Shine" that would clean hard water stains from windows. I looked for it at my local Wal-Mart, but they do not carry it. I don't have access to a computer so I can't go to its Web site. Would you have a mailing address for them instead? Thank you. — Joan K., Brick, N.J.

A. The manufacturer of Lemi-Shine is Envirocon Technologies, Inc. You can write to the company at the following address: Envirocon Technologies, Inc., P.O. Box 4444 Midland, TX 79704. You can also call 888-336-2582.

Protecting Your Family

Change Your Clocks Change Your Battery

(NAPS) — Thousands of homes and perhaps as many lives have been saved by one simple idea.

It connects two unrelated activities-changing clocks from Daylight Savings Time and changing the batteries in home safety devices. You should change the batteries on important safety alarms such as smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors almost anytime, but in fact, many don't. It's a sad fact that approximately 80 percent of fatal home fire victims are children killed in homes without working smoke alarms. Hardly anyone neglects to change the clocks, so the International Association of Fire Chiefs (IAFC) and Energizer batteries joined forces 20 years ago to urge Americans through the Change Your Clock Change Your Battery program to use the "extra hour" to change their smoke and carbon monoxide detector batteries.

In 2007, the day to set your clocks back and change the batteries in your smoke detector is November 4.

"We have no way of knowing exactly how many lives and homes have been saved as a result," said Chief Steven Westermann, president of the IAFC. "What we do know is that each year more Americans are replacing their batteries before they wear out and that makes each alarm safer."

You can cut the odds of dying in a home fire nearly in half by adopting this simple habit. Most American homes-96 percent in fact-have smoke alarms. But approximately 19 percent of them have at least one non-working smoke alarm, mostly due to worn out or missing batteries. The IAFC estimates that over 25 million homes are at risk.

The most common reasons home smoke alarms do not function properly are:

- Batteries are not replaced in a timely fashion.
- Batteries are removed due to unwanted activation from situations such as cooking fumes.
- Batteries are removed due to the "chirping sound," which actually indicates the battery needs to be replaced.
- Alarms and detectors are not cleaned regularly.
- Alarm is aged and may contain outdated parts or technology.

"Many people mistakenly believe they will either see the flames or smell the smoke when a fire breaks out," Chief Westermann said. "But most fire fatalities happen while families are asleep. Smoke by itself doesn't provide a wake-up call, but a working smoke alarm does." The same holds true with carbon monoxide since it is a colorless, odorless gas.

In addition, November can bring severe weather, a time when power outages are more frequent. Avoid using candles, which are often the cause of home fires. Use flashlights instead. Daylight Saving Time is a good time to check those batteries, as well as the batteries in carbon monoxide detectors, suggest the experts at Energizer.

The IAFC is a nonprofit association representing nearly 13,000 chief fire officials worldwide. Its members are the world's leading experts in fire fighting, emergency medical services, terrorism response, hazardous materials spills, natural disasters, search and rescue and public safety legislation.

You can learn more about fire safety online at www.iafc.org and www.energizer.com.

Winter Deck 'Survival' Tips

(NAPS) — With another winter just around the corner, it's time to start thinking about cleaning, restoring and protecting your deck so it survives the onslaught of ice, snow, sleet and moisture that can damage it during the months ahead. Here are some deck "survival" tips from the experts at Wolman Wood Care Products:

Step 1: Clean your deck to remove the dirt, mildew and food stains that accumulated over the spring and summer months. Use a specially formulated deck cleaner like Wolman DeckBrite, which features an oxygenated bleach formula that removes grayed wood surfaces, ground-in dirt and the toughest stains. It restores wood to its natural, like new look without bleaching or degrading its structure, such as chlorine bleach solutions can. It even removes invisible coating barriers, like excess wax, mill glaze and old, water-repellent residue.

On previously stained wood, strip any faded, deteriorated or unwanted colored coating with a product like Wolman DeckStrip ASR Acrylic Stain Remover. It removes oil and water-based solid, semi-transparent and clear finishes and even tough-to-remove 100 percent acrylic stains and prepares wood for a new finish or stain. It contains special wetting agents and thickeners that cling to all wood surfaces—even vertical surfaces—so it's great for fences, gazebos, play sets and other outdoor wood surfaces!

Step 2: After the wood is restored and your deck is rid of surface barriers or unwanted finishes, it is important to seal it with a protective water-repellent finish and preservative. Water repellents stop rain, sleet, snow and ice from penetrating the wood surface, which can cause cracking, splitting and warping. Select a product like Wolman F&P Finish and Preservative, which offers a guarantee on water-repellent longevity so you won't have to apply a new coat every year. It also contains an EPA-registered preservative that prevents surface mold and mildew growth, rot and decay.

REALTORS FROM THE Jack Conway Co. presented a check as part of the more than $37,000 raised in total for Habitat for Humanity through Dancing with the Realtors. Realtors Help Raise $37,000 For Habitat For Humanity

The money raised from the first-ever PASS (Plymouth and South Shore Association of Realtors) Dancing with the Realtors competition was presented recently to the South Shore and Greater Plymouth chapters of the Habitat for Humanity. Realtors from the Jack Conway Co. presented a check as part of the more than $37,000 raised in total for Habitat for Humanity. The 22 Realtors who competed in the contest, all invested months of their time and much of their money into preparing for their performance. Many spent more than $1,000 on private and group dancing lessons, which were discounted for PASS through two local studios: Fred Astaire in Hanover, and DanceSport Boston in Weymouth.

Conway-Quincy top agent Jennifer Kern not only helped raise money, but also finished sixth in her division and qualified for the finals of the event at the Park Plaza Hotel in February. "It was so much fun and we were able to do something to help," Kern said. "And I'm really excited to keep going and learning even more."

Quincy Community Action Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will hold a free first-time homebuyer workshop at the Tufts Library, located at 46 Broad St., Weymouth in February. Workshop dates are: Saturday, Feb. 2 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 16 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Participants must attend both sessions in order to receive a certificate of attendance.

The sessions are open to everyone regardless of income, credit ratings, or downpayment availability. Workshop speakers are professionals representing different real estate fields. Participants will receive a workbook, which contains references that pertain to home buying.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with South Shore Savings Bank, will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, Jan. 28 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 2 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop, open to all Massachusetts residents regardless of income, will be held at South Shore Savings Bank, 1584 Main St., Weymouth.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate. All potential first-time homebuyers are encouraged to attend the educational workshop. At the workshop, participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender. Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals. Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs. There is a $15 fee per person. To register, or for more information, call (617) 770-2227 ext. 29.

The Very Best Tips of 2007

- "After the rush of the holidays, our family has a little tradition of its own. We reserve one night to watch all our home movies from the season. We usually end up watching some of the other years' too. And our son has become a whiz at putting together slideshows on DVD of digital pictures, so we look forward to the first of many photo slideshows to add to the night's entertainment." —Y.K. in Alabama
- "I usually get plastic bags when grocery shopping, but I have the bagger package all frozen foods together in a paper bag. The bag is easily identifiable so it can be taken inside and put away first." —A.D. in Washington
- "To keep the fabric belts on my daughters' shorts and pants in place, I stitched the center of the belt to the back loop of the garment. The bow never pulls to one side, or falls off! It's great for keeping them with the right

- pair of pants or shorts." —O.S. in Wisconsin
 - "If you have small children, you might want to keep a red washcloth in your first-aid kit. Sometimes, the sight of blood can upset a child out of proportion with the injury. If you use a red washcloth, blood won't show and you can spend your time calming the hurt not the emotion." —Schoo nurse in Arizona
 - "I hang two mesh laundry bags from the back of the bathroom door. Bras and undergarments go into one socks in the other. I toss them in the wash just as they are, and no sorting is required after they are done." —D.C. in Mississippi

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Exercising After Childbirth

The first several weeks after childbirth can be a hectic time of adjustment. Finding time to begin or resume an exercise program can become challenging, but the benefits — increased energy, stress-relief and aiding in the return to your pre-pregnancy body type — make the effort worthwhile.

Once your physician has given you the go-ahead, keep these post-pregnancy tips in mind when starting or re-starting your exercise program.

- Get back in sync with your body. Over the past nine months, many changes have occurred in your body weight, body fat and center of gravity. As you begin to return to your pre-pregnancy condition, it is important to take your time and re-educate your muscles, joints and cardiovascular system.

- If you followed an exercise regimen before and during pregnancy (after your physician's clearance), continue your exercise program at the same level as right before you gave birth. Slowly progress to your pre-pregnancy exercise routine. Let your body be your guide. Allow your body to get reacquainted with the increase in intensity. (If you did not have an exercise routine before or during pregnancy, consult your physician about an appropriate fitness regimen.)

- Don't exercise to exhaustion. Throw the phrase "No pain, no gain" out the window. Pace yourself and start off slowly. You may find walking with your baby for 20 minutes is all you can do for now. That's OK. Gradually increase your intensity level. The next step may be to try walking for 15 minutes twice a day. At the end of the day you'll have completed 30 minutes of aerobic exercise, and that's a great start.

- Wear supportive clothing. Uncomfortable workout clothes can discourage you from completing your exercise routine. If you are lactating, it may be necessary to wear a supportive bra — or possibly two. The changes to your breasts may make ordinary exercises more difficult. Take the time to find comfortable and supportive workout attire that works for you.

Have fun and remember to give your body time to respond and change. Allow your exercise program to enhance the happiness of you and your new baby.

sity and was previously the executive director of Ambulatory Operations at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

Shaking The Salt From Your Diet

(NAPS) — Americans say they've taken news about sodium to heart. But have they taken steps to protect their health?

More than 90 percent of people recently surveyed identified high blood pressure as one of the biggest health problems caused by high sodium intake. However, only a quarter of those surveyed were concerned about the level of sodium in their diets.

Their lack of concern could lead to a host of health problems, as high sodium intake has been linked to increased risk for heart disease, high blood pressure and stroke.

A Growing Problem

According to the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, Americans consume 3,375 milligrams of sodium daily, which is 40 percent more than the recommended daily allowance called for by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

Smart Solutions

The good news is that there are plenty of ways to reduce the sodium in your diet without cutting out taste or favorite foods.

"The most common problem I hear about many lower-sodium snacks is they simply do not taste as great as their full-sodium counterparts, but sometimes, due to health concerns, consumers might not have any other option," says

Carolyn O'Neil, registered dietitian.

Another way to reduce the amount of sodium you eat is to replace table salt with pepper, lemon or even garlic powder. Just a dash of these low-sodium seasonings adds a distinct flair to foods, without putting your health at risk.

Finally, eat fresh fruit and vegetables and read the labels on canned foods. While there are lower-sodium varieties, canned foods tend to be high in sodium—even canned vegetables.

For more low-sodium snack ideas, visit www.orville.com.

for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

JOINT EFFORT

The temporomandibular joints (TMJ) connect the lower jaw to the skull (temporal bone) under each ear. These joints are among the most complex in the body. As the mouth opens, the knob-like ends (condyles) of the mandible first rotate, then slide forward along the curving lower edges of the temporal bones. The motion of the joints is controlled by the chewing muscles. These joints are also greatly affected by the teeth, which largely determine the relationship of the jaws when the mouth is closed. TMJ disorder produces symptoms ranging from headaches to clicking sounds when the jaw is opened and closed. Because malocclusion (bad bite) may be a contributing factor to TMJ syndrome, the dentist may help to remedy it.

It's our goal, through therapy, to get your jaws functioning properly so that you can chew, eat and speak without discomfort. Imagine the difference in how you'll look and feel afterwards! Visit us for a thorough TMJ exam and return to a healthier, vital you. When was the last time you had a comprehensive dental examination? We make every effort to see you promptly and listen to your concerns and needs. We will let you know about new procedures and technologies and what they can do for you. For superior dental care, call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Psychological stress also appears to underlie many TMJ disorders.

Quincy Defeats Nauset, Foxboro

By SEAN BRENNAN

The holiday vacation week brought with it two last second victories for the Quincy High School girls' basketball team.

The Presidents (3-1, 1-0 in ACL play) started their Christmas/New Year's vacation with a pulsating 46-44 victory over league rival Nauset High School on Dec. 21 and, then continued their last second heroics in a 38-37 win over Foxboro HS in the first round of the Dick's Sporting Goods Holiday Classic at Dedham High School on Dec. 27 (Quincy played in the championship game on Dec. 28 but The Sun had an early deadline because of the New Year holiday.)

The game against Foxboro was a tight-knit affair through the first three-quarters. The Presidents and Warriors were tied heading into the fourth and final period. After Quincy built a six-point lead to start the fourth quarter, Foxboro stormed back to cut the deficit to one with less than thirty seconds remaining.

Down by just one point, and in possession of the ball with twelve seconds remaining, the Warriors attempted to run the shot clock down for the final shot at the buzzer. But senior captain Marybeth Torpey would have none of that.

Torpey (11 points for the game) stole a pass that was destined for the wing with four seconds left in regulation, ending Foxboro's comeback, and securing the Presidents a spot in the tournament's championship game against host Dedham HS.

"We were down at the half, but it was a close game all the way through," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch. "The team played a very good defensive game. We didn't shoot the ball all that well, but we did put together a nice run at the end with Tobin and Torpey both hitting three pointers to put us up six points."

"Marybeth just made a great defensive play at the end and we hung on to win. That has been the way things have gone in all of our games so far. But with the large number of seniors that we have on the roster and our experience, we have been able to win three out of four games. We are doing real well in these types of games."

Torpey's co-captain, senior Meagan Tobin, led the way offensively for Quincy. Tobin finished the game with a team-high 17 points. Fellow senior Kathryn Carella scored seven points for the victors.

In their Atlantic Coast League season opener against Nauset HS, it was Tobin who produced the magic scoring touch for the Presidents.

With Quincy down 44-43 after Nauset hit one-of-two free throws to take the lead, and the seconds ticking off the game clock, sophomore forward Colleen Tobin, Meagan's sister, took an outlet pass and pushed the ball over half-court. She found her sister at the top of the key, and Meagan Tobin drilled a three-point basket at the buzzer, with two defenders in her face, to give the Presidents a big league win, 46-44.

"It was pretty wild," said

Bretsch. "We watched something we thought we had in hand evaporate in five seconds, and then for her (Tobin) to hit that three was just high drama."

Meagan Tobin led all scorers with a game high 27 points, none bigger than the final three. Senior captain Marybeth Torpey added 11 points for Quincy. Together, Tobin and Torpey accounted for 38 of their team's 46 points.

Senior forward Kathryn Carella contributed with some productive minutes and big plays down the stretch.

The Presidents got back into their Atlantic Coast League schedule yesterday (Wed.) against Plymouth North HS, and they are scheduled to travel to Plymouth South HS this Friday (Jan. 4).

The team follows these two ACL away games with three consecutive league home games beginning Jan. 8 against Whitman-Hanson HS (6:30 p.m., East Gym). The will play Dennis-Yarmouth HS on Jan. 10 and against Sandwich HS on Jan. 15.

North Quincy Wins First Over Falmouth

The North Quincy Red Raiders, off to an 0-3 start this year as they look to repeat as Atlantic Coast League North champions, finally got off the snide and earned their first victory of the season on Dec. 21 against Falmouth High School, 56-43.

The Raiders (1-4, 1-1 in ACL play) were led to victory in this league game by senior forward Rebecca Goreham. Goreham posted 12 points and 15 rebounds as she continues her assault on the school rebounding record (which she broke last year).

Senior forward Kasey O'Connell and junior forward Catherine O'Connell each scored ten points each as the Raiders earned that elusive first victory of the winter.

North Quincy played in the Notre Dame Academy Holiday Tournament last week (Dec. 28-29, results to follow in next week's Quincy Sun), and played last night (Jan. 2) against ACL foe Marshfield HS.

The team is scheduled to host Nauset HS in an ACL game this Friday night at 6:30 p.m. in the NQHS Gymnasium, and follows that home game with an away game versus Brockton HS on Jan. 6.

The team will play at home on Jan. 8 against Plymouth North HS (6:30 p.m.). back with 1:32 remaining in the contest. Unfortunately, the Presidents could not hold on and lost 59-58 at home.

Scott led all Quincy scorers with 20 points (including a tying basket late in the game). Parry contributed 11 points, with six of those points coming on a pair of late three-pointers, and Boucicaud added seven points and a team-high ten rebounds.

Quincy played last night (Wed.) at home versus Plymouth North HS in an ACL showdown, and is scheduled to host ACL rival Plymouth South HS this Friday (Jan. 4) at 6:30 p.m.

The Presidents have a tough league road game against Whitman-Hanson HS Tuesday (Jan. 8) at 6:30 p.m.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the QRD at 617-376-1394.

Presidents Split Silver-Lake Series

The Quincy Presidents, after splitting a home-and-away series with Silver Lake High School to begin the season, went 1-1 over the school vacation week.

Quincy (2-2, 0-1 in ACL play) played its Atlantic Coast League opener on Dec. 21 against Nauset HS, and lost a heartbreaker 59-58. The team rebounded to that loss with a 67-46 non-league beat down of Randolph HS on Dec. 27 at QHS' East Gym.

The Presidents played

Randolph in a rematch on Dec. 29. (The Sun had an early deadline because of the New Year's holiday.)

Against the Randolph Bulldogs, junior John Parry scored 13 of his 17 points after halftime to help the Presidents build on the six-point lead they held at the break. Parry connected twice from three-point range in the fourth quarter to put Randolph away.

his early season scoring tear with 18 points to lead all President scorers, and forward Andy Boucicaud collected 12 rebounds for the winners.

The win over Randolph helped ease the pain of the team's loss to ACL rival Nauset HS on Dec. 21.

With two minutes to go in the third quarter, Quincy trailed by twenty points against Nauset before coming all the way back to take the lead on a Teddy Francis put-

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It's a good time for reunions with those very special people from your past. You could be pleasantly surprised by what comes to light during one of these get-togethers.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The new year gets off to an encouraging start for the Bold Bovine who takes that demanding workplace challenge by the horns and steers it in the right direction.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The clever Gemini will be quick to spot the telltale signs of workplace changes that could open up new opportunities for the right person. (And that's you, isn't it?)

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The Moon Child's post-holiday letdown soon lifts as you begin to get back into your comfortable routine. Someone from your past extends a surprise bid to reconnect.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You've been the ultimate social Lion over the holidays. Now it's time to relax and recharge your energy so you can be at your best when you pounce on that new project.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A relationship could be moving in a direction you might not want to follow. Step back for a better overview of the situation. You might be surprised at what you see.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Emotions rule at the start of the week, affecting your perception about a decision. Best advice: Avoid commitments until that good Libran sense kicks back in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A longtime friendship could take a romantic turn early in the new year. While this pleases your passionate side, your logical self might want to go slow.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Someone might make a surprising disclosure about a trusted friend or workplace colleague. Stay cool and reserve judgment until you get more facts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might think you've found what you've been looking for. But appearances can be deceiving. Don't act on your discovery until you know more about it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're no doubt anxious for that confusing situation to be cleared up. But don't press for a quick resolution or you might overlook some vital facts.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Now that your holiday distractions are easing, you need to apply yourself to getting those unfinished tasks done so you can begin a new project with a clean slate.

BORN THIS WEEK: People respect both your wisdom and your deep sense of loyalty and compassion.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Everybody knows "You can't take it with you." And that is wise to provide ahead for a constructive way to leave your property. There a number of reasons why a valid and up-to-date Wills important to you and your loved ones.

The advantages of a Will are extensive. The Will insures that your wishes will be known and determines to whom, how and when your property should be distributed. To make out a Will with a lawyer's assistance assures that you - and not your State - will direct the distribution of your estate.

"Do-it-yourself" Wills - either oral or handwritten - can be dangerous. Self-drawn wills are responsible for considerable litigation and in some States are not considered legal. A self-drawn Will frequently produces results far different than those originally intended by the testator or maker.

If you have no Will, now is a good time to make one. If you have a Will, now is a good time to have it reviewed in light of current circumstances....

Newly inaugurated Mayor Tom Koch laid out his vision of a new Quincy that will feature a renewed fight on drug abuse, new taxable development outside the neighborhoods and a "more open, responsive and... efficient" government.

"To all of you," he said, "know my door is always open."

Throughout his inaugural address Monday in the ballroom of the Marriott Hotel, he repeatedly called on the people of Quincy to get involved alongside him, quoting John F. Kennedy: "Today, every citizen, regardless of his interest in politics, holds office."

Koch said he recognized concerns about "overdevelopment in our neighbor-

The baby boomer's kids are the future for Quincy, according to new City Council President Jay Davis.

At Monday's inauguration ceremonies, Davis described the dozens of assets that young families and professionals will find in the City of Presidents.

"These children of baby-boomers desire to be closer to work and recreation. And like us, they chose to live in Quincy," Davis said. "We need to be proactive with this group, promoting events and encouraging businesses that serve this demographic."

"We need to visit Davis Square in Somerville, Porter Square in Cambridge and Waltham Center to see what

HUD Has Plan To Help Families Keep Homes

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) has announced the receipt of a $40,000 federal grant to help families and individuals at risk to find or keep their homes.

Better still, Taylor Caswell, regional director of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), discussed a four-month-old program, called "FHASecure," that may help homeowners who are facing foreclosure.

"FHASecure is designed for people who are good borrowers, but were steered into high cost loans with teaser rates," he said.

Under FHASecure families with strong credit ratings who had been making timely mortgage payments before their adjustable loans were reset to higher rates, may qualify for refinancing.

Eligible homeowners are required to meet strict underwriting guidelines and pay a mortgage insurance premium, which offsets the risk to FHA's insurance fund at no cost to the taxpayer.

To qualify, homeowners must meet the following criteria:

- A history of on-time mortgage payments before the borrower's teaser rates expired and loans reset
- Interest rates must have or will be reset between June, 2005, and December, 2009.
- Three per cent cash or equity in the home.
- A sustained history of employment.
- Sufficient income to make the mortgage payment.

Since the plan was announced in September, 579 adjustable rate mortgages in Massachusetts have been refinanced into an FHA loans.

The $40,000 award to QCAP is being provided by HUD's Housing Counseling Program to assist first-time home buyers to navigate what can be an extremely confusing and difficult process.

"Housing education programs offered by QCAP help families make informed choices before they take the important step of home ownership," said Caswell.

"Getting the correct information at the beginning of the process will help families avoid mortgage troubles later on."

Dunk The Vote Founder Keynote Speaker Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast On Jan. 21

Ron Bell, founder of Dunk the Vote, will be the keynote speaker Monday, Jan. 21, at the city's 12th annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast sponsored by the Human Rights Commission.

The theme of this year's breakfast is "A Morning of Celebrating, Reflecting, Sharing, and Singing."

At the breakfast, the commission will also honor three longtime activists: Dr. Joseph McDermott and Janet and Alden Poole for their dedication to serving the Quincy community.

All are welcome to the breakfast scheduled from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at North Quincy High School cafeteria, 316 Hancock St., according to Tom Fabrizio, a commission member.

Tickets may be purchased at the door or by contacting Ann Yeomans, Commission Chairman at 617-773-5306. Adult tickets are $10; students and seniors, 60 year-old and over, $6; and children, 5 and under, are free.

Remembering Martin Luther King, Jr. and his work is especially important, said Ann Yeomans, Chairwoman of the Commission.

"Dr. King was a stellar example of the hard work required to include all people under the human rights umbrella," Yeomans said. "Especially since he is in recent history, his memory can help in keeping human rights alive for all of us and ensuring that we do not take them for granted."

"In Quincy, I am very proud of our welcome to our new neighbors from all over the world and very pleased to have this opportunity to share our knowledge of and faith in human rights with them," she added.

Mayor Thomas Koch,

RON BELL

Norfolk County District Atty. William Keating and Yeomans will offer the opening remarks and the Germantown Neighborhood Center Chorus and the Poole Family Singers will present musical selections.

Koch, City Council President Jay Davis and Keating will present the awards. Moderators are Kumu Gupta, vice-chairwoman, and Harvey Solomon, treasurer.

The main speaker, Bell, has been a community organizer and voting rights advocate for over 20 years. In 2006, Bell served as Deputy Campaign manager for Governor Patrick's gubernatorial campaign.

Bell currently serves as director of Gov. Deval Patrick's Office of Civic Engagement which promotes active volunteerism and civic engagement.

In 1992, Bell founded Dunk the Vote, a Boston-based non-partisan, non-profit organization dedicated to increasing civic participation and promoting social change. Under Bell's leadership, the organization has registered over 40,000 new voters since in the early 1990's. He also directed the "Selma March: Retracing the Struggle" in October, 2005.

Next week, Bell will focus on these accomplishments when he discusses, "The Power of A Dream" at North Quincy High School.

"There's power in dreams," Bell said. "I was inspired by the dream" of registering thousands of new voters so he worked to "put the dream into action."

Bell believes that Governor Patrick's election restored hope for King's vision. This is not because Patrick is black, but because he represents all people, he said.

"There's a sense of hope instilled," said Bell who said that King, assassinated in 1968, would be "turning over in his grave" if he found people satisfied with just singing, "We Shall Overcome."

Bell's next project is to help organize Governor Patrick's plan for a statewide youth council.

Under Patrick's plan, a council of 14 young men and women representing all backgrounds will focus on violence prevention, leadership development and career building.

The commission's annual breakfast, a Quincy tradition for 12 years, draws several hundred participants from all over the South Shore, according to Fabrizio who noted that residents of Milton, Randolph and Weymouth are often in attendance.

"It's been very successful, very well attended," said Fabrizio, adding, "It's a celebration of human rights."

30-Story Goliath Crane Leaving Shipyard

First it was the cranes, those familiar steel skeletons that stood witness to the creation of the battleships, carriers and cruisers that won World War II.

Now it is the turn of the Goliath crane, a landmark on Quincy's skyline for more than 30 years, to leave the scene of so many triumphs.

Pretty soon, all that will be left of the once bustling Fore River Shipyard will be an historic plaque on the wall of a condo or a Wal-Mart box.

Nearly four years after the Yard was purchased at auction by auto magnate Dan Quirk, Goliath has been sold for a pittance to a Korean shipbuilding company for use in a Romanian shipyard.

It is hoped that Goliath will be dismantled and put to sea on a barge to begin the 4,000-mile voyage to its new home on the Black Sea coast sometime in the spring.

Goliath was erected in 1975 by General Dynamics, then owner of the shipyard, for the basic purpose of hoisting giant cargo spheres, made in South Carolina, onto Quincy-built liquefied natural gas tankers.

It served its basic purpose and other purposes as well.

On Aug. 18, 1984, Goliath lifted a 1,120 ton deck house into place on a Maritime Prepositioning Ship, at the time the heaviest lift ever made at any shipyard in the United States.

The deckhouse, 97 x 80 feet, was big enough to provide living quarters for 160 military personnel.

It remained when General Dynamics closed the shipyard for good in 1986, probably the biggest crane in the Western Hemisphere at 30 stories high with nothing to do.

Quirk bought 113 acres of the old shipyard, including Goliath, at federal auction for $9 million in 2003 and tried to sell off the big crane but there were no takers.

Not until Daewoo Shipbuilding and Marine Engineering of South Korea came along with an undisclosed offer in the name of its Daewoo Mangalia Heavy Industries, its Romanian subsidiary. Quirk won't say how much.

With Goliath out of the way, Quirk can devote fulltime to his plan to develop the old shipyard into a residential, industrial and commercial area with some sailing amenities.

And, of course, a plaque noting that it was once the famed Fore River Shipyard.

GOLIATH CRANE that once lifted a 1,120 ton deckhouse into place on a warship, is moving from the Quincy skyline to a new home on the Black Sea.

Koch Changes Mayoral Scene

Tom Koch did a couple of things when he raised his right hand Monday.

He raised it, of course, to take his oath as Quincy's 33rd mayor.

And by doing so, he also pushed the mayoral aspirations of several city councillors-maybe others-to the political back burner.

They may possibly have to put aside their mayoral thoughts for up to eight years waiting for the right time to run.

Koch could very well be a four-term mayor.

He has the personality, disposition, energy, willingness to listen and the know-how to be a good mayor and a popular one.

He's no rookie.

By defeating incumbent William Phelan by a 2,000-vote margin in November he completely changed the mayoral scene.

If Phelan had won a fourth term, it would probably have been his last. "I don't think a mayor should stay longer than eight years," he says. "That's long enough and then turn it over to someone else."

If Phelan was re-elected, it would have set the stage for a scramble for the mayor's office in 2009.

But while potential candidates decided to wait, Koch saw opportunity knocking and jumped in to challenge Phelan and won.

Most political observers thought he was taking a big gamble, giving up his job as Park Commissioner and a sure weekly paycheck to take on an incumbent mayor.

But Koch put together a well-organized campaign team, raised money and issues and did what many thought couldn't be done.

Koch, who will turn 45 later this month, is young enough to serve four terms-or more-and go on to other things.

As he was delivering his inaugural address Monday in the packed Quincy Marriott Hotel ballroom, several councillors perhaps were thinking, such thoughts as "Someday that will be me standing up there, taking my oath..."

But that "someday" isn't as close as it once may have seemed now that Koch has moved into the coveted Third Floor Office. And where, no doubt, he intends to stay awhile.

Who are the potential mayoral candidates now left waiting and wondering if opportunity will still knock on their door?

Dan Raymondi, who passed up a run against Phelan in 2003, can't be written off. He endorsed Koch over Phelan but that doesn't mean he has lost interest in the mayor's office.

Others include Joseph Finn, John Keenan, Koch's brother-in-law; Doug Gutro, Mike McFarland, Kevin Coughlin and possibly Jay Davis, the new council president.

If Koch stays four terms, they will be eight years older and things could change for them.

But who can say for sure that Koch's successor will be a city councillor?

Mayors have usually come out of the city council. But Phelan broke that tradition in 2001 when he defeated incumbent James Sheets by 17 votes in the city's closest mayoral election.

Phelan, who was only in his second year on the school committee, was the first mayor in 79 years to get to that office without first taking the traditional route through the city council chamber.

Now, in Koch, who resigned as Park Commissioner to run we have back-to-back mayors who never served in the city council.

Could there be another?

MONDAY MARKED another milestone for Jeanne Reardon who was elected to her 28th full-time one-year term as clerk of City Council Committees.

REARDON

Jay Davis will be the 14th city council president she has worked under. She was nominated by Councillor Leo Kelly who first nominated her in 1980.

Jeanne is closing in on Percy Lane's 31 years as clerk. A Patriot Ledger reporter, he served part time as clerk from 1939 to 1970.

Percy, who died in 1971, was a bit of a punster. Like this wisdom he had for cub reporters: "You don't have to be crazy to be a reporter, but it helps."

THE SOUTH SHORE Chamber of Commerce came up with a novel idea that has made a big hit with its members.

The 2008 membership directory Connections has individualized covers with the name of the member, company, owner or chief officer and address.

John Stobierski, Chamber vice-president, says 2,500 individualized cover directories were printed by Star Litho of Weymouth.

POLITICAL TRIVIA, compliments of Frank McCauley:

Tom Koch is the third North Quincy High School graduate to be elected mayor. William Phelan was the second. Who was the first?

(Answer at the end of the column.)

THE NORTH QUINCY High School Choir and director Timothy Carew deserve a big bow for their beautiful renditions at Monday's inaugural ceremonies.

The Star Spangled Banner, America The Beautiful and My America, never sounded better.

Hope they will make a CD of one of their concerts if they haven't already.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1926 POSTCARD is a view of the new Quincy Police Headquarters building on the corner of Sea Street and the Southern Artery. A great deal of controversy surrounded the siting of the building until Mayor Perley Barbour selected this city owned parcel. Finished in May, the dedication was delayed for two months due to the death of Chief Alfred Goodhue. He had been ill, but died unexpectedly at the young age of 52. He was widely admired and highly respected in the community. In his memory the citizens of Quincy contributed to a city-wide collection for a beautiful Quincy granite monument at Mount Wollaston Cemetery and a handsome plaque in the new station. In the late 1980s, under Mayor Frank McCauley, this building was modernized and expanded with a new façade that has substantially altered its appearance. Filling An Open School Committee Seat

What is the best way to fill the open School Committee seat of Jim Timmins; Joint Convention, default to the "runner up," special election, mayoral appointment, or leave it vacant?

The Joint Convention provides a simplified solution. It calls on all of the elected Quincy officials to hold a de facto election. The elected officials have earned the respect and trust of the people. They are called upon to publicly discuss, debate and decided who will do the best job. The Joint Convention has an important responsibility to solicit many candidates, listen to their qualifications, increasing the talent pool to select from. The Joint Convention can work best if they take this opportunity to find the best candidate for the School Committee, for our children and for our city.

The "next person" who previously ran for School Committee and lost could be selected. What election should be used, the most immediate election or the election that the vacating member ran in? Should the "next person" on the list be required to have a certain number of votes or a certain percentage to be considered a reasonable alternative? It would make sense if that person finished a few hundred votes or 10 percentage points behind. But would it make sense if the person lost by 3,000, 5,000 or 10,000 votes or needed an additional 50% of the votes. Where is it reasonable to draw the line? Also, in essence we would be casting three votes to fill four positions: three School Committee members and one alternate.

A special election could be held. In democratic principle this would be the ideal solution. A city wide special election would cost about $60,000. Could that $60,000, which is close to the average salary for a teacher, be better used?

The mayor is the Chairman of the School Committee. If he were able to appoint a person to fill a vacancy he would in essence have two votes, twice as many as any other member.

The School System impacts everyone in the city and accounts for about one-third of the city budget. It is too important a position to leave vacant for long.

Tribute To Richard Koch

When I was a young man, I met Richard Koch. He asked me to coach and play for the Koch Club which I did for many years. In 1959, the Koch Club won the state semi-pro basketball championship with a record of 25 wins, 5 losses, and I averaged 34 points a game.

Richard Koch also asked me to handle the campaign of John F. Kennedy, our then-future President, in Quincy. On one occasion I drove John Kennedy in an open convertible through the streets of Quincy.

During this time, Dick Koch became my mentor, my friend, and a surrogate father to me. In addition, he suggested that I run for office here in Quincy, and I ran for Ward 5 city councillor and won. Under his guidance I was ward councillor for four years, councillor-at-large for four years, city council president, acting mayor, state representative, and last but not least, I was elected Norfolk County district attorney for 12 years.

I learned that Dick Koch was: No. 1 - a genius at the art of politics; and No. 2 - that he did more good for his community than any man I ever met.

While on the City Council, I served as chairman of the Park and Recreation Committee, and Dick Koch became the head of the Park Department. We continued to work closely together to make sure that the children of this city had excellent parks to play in.

When Dick Koch died, the funeral was held at Sacred Heart Church, where he was an usher for many years. The tears were flowing that day, as I felt I had lost my best friend, and the man who had guided me to my success.

Dick Koch is not longer amongst us, but his memory and what he did for the community is still here. For the last 16 years I have presented the Richard Koch Scholarship to a North Quincy High School student to attend the University of Massachusetts. I also erected a plaque at the Merrymount Park in honor of his service to the parks of this city.

His son Thomas Koch has now been inaugurated as the Mayor of this city. I know his father is up in heaven looking down on him and still guiding him to this day. I know that his son carries with him the same values, and I wish him well as he starts out on his political career.

3 Storms Wipe Out City's Snow Budget

By FRANK McCAULEY

Three snowstorms that wracked the city during the past two weeks have completely depleted the city's budget for snow removal, according to Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

LaRaia could not estimate the cost of snow removal for the three storms but said that the $118,588 budgeted for such costs for the year, covered only, "most of the first storm."

The city will have to borrow or transfer funds to fight future storms this year.

The city plowing crews could not keep up with the most recent snowfall and slicks of packed, glazed snow lined most of the city's side streets and few main roads.

$28.8 MILLION SCHOOL BUDGET PROPOSED

School Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon planned to present a $28.8 million school budget for 1977-78 to the School Committee, up a comparatively tiny 1.4 percent over that of 1976-77. In the past, increases ranged from 9.8 percent to 16 percent.

Dr. Creedon listed items in the proposed budget that were beyond the control of the budget makers, including staff salaries, heating and lighting costs and state mandated programs, all of which make up more than 90% of the budget.

Adult Films Planned For Library Showing

Two adult film features, one of them unrated but not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission, will be screened this month at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The first, entitled "Dreams of Dust," a drama set in the gold fields of West Africa, will be shown tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. It's the unrated film.

Mocktar, a Nigerian peasant, comes looking for work in Essakane, a dusty gold mine in northeast Burkina Faso, where he hopes to forget the past that haunts him.

In Essakane, he quickly finds out that the gold rush ended 20 years before and the inhabitants of this wasteland and strange timelessness manage to exist simply from force of habit.

The beautiful Coumba,

however, is still courageously struggling to raise her daughter after the death of her family.

Mocktar will soon be fighting not only to survive but also to provide a better future for this mother and her child.

The second adult film, a comedy called "The Simpsons Movie," rated PG-13, will be shown Thursday, Jan. 24, at 7 p.m.

When Homer Simpson adopts a pig destined for Krusty's slaughterhouse, it triggers an environmental catastrophe, forcing the government to seal the town of Springfield into a dome and destroy the city.

While the family manages to escape and flee to Alaska, they eventually decide to return and help save the city in classic Simpson fashion.

The screenings are sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-376-1331 or visit thomascranepubliclibrary.org.

Maria Graceffa Receives Cooperative Education Award

Quincy resident Maria Graceffa, a student at Northeastern University, has earned the Thomas E. McMahon award for outstanding devotion and commitment to serving others throughout her co-op experiences.

Graceffa, a human services and psychology double major, is a residential supervisor and family therapy co-op at the Bay State Community Service's Granite House, a residential treatment facility in Quincy for adolescent mental health patients. She devises program-specific treatment plans, counsels patients during emotional crises and runs a psychological education group for 14-to-18 year olds on building healthy relationships, nutrition and medication education.

"I know there's a huge amount of people who are different for the better because of me," Graceffa said. "It's so gratifying when I can see a behavioral and emotional change in another human being and I know I am partially responsible."

tal in Belmont as an alcohol and drug treatment program research co-op. She leads interviews with adult bipolar patients to determine whether or not they have substance abuse disorder.

Graceffa's previous co-op was with Cascap, Inc., a non-profit organization dedicated to improving the lives of adults. As an interim residential counselor, Graceffa provided milieu therapy for those with mental illnesses such as schizophrenia.

"I've learned that nothing is a disability," Graceffa said. "It's only a disability if you allow it to be; you can learn to work with absolutely anything."

Rita's Apple Upside-Down Biscuit

We were having a delicious lunch at our daughter Rita and son-in-law Jonathan's home in Scituate on a rainy wintery afternoon. But when she served dessert, the day became brighter.

It is such a delicious pastry, and one we enjoyed even more than apple pie.

It's called apple upside-down biscuit.

In the recipe, you can either follow a biscuit dough recipe or purchase biscuits already made and use those.

Apple upside down biscuit

4 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/2 cup (packed) light brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 apples (any favorite)
Zest and juice of one lemon
1/2 biscuit dough recipe (or biscuits)
whipped cream for garnish

This recipe can also be made with pears. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Roll out the dough to 1/2 inch thickness if using the biscuit dough recipe. Using a plate or 10 inch skillet as a template, cut a 10-inch circle of dough and set aside.

Melt the butter in an oven safe 10 inch skillet, (cast iron is best)

Remove from heat and stir in the brown sugar and cinnamon.

Peel the apples, cut in half and remove seeds. Cut in thin slices. Toss with lemon juice and the zest.

Arrange the apple slices overlapping, in a single layer on the bottom of the skillet. They should fit perfectly all around the skillet.

Top with the circle of dough of layer the biscuits side by side until covered. Egg wash the top with a brush and bake until bubbling and golden brown (about 215 to 30 minutes. Remove from oven and let set for 10 minutes.

Now here comes the hard part although Rita didn't have any trouble doing it. Invert onto a platter or cutting board, and cut into wedges. Top with cream.. We had ours with vanilla ice cream.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER has established a Comfort Cart Program with the support of a $6,500 donation from the City Hospital of Quincy Corporation. New Comfort Cart Program Launched At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center has received a $6,500 donation from the City Hospital of Quincy Corporation to help launch a Comfort Cart Program at the center.

The City Hospital of Quincy Corporation is a private charitable organization established to support the Medical Center during its former days as a public, city-owned hospital. Since 1992, the Corporation has contributed more than $110,000 to support QMC programs.

The Corporation's latest gift is being used to help establish the Comfort Cart Program at Quincy Medical Center. This program, developed by the hospital's Pain Management Task Force, is in response to the need to comfort and soothe patients in pain and patients near end of life.

The Comfort Cart, a portable resource library, has been wheeled to a patient's room to allow a patient or a family member to choose an alternative non-drug approach to pain that they believe would be the most meaningful and effective. These alternatives include heat and cold packs, music, guided imagery, aromatherapy, comedy and prayer. Items include portable CD players and a selection of CDs, journals, crossword puzzles, pillows and blankets, lotions and balms, prayer shawls and religious books, and lavender scented neck rolls.

"Though they are not a substitute for pain medications, non-drug approaches to pain management may strengthen coping abilities, contribute to pain relief, reduce fear, enhance comfort, promote sleep, and give the patient a sense of control," said Laura Klint, RPH, pharmacist and chairperson of QMC's Pain Management Task Force. "We are grateful to the City Hospital of Quincy Corporation for their generous donation, which has in turn inspired others to support the program with other items needed to outfit the cart."

For more information on the Quincy Medical Center Comfort Cart Program or to make a donation to support this program, contact the QMC Development Office at 617-376-5493.

QMC Receives $25,000 For Child Witness To Violence Program

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) recently accept a $25,000 grant award from the Blue Cross Blue Shield (BCBS) Foundation to support its new initiative to help children in the community who have been exposed to violence.

"Quincy Medical Center was honored to join forces with Mayor Phelan and Judge Mark Coven to launch this important initiative, which will promote compassionate care within a safe haven at QMC for families who have been traumatized by violence, and we are so grateful for the BCBS Foundation's support in helping us get this important program under way," said Gary W. Gibbons, MD, QMC President and CEO.

The Child Witness to Violence Program at QMC is the result of a coalition of state and local officials and key leaders in all areas of service provision throughout Quincy and surrounding communities.

The program is a cooperative effort of QMC, the City of Quincy, and interested health care service delivery professionals throughout the city. QMC will house the program and has committed overhead support to the project. The City of Quincy has committed additional dollars to fund the program and Judge Coven has committed to securing pro bono legal assistance for the program.

"Each year, more than 550 families in Quincy are affected by domestic violence," Mayor William Phelan said. "As a father, I find this statistic heartbreaking. As a public servant, I am compelled to act, and this initiative represents our commitment to the safety for the most vulnerable of our community - our children."

Through grants and policy initiatives, the Blue Cross Blue Shield Foundation works with public and private organizations to broaden health coverage and reduce barriers to care. The Foundation focuses on developing measurable and sustainable solutions that benefit uninsured, vulnerable and low-income individuals and families in the Commonwealth.

"Often families that have experienced domestic violence are fearful of accessing services and remain in the shadows, even forgoing appropriate health care," said Jarrett Barrios, BCBS Foundation President.

"The Children Witness to Violence Program at Quincy Medical Center will provide a bridge for families in crisis to access all the necessary services, which corresponds directly with our foundation's mission."

city," was the theme of Davis' acceptance speech which he delivered after being unanimously elected City Council president Monday at the 2008 inauguration ceremonies at the Marriott Hotel, Quincy. He is Ward 4 councillor.

Davis repeated his theme eight times as he described the city's great public schools, the beautifully rehabilitated three miles of Wollaston Beach, the city's 26 miles of waterfront, the easy commute to Boston and the community's diversity.

"Quincy Center is now the restaurant capital of the South Shore," said Davis, adding that the diners visiting the various restaurants "are helping to revitalize the center."

"With 26 miles of oceanfront to our east and the Blue Hills to our west, Quincy is a wonderful city," Davis said, noting that he and his wife chose to live in Quincy to raise their family. He's been a resident since 1991.

"We live in a city that has great public schools, realistically promotes economic development, and protects our environment," said Davis.

Davis opened his speech by thanking former Mayor William Phelan for his hard work during his administration. Davis cited the new high school project, the cross-town connector, the Crown Colony off-ramps, school improvements and sound fiscal management.

"You gave us your heart, energy and soul on behalf of the residents of our city, our students and my own family. I thank you."

Davis said he looked forward to working with new Mayor Thomas Koch in increasing the city's commercial and business tax base.

"Because of our city's proximity to Boston and access to industrial and commercial land, Quincy has been and will continue to be a great location for business."

"During the next two years, I look forward to working with Mayor Koch to increase the City's commercial tax base. We are fortunate that the largest areas in our city that can be developed for business, are Crown Colony, the shipyard and Quincy Center."

City Clerk Joseph Shea administered the oath of office to the nine council members, all of whom were re-elected.

They are Davis, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee and the three at-large councillors Joseph Finn, John Keenan and Michael McFarland.

Shea then opened the meeting to nominations for council president.

Gutro immediately nominated Davis after citing his contributions to the council and his work on the Ordinance and Public Safety Committee. Gutro was city council president for two years, but, under council rules, he could not be elected for a third year.

"He takes his responsibilities seriously but does not take himself seriously," said Gutro, adding, "We've learned that Jay Davis is not afraid to speak his mind."

"This council and this city will be in good hands," said Gutro, after the election.

"I only hope I can do half the job you've done," Davis said as he accepted the new post and an oversized gavel from Gutro.

Councillor McNamee seconded Davis' nomination after noting that David "always takes his work seriously. He is often looking for that scarce middle ground. His charity work is legendary."

Councillor Kelly then nominated Jeanne Reardon for her 28th term as Clerk of Committees with a second by Councillor Raymondi.

Raymondi described the "hundreds, if not thousands" of neighborhood and community meetings organized by Reardon in her 28 years as the council's Clerk of Committees.

"Dick has been a tremendous asset to the board and we look forward to his continued involvement," Agnitti said.

is at the heart of Quincy Medical Center (QMC).

"I really enjoy my work with QMC," Cahill said. "We are able to help so many people and it's very important to the community."

Through a combination of special events, annual appeals, focused campaigns, and other programs, the Foundation offers individuals and corporations various opportunities to give in meaningful ways. The volunteer group works to build goodwill in the community and encourage a stronger alliance with Quincy Medical Center.

Koch's First Priorities: Drug Crackdown

• Controlled Development • Open Door Policy

where we want new development: Crown Colony, the Fore River Shipyard, and downtown Quincy all hold great potential for the future, and those areas should and will be the focus of our growth."

"To these ends, I will work with the city council on legislation that will limit development in our neighborhoods and craft a full citywide traffic and parking plan."

"In addition, I will ask a group of citizens to work directly with my administration to undertake the largest overhaul of the city's zoning, building and design regulations in at least a generation to develop a vision for the Quincy we want today and tomorrow."

One of his first priorities in office, said Koch, will be to "find ways to make government more open, responsive, and most importantly, more efficient."

"This morning," he said, "we will take the first step toward this goal by moving the Department of Constituent Services directly into the mayor's office."

The fight on drug abuse will take a little longer but he indicated that it too will be high on his agenda.

"Within the next month," said Koch, "I will appoint a task force of law enforcement, educators, clergy, non-profit agencies and citizens to develop a plan to fight this poison that affects far too many of our children."

"There are parents, friends and family members who began this battle on their own. They will no longer fight alone. There is no easy solution. It is a problem that will not disappear overnight."

He pledged faster action on the three school building projects that "have languished too long."

"We will finish the new Quincy High School on time and on budget and we will work together to build a new Central Middle School and address the needs of Sterling. The time is now, the responsibility ours."

There was a little something for everyone in Koch's inaugural. Even if it was only a paean of praise or a plea for support.

"To my colleagues in government on the city council and the school committee," he said, "you have my pledge to work together. If it is a good idea, let's make it reality."

"To our state legislators, I ask for your support and guidance."

"To our business community, Quincy is ready to help you create jobs to ensure a thriving economy."

"To our teachers, we value the vital work you do in the classroom."

"To our police and firefighters, you put your lives on the line every day and I salute you."

"To our laborers, technicians and office workers, you are the gears that make this city work day in and day out and I thank you."

"To all of you, know my door is always open."

"Most importantly, to our citizens, young and old from so many diverse cultures and backgrounds, please know that City Hall is the people's house and I am only its temporary steward."

Referring to himself as "a kid from Norfolk Downs," Koch harkened back to his father, the late Dick Koch, founder of the Koch Clubs, who, he said, penned this motto for his clubs: "Everyone willing to help, willing to help everyone."

The inaugural drew a standing room crowd of upwards of 1,000 who lined the walls of the 875-capacity ballroom and included the new mayors of Braintree and Weymouth, Joseph Sullivan and Sue Kay respectively.

Present as guests were his brother, Dick, a former Quincy city councillor now police chief of Brewster; the family of Chiara Durkin, the Houghs Neck soldier who was killed in Afghanistan; and, of course, the new mayor's family, his wife, Christine, their three children and his mother, Simone.

Quincy's former mayor, William Phelan, who Koch upset in the November election, was there, too, to be thanked by his former foe for his service and wished the best in the years to come for him and his family.

Four other former chief executives also were on hand, Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Frank McCauley and James Sheets. A fifth, Arthur Tobin, was home recovering from recent surgery and unable to attend.

Quincy's legislative delegation was there in toto, Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Ron Mariano, Bruce Ayers and Stephen Tobin; as well as Congressman Bill Delahunt, State Treasurer Tim Cahill, District Attorney Bill Keating and Quincy District Court Judge Mark Coven.

John Gillis, the retired city clerk who is now a county commissioner, led a delegation from Norfolk County that included Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Treasurer

Joseph Connolly, Register of Probate Patrick McDermott and Commissioner Peter Collins.

Former city councillors filled out the rest of the roster, including Peter Kolson, Bryan Connolly, Michael Cheney, Larry Chretien, Tom Fabrizio, Michael D'Amico, Steve Durkin, Joe Newton, Alicia Gardner, Charles McIntyre, Tom Nutley, George Burke, and Dennis Harrington, who also served as Planning Director in the Phelan Administration.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Ice Rescue

Driving around the South Shore this weekend, seeing the skim of snow and ice above the ponds and waterways has prompted this article. I also smiled while doing so while thoughts surfaced of myself as a firefighter on Ladder Five, 29 years ago. The smile came with the thought of those years passing so quickly; thinking that there must be some mistake in my calculation, 29 years?

In those days the conditions I now refer to when I witness snow and ice covering our ponds prompted me to review how I would then handle an ice emergency if we had to respond to someone trapped on the ice or assist someone who had fallen through the ice. I would have reviewed the tools available on the ladder going through the visual sequence of options available to us.

As a younger firefighter, I would often visualize my response to certain incidents as a training exercise. I always found it to be a productive adjunct to hands on training and made for a good review and better preparation. Obviously preparation and training are a large part of successful emergency response.

We had pike poles then of various lengths to use to reach a victim. We had ladders of various lengths, which could be pushed along the surface of the ice as well. We had ropes to throw and another tool I still cringe when I think of using. Someone then had drilled a hole through a bowling ball and attached a rope onto it.

The theory being to use the bowling ball as a weight to skim across the ice to gain further distance with the rope toward the victim when throwing a rope to a victim was not practical. Being a lousy bowler to begin with, the tool wasn't an option for me. Thankfully I never had to use it.

So what should you do if you witness someone falling through the ice? Act quickly and call 911 for immediate help. This will alert trained and equipped rescue personnel. Avoid going out on the ice yourself. Often times would be rescuers become victims themselves. As implied above, our policy is to reach, throw or row. Extend a branch, pole or ladder to the victim. Throw them a buoyant object such as a life ring or float tied to a rope. We will often use a lightweight boat to row out to the victim or push it towards them along the ice while held by the rescuers in immersion suits.

Each situation dictates its own solution. In the fire service, it is essential not to become part of the problem yourself. That is why each rescue is unique, well thought out and performed carefully so as not to complicate what is already difficult.

If you witness a cold-water emergency, think and respond properly while not reacting irrationally. Contact those prepared to respond to such an incident and assist as safely as you can if you can do it safely. Think REACH, THROW, or ROW, while not becoming a component of the problem or a victim yourself.

Thank you.

Bellotti Named Statewide Coordinator For Search Program

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti has been reappointed as the statewide coordinator for Project Lifesaver, a program that uses electronic bracelets and tracking equipment to quickly find Alzheimer's patients and people with autism who wander away from home and become lost.

Sheriff Bellotti was the first to introduce the program into New England in 2004. People who register with Project Lifesaver are fitted with a one-ounce electronic bracelet. If program participants are reported lost, members of Sheriff Bellotti's search team activate the tracking equipment and rush toward the last place the person was seen.

The bracelets emit a signal that can be tracked for several miles from the air and up to a mile on the ground. The average successful search time for Project Lifesaver participants is 30 minutes compared to eight hours for people not fitted with the bracelets.

"This is a tremendously effective program," Sheriff Bellotti said. "It all but eliminates guesswork in the search process and saves us valuable time in reaching the lost person. And that is doubly important as winter weather approaches."

The most recent save by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Project Lifesaver team was on Oct. 31. Relatives of a 77-year-old man in Franklin awoke at 6 a.m. that morning to find that he had taken the family dog for a walk and not returned.

The family notified a local emergency dispatcher, who notified Project Lifesaver. The elderly man, who suffers from dementia, was found within five minutes of the first responders' arrival in Franklin. The man had wandered about 1.5 miles away from his home and appeared to have fallen along the way.

He was treated for minor cuts and bruises and returned to his home.

It marked the ninth time that Sheriff Bellotti's team has worked with local officials to successfully find a Project Lifesaver participant. Currently the program is up and running in 30 law enforcement jurisdictions in Massachusetts.

Project Lifesaver was founded in 1999 in Chesapeake, Va. Since then the program has spread throughout the United States. Since its founding, more than 1,610 people have been found after they wandered off. Project Lifesaver has never failed to find a participant who became lost.

The program has been endorsed by numerous law enforcement and public health organizations, including the National Autism Association and the Alzheimer's Foundation of America.

People interested in learning more about Sheriff Bellotti's Project Lifesaver program should call 781-751-3505.

North Quincy Choir Shines At Inaugural

The North Quincy High School choir were up there with the stars of the day at the Inauguration ceremonies for Mayor Thomas Koch Monday.

Tim Carew directed the 48-student choir as they sang the national anthem, "America the Beautiful," and "My America" for the 1000 people attending ceremonies at the Marriott Hotel, Quincy.

"They get excited about this," said former teacher Maria D'Arcangelo who was a chaperone for choir for the day. D'Arcangelo retired last June after 35 years teaching in Quincy. She directed the Renaissance Program for the schools.

D'Arcangelo noted that the young pianist, Kirsten Shetler, was actually making her public debut at the ceremonies.

"This is her first time playing before a large group," said D'Arcangelo, adding that Shetler is also a talented and accomplished soloist (soprano).

As for the inauguration of Mayor Koch, D'Arcangelo said, "I'm a very happy person. My last year of teaching was the year of the strike.

"It (the strike) left a little bit of a negative feel to it," D'Arcangelo said, noting that the young teachers "were frightened for their jobs."

As for the current mood among teachers, D'Arcangelo said, "We're pretty professional; we just move on."

New School Committee Vice Chairman McCarthy Pledges To Accent Strong Educational System

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy's school system is not just a good school system, but an excellent school system, according to Dave McCarthy, the School Committee's new vice-chairman.

McCarthy spoke after he was unanimously elected vice-chairman of the committee at Monday's inauguration ceremonies at the Marriott Hotel, Quincy.

Committee member James Timmins nominated McCarthy; Committee man Kevin Mulvey seconded the motion.

"This school system under the visionary leadership of an involved school committee has grown and strengthened over the last several years from a good system to an excellent school system," said McCarthy.

"As we all know, education will always be the foundation of a thriving community and in Quincy, our school system is thriving," said McCarthy who pledged to work closely with Mayor Tom Koch for the city's 9000 plus public school students.

"Today marks the beginning of a new year and a new administration in our great city of Quincy," said McCarthy adding, "A new team made up of seasoned elected officials will oversee and guide the Quincy Public Schools."

"The foundation has been set for us to continue to consistently provide this very strong education system... for years to come," said McCarthy, lauding Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, the teachers and the work of former Mayor Phelan, the previous administration, and School Committees.

McCarthy called "small class size" the school committee's number one priority. He also described the system's enthusiastic and qualified professional staff as well as numerous programs which put Quincy on top of other school systems.

These include a dropout prevention program, full day kindergarten, early literacy and advanced placement programs.

He said that "...our school system is in tremendous shape. Our children offer us all the right reasons to move ahead and we will continue to advocate for them."

"A major building project has been started and others are on the horizon," said McCarthy who cited the Quincy High School construction project and the studies for a new Central Middle School as well as the need for improvements at Sterling Middle School.

McCarthy saluted the work of former School Committee member Linda Stice who stepped down this year after serving 16 years.

"She is an example of how one person can make a significant difference," McCarthy said who also praised fellow Committee member James Timmins who has been named by Koch as the new city solicitor.

Timmins is expected to resign this month and his vacant seat will be filled by an appointment made jointly by the city council and the school committee.

McCarthy also announced the following sub-committee appointments and reappointments.

Dwyer will continue as chairperson of the Building Needs subcommittee.

Bragg will chair the Policy sub-committee and Mulvey the budget and finance committee.

Committee member Anne Mahoney will lead the Special Needs Sub-Committee and McCarthy said that he will lead the Health, Safety and Security sub-committee until Timmins' seat is filled.

Prior to McCarthy's election as vice-chairman, Koch administered the oath of office to the three recently elected School Committee members.

This was his first official act as mayor of the City of Quincy and as chairman of the School Committee.

All three committee members, McCarthy, Dwyer and Jo-Ann Bragg, are veteran board members.

Dwyer was first elected in 2002 and McCarthy in 2004. Bragg served 12 years on the School Committee before stepping down two years ago. She was elected again this year.

Dr. DeCristofaro who was appointed school superintendent in 2001 was reappointed as secretary to the committee and Tefta Burrelli who has served as clerk to the committee for the past 25 years was also reappointed.

THE 2008-09 City Council is sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea. From the left, Michael McFarland, John Keenan, Joseph Finn, Brian McNamee, Douglas Gutro, Council President Jay Davis, Dan Raymond, Kevin Coughlin and Leo Kelly.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH by virtue of office will also serve as chairman of the School Committee. He is shown here with James Timmins, Anne Mahoney, Vice Chairman David McCarthy, Jo-Ann Bragg, Kevin Mulvey, Elaine Dwyer and School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro, secretary to the school committee.

Volunteers Have Delivered 10,000 Meals To Homebound Seniors

Grossman Companies Associates Attain 'Meals On Wheels' Milestone

Associates of The Grossman Companies, Inc., the commercial real estate firm based in Quincy, recently reached a volunteer milestone: Since the spring of 2004, the Grossman team has delivered over 10,000 Meals on Wheels to homebound Quincy seniors.

Three days each week, two associates take their turn delivering hot and nutritious meals to an average of 16 seniors. In all, about 12 associates participate including company President Louis Grossman and associates representing the Brokerage, Property Management, Accounting, Administrative and Leadership teams.

During the holiday season, along with meals, the volunteers delivered homemade gift baskets to each of their clients.

Louis Grossman said, "Our company and family have a long history of giving back to the communities where we do business. Meals on Wheels is important because it helps ensure seniors have at least one nutritious meal each day, and just as important, for many we're the only visitor they may have during the day, so it's a friendly break from isolation."

It was company accountant Theresa Rouleau of Quincy who first brought the idea to Louis Grossman in 2004.

The program is managed by South Shore Elder Services under a contract with the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs (Elder Affairs) to coordinate and/or provide a wide range of in-home services to ill and frail low-income elders in 11 communities on the South Shore. Meals are available regardless of income.

Putting The Freeze On Heating Costs

(NAPS) – A few simple steps could help you cut energy use and save on heating costs.

In fact, heating and cooling, along with ventilation, refrigeration and waterheating, are responsible for about 75 percent of residential energy use. That's why something as easy as setting thermostats to 68 F during the day and 60 F at night could add up to big savings.

Similarly, checking that return vents, radiators and baseboards are not blocked by furniture or other objects will maximize airflow and the efficiency of your system.

Try these additional tips. They come from heating experts at the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air-Conditioning Engineers (ASHRAE)—an international nonprofit technical engineering society.

Heating Systems

- Clean or change furnace filters in forced hot air systems once a month or more often as needed.

- Have your heating system maintained and serviced according to the manufacturer's instructions. Dirty filters, coils and fans reduce airflow throughout the system, which decreases performance and could cause damage.

- Check heating ducts for air leaks from joints and holes. Check the hardware store for proper UL-certified mastic or tape for repairs.

- Insulate your hot water tank with an insulating jacket according to the manufacturer's instructions.

- You can comfortably turn down the thermostat in rooms that are unoccupied and can be closed off from the rest of the house, or that have their own heating zones. However, do not do this if it adversely affects the rest of your system, as it could lead to frozen pipes.

Windows and Doors

- Install caulking or weather stripping or use spray-in foams around exterior windows and doors or in spaces between heated and unheated areas (garages, basements, crawl spaces, etc.). Just be sure to read the instructions on the product you use.

- Keep draperies and shades open during the day on your southern-facing walls to allow sunlight to enter. Keep them closed at night to reduce heat loss.

Neighborhood Housing Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, in conjunction with South Shore Savings Bank, will host a first-time homebuyer workshop Monday, Jan. 28 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 2 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The workshop, open to all Massachusetts residents regardless of income, will be held at South Shore Savings Bank, 1584 Main St., Weymouth.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

Topics covered include mortgage options, legal aspects of the home buying process, how a home inspection works, and other presentations from related professionals.

Participants must complete the workshop to qualify for grant programs. There is a $15 fee per person.

Rate Freeze: Most Won't Get Help

At the same time it was announced that mortgage foreclosures are at an all-time high, President Bush unveiled a new plan (Hope Now) to help people with subprime loans keep their homes. The plan as outlined would help approximately 1.2 million homeowners by freezing their introductory teaser interest rates for five years.

The problem began when millions of people bought homes with low starter interest rates, believing that the value of their homes would rise, allowing them to refinance. The reality is that the housing market has tanked and many homes aren't worth what people paid for them, making refinancing impossible, just as all those interest rates are due to reset to much higher amounts.

Very few will actually be able to take advantage of the five-year interest rate freeze, however. The Center for Responsible Lending estimates that of the 1.2 million homeowners targeted for assistance, only 145,000 will actually qualify because of the strict guidelines.

Those with subprime loans have been asked to call 1-888-995-HOPE to speak with counselors "24 hours a day, 7 days a week" to get started on the paperwork for having their interest rates frozen for five years.

Here's what happens when you call:

If you want information on foreclosure, they will talk to you.

If you want to learn more about the rate freeze, you'll be told to call your lender.

You qualify for the rate freeze if:

- You have bad credit but are current on your payments, and you live in the house.

- Your mortgage was taken out between Jan. 1, 2005 and July 31, 2007, and if the interest rate is set to rise between Jan. 1, 2008, and July 31, 2010.

You do not qualify for the rate freeze if:

- You have good credit but are in danger of falling behind on your payments.

- You have equity.

- You have a traditional ARM, no matter how high the rate will go when it resets.

- You have bad credit and are behind on your payments.

- Your interest rate already reset.

- You don't live in the house.

- You already refinanced.

The HOPE program is voluntary. Your lender doesn't have to agree to help you with a rate freeze. If you fall behind in payments, the lender can still foreclose.

Quick Action Prevents Frozen Pipe Damage

DEAR HAMMER: Last year during a spell of unusual cold, I turned on the kitchen sink tap and noticed the water flow was very weak. Right away I knew that a pipe was freezing. My husband went to the cellar and felt along the cold-water supply line until he found a couple of very cold sections of pipe. Because water was still flowing through the tap we didn't shut off the flow of water. We wrapped old towels around the freezing spots and poured hot water from a tea kettle over each towel. Very quickly — within 20 minutes — the water began flowing normally from the tap.

This year we wrapped insulation around the supply lines, both hot and cold — to conserve heat in the hot line, and to prevent the cold line from freezing. Just wanted to let you know that the "hot-water-and-towels" method is no-cost and really works. — Blair W., White Plains, N.Y.

DEAR BLAIR: Thanks for the story! Insulating pipes and monitoring the flow of water during cold spells are effective ways to prevent frozen and burst pipes. It's a good idea, when temperatures in your area drop well below normal, to let the taps drip steadily until the weather improves — water moving through the pipes will help prevent freezing as well.

This winter is already shaping up to be exceptionally cold and snowy in the East and Midwest. In addition to preventing pipe freezes, homeowners should make sure that heavy snow doesn't cause problems, either. High snowdrifts can cover vents you don't normally pay attention to, such as dryer and heating vents, potentially causing gases to back up into the house. Ice can form inside unshielded vent stacks, so that sewer gases don't vent properly. Clear snow and ice away from ventilation exit points as soon as a storm ends.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguruz2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Benefits Of An Extended Warranty For Your Heating System

(NAPS) — Here's a hot tip for the next time you need a new heating system: When you consider the rising cost of repairs and the fact that most breakdowns or malfunctions usually occur when you least expect them, an extended warranty can be a worthwhile investment. So just what is an extended warranty and how do you know if it's right for you?

An extended warranty picks up where the regular limited warranties on new equipment leave off. Buying into an extended warranty makes sense when making a large purchase, such as a car or a new heating system for your home. Although most products are manufactured to run at top efficiency for years, even the best-made equipment can break down.

When it comes to heating, ventilating and air-conditioning (HVAC) equipment, you are making a long-term investment for your home, so you want to ensure that the system continues to function properly without having to worry about additional expenses and repairs. As a result, some brands of HVAC equipment offer customers special extended warranty plans. The Luxaire Performance Extended Protection Plan from Johnson Controls, for example, is paid for at the time of product purchase and offers:

- Up to 10 years of total coverage;
- Protection against rising repair costs;
- Warranty transfer to a new owner, if you sell your home;
- No limit to the number of repairs.

The two biggest benefits of purchasing an extended warranty with an HVAC system are that you don't have to worry about the cost of regular business-hour service calls, and you know the work will be performed by a local contractor, whom you already have an established relationship with and can trust.

For more information, visit www.luxaire.com or call (877) 874-7378.

A Job Well Done

On Sunday, Dec. 30, 2007, at approximately 8:50 p.m., Officers Joe Paccioretti and Keith Wilbur were dispatched to a business across from the Doughnut King on Copeland St. for an anonymous call of a "man with a crow bar trying to break into the business."

Officer Paccioretti was nearby at the parking lot of the 7-11 store on Copeland St., so he arrived quickly on scene to see a male suspect standing against the front door of the Corcoran Brokerage Company. The suspect immediately backed away from the door and walked across the street to the Doughnut King parking lot, where Officer Paccioretti stepped out and approached him.

His attention was briefly diverted to a vehicle running in the parking lot, with another male sitting in it. Believing that the males could be together, Officer Paccioretti instructed the walking suspect to stop and raise his hands. The suspect raised only his left arm and kept the right side of his body away from the Officer's view. When the suspect failed to heed the Officer's instructions again, Officer Paccioretti began to unsnap his holster to draw his weapon.

The suspect then raised his right arm and an orange colored pry bar fell to the ground. The suspect then fled towards the fire station and as Officer Paccioretti gave chase, the suspect motor vehicle immediately drove off.

As the Officer gave chase, he informed the dispatcher as to his locations. Officer Wilbur drove down Miller St. from Furnace Brook Parkway and ordered the suspect to the ground. When the suspect failed to comply and resisted, Officer Paccioretti brought him to the ground and the suspect was handcuffed. The suspect was transported back to the scene, where Officer Paccioretti was able to match up the size of the pry bar with gouge marks on the frame near the lock of the front door, adjacent to where the suspect had originally been seen.

Officer Paccioretti looked inside the door window and observed a large flat screen television. Photographs of the door and the pry bar were taken as evidence. The suspect was booked at the station and initially gave a false name, however, his fingerprints revealed his true identity and that he had an existing default warrant.

The suspect, a 40-year old Bridgewater resident, was charged with, "Attempted Breaking and Entering, Possession of Burglary Tools, Resisting Arrest, Wanton Destruction over $250 and Giving a False name to a Police Officer." It is unknown if the male sitting in the car was related to this incident-he could have been a suspect, a witness or the anonymous caller.

The Quincy Police Department appreciates the efforts of citizens who call us when they have knowledge that a crime is being committed, is about to be committed or was committed. Too often, citizens who have information about criminal activity or even suspicious are hesitant to contact the Police for a variety of reasons. People may not want to get involved, are fearful of retaliation or be forced to testify in court.

Naturally, we would like to know whom we are getting information from since it helps establish the credibility and reliability of the reporting person and every effort is made to maintain confidentiality. We do not want to discourage anonymous information because accurate information can easily be corroborated.

The Quincy Police Department encourages citizens to report any suspicious or criminal behavior and there are many methods, such as sending a letter to the station, calling on the (617) 479-1212 (not traced), the Detective Bureau at (617) 745-5764, or if it is a drug related matter, call the Drug Hotline at (617) 328-4527. A new method is to use the Quincy Police online option by going to <http://tinyurl.com/ytfpfd>, to report drug or suspicious activity.

Remember, even though you may think that the information you have is insignificant, it may still help build a case against a criminal in your neighborhood!

Raiders Edge Rams, Nipped By Nauset

By SEAN BRENNAN

Two games, one decided by a single point and the other decided by eight points in overtime, pushed the North Quincy Red Raider boys basketball team to a 1-1 record last week.

The Raiders (4-4, 2-1 in the ACL) rallied from a nine-point fourth quarter deficit last Friday night on the road against ACL foe Nauset High School, but in the end, North came up on the short end of the stick, losing 53-52.

A week ago today (Jan. 2), North Quincy trailed Marshfield HS by two points late in the fourth quarter, but a put-back basket at the regulation buzzer by senior forward Marcellus Lee forced overtime, and the Red Raiders blew by the Rams in the extra session to earn a hard-fought 64-56 win over a tough league foe.

The team now begins a stretch of eight Atlantic Coast League games in their next ten contests, with the only non-league games coming against Randolph HS (Jan. 14) and against Bridgewater-Raynham HS (Feb. 2).

"The next two weeks plus will really test our team, but if we can continue to play with the intensity on both defense and offense we should be able to rack up the wins," head coach Kevin Barrett said. "I told the team that playing our game is the best way to stay successful, and I don't see why we can not make some noise in these league games."

Against Nauset, Lee sparked the North Quincy late-game rally. The senior forward finished the game with a double-double (15 points, 10 rebounds). Fellow senior, guard Phuoc Nguyen chipped in with ten points, and junior forward Sean Clifford-starting in place of senior captain Dennis Martin who is out of action with an injury-played one of his best games of the season on offense and defense.

The Raiders had a great opportunity to steal their second league road win of the week against Nauset. North Quincy, down 53-52 with just less than ten seconds to play, had possession of the ball on the Nauset side of the court, but could not convert the winning hoop. But that doesn't mean that the loss was a complete missed opportunity.

"We had that opportunity to pull out another win on the road," said Barrett, "but with seven seconds left, we drove baseline and had the ball stripped away. It was a tough loss, no doubt, but we can take a lot of positives out of that game."

One big positive Barrett can harp on is the way his team played defense in the second half. The Raiders held Nauset's high-flying offense to 20 total points in the third and fourth quarters (10 points in each), which allowed North to almost pull off the comeback.

"We played the best defensive half of our entire year up to this point during that second half versus Nauset," Barrett added. "If we can keep up that defensive effort, we should be able to continue to be competitive in every game we have left on the schedule."

North Quincy earned its second league win of the year on Jan. 2 in their come-from-behind victory over the Rams of Marshfield HS.

Lee's last second put-back propelled the Raiders to the extra session, but it was his performance all game that got North to overtime. Lee finished the game with 25 points to lead the visiting Red Raiders.

"Marcellus has been our go-to-guy all season long," said Barrett. "He is such a good player. He rebounds on both the offensive and defensive boards, he can score and he plays hard every single game."

North also got contributions from senior guard Alex Tragellis (12 points), junior Sean Clifford and from sophomore Tim Stille (11 points, 6 rebounds).

"Sean did a nice job against Marshfield," Barrett said. "He has had to step into our starting lineup with Martin out, and has done well."

North Quincy hits the middle part of their schedule on pace for another post-season appearance, and Barrett recognizes that it has been in all three phases of the game (offensive, defense and rebounding) that his team is excelling. And that gives him hope that his team can continue to pile up wins.

"We, so far, have been playing good defense, we have been rebounding on both ends and our success in both phases has triggered an offense that can score. Let's hope we can keep it up."

The Raiders played ACL foe Plymouth North HS Tuesday night, and are scheduled to play at home on Friday night against Sandwich HS (6:30 p.m. start time). The team will play host to Randolph HS on Monday (Jan. 14) before hitting the road for another ACL game against Plymouth South HS on Jan. 15.

The festival provides an opportunity for the students and community to come together and celebrate the fall.

AAMCO Transmissions on Southern Artery sponsored the event.

Many local businesses contributed to the prize drawings.

The student council and students in the automotive program coordinated the event. Twenty tables of arts, crafts and yard sale items were set up.

Students also provided face and pumpkin painting, games and a haunted house.

Thirteen classic cars enhanced the festival. This year's winners were judged by students and staff.

• John Zofchak and his 2004 Corvette, Most Customized.

• Paul Bates and his 1948 Ford Coupe, Most Original. • Jim Abdon, Jr. and his 1957 Chevy Bel Air, Custom Modified.

Jim Abdon, owner of Abdon Auto Repair and Sales, said he thought it would be a good father-son project.

Jim, Jr. is currently attending Roger Williams University in Rhode Island.

All proceeds went to the student council and scholarship program.

Presidents Making Noise With 4 Game Win Streak

By SEAN BRENNAN

All other Atlantic Coast League teams beware.

The Quincy Presidents boys' basketball team is catching fire, and, at the moment, the team is putting away its opponents like your Boston Celtics.

Quincy (5-2, 2-1 in ACL play) went 2-0 last week to run its winning streak to four straight games. The Presidents defeated both Plymouth North and Plymouth South, holding serve on their home court, and sending a message to the rest of the league that last year's run into the Division II South Sectional semifinals was not a fluke, but possibly a harbinger of things to come in 2008.

This year's team, under the direction of head coach Bob Fisher, has so far successfully mixed a lethal combination of solid defense and a lethal offense together, and the results have become a team that can win at either end of the court. And win they have.

guard, it a clutch jump shot with just 14 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter to give the Quincy a 59-57 victory.

Scott scored 21 points to lead all Quincy scorers, but it was his performance in the fourth quarter that helped propel the Presidents to victory. Scott finished the final quarter by scoring ten of his 21 points, including the eventual game-winner. His teammate Kenny Francis finished the game with a double-double (11 points, 10 rebounds) and senior guard Paris Amado scored 14 points.

But it was their late-game defense that helped Quincy earn their first ACL win of the season.

"We held on defense at the end," said Fisher. "And that ended up being the ballgame for us."

On Jan. 2, the Presidents hosted Plymouth North HS. Entering this contest, the Blue Eagles owned a perfect 6-0 record, but getting to 7-0 would not be in the cards this night.

Quincy, behind a game-high 31 points from Scott's second straight 31-point game (he dropped 31 points on Randolph on Dec. 29)-handed Plymouth North its first loss of the season, 71-62.

Scott connected on three 3-pointers during his scoring barrage, but it was Quincy's other guard, Paris Amado, who helped put the Blue Eagles' away for good in the fourth quarter. Amado scored 11 points in the game, but nine of those points came in the final quarter, as the Presidents scored 17 points to expand on a six-point third quarter lead.

Forward Kenny Francis added 14 points for the winners.

"We had the best ball pressure of the year," said Fisher. "It was a very good win against a very good team."

The Presidents played on the road Tuesday night against Whitman-Hanson HS, and are scheduled to play on Cape Cod against Dennis-Yarmouth HS this Friday (6:30 p.m.), before traveling back to the Cape next Tuesday to play against Sandwich HS (Jan. 15).

Quincy Splits Plymouth Games

By SEAN BRENNAN

Back-to-back road games against the two Plymouth, MA high schools last week produced one blowout victory and one tough-luck loss, for the exciting Quincy High School varsity girls' basketball team.

The Presidents (4-3, 2-1 in the ACL) dispatched of Plymouth North High School, 61-26 on Jan. 2 to earn their second straight league victory, but fell in defeat, 48-40 on Jan. 4 against Plymouth South HS.

The Presidents, coming off their big league win over Plymouth North, received all they could handle against Plymouth South (7-1 overall). The Panthers carried an eight-point lead into the fourth quarter and held on to win by eight points over Quincy.

Quincy quickly fell behind 14-2 versus Plymouth South, but after a timeout was called, the Presidents' suffocating full-court defense sparked an 18-6 scoring run that tied the game at 20-20 late in the half. At the halftime break, Quincy trailed 22-20.

"We entered the game against Plymouth South having beaten them something like seven straight times," said head coach Jeff Bretsch. "But we had three of our taller players out with injuries and they had one 6-2 forward who we had trouble stopping early in the game. But I was proud of how the team defense picked up after going down 14-2.

"We managed to even the score at 20-20, and it was the defense that allowed us to get some easy baskets and slow them down in the second quarter."

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

Quincy, which relies on its defense and its potential to score quickly and from long distance (3-pointers), found itself in a shooting funk the entire game, and their cold shooting ended up being the difference in this game.

"We are a good shooting team," added Bretsch. "But we shot the ball very poorly against Plymouth South (20% from the field). It wasn't like we took bad shots; the ball just wouldn't go in for us. If we had even shot closer to 30% from the field, we would have won that game.

"I wanted to win, but I can't be upset because we played great defense, just couldn't buy a bucket. But it is only one game and if we continue to do what we are good at, we will be fine."

Leading the way for Quincy against the Panthers was senior captain/guard Meagan Tobin who scored 15 points.

Earlier in the week (Jan. 2), the Presidents quickly put the game out of reach against Plymouth North with 22 unanswered first quarter points.

The Presidents' defense held Plymouth North without a single first quarter point until the closing seconds of the frame.

"I was proud of the defensive effort put forth to start this important league game," said Bretsch. "We pressed them and forced turnover after turnover. They couldn't do anything against that press and we capitalized."

Leading the way for the Presidents were the team's two senior captains, Meagan Tobin and Marybeth Torpey. Tobin, who played an all-around game, scored 18 points and grabbed eight rebounds. Fellow senior captain, guard Marybeth Torpey, scored 14 points and added seven assists.

"These two are the definition of leadership for this team," boasted Bretsch. "Both have been on the varsity roster all four years and both have been starters since their sophomore years.

"They both have high expectations every time they get on the court and both want and do contribute offensively and defensively. Marybeth is one, if not the best, defensive player in the ACL and Meagan is a phenomenal all-around player. Both of them are the leaders on this veteran team and both are exceptional at encouraging leadership and teamwork."

Quincy now enters the toughest part of their schedule (six straight league games), but they do have one advantage, a bunch of home dates in the next two weeks.

"This part of the schedule will be a big test for us, but since we have yet to play a home game, we will have the bonus of playing league games on our home court," said Bretsch.

Quincy played a tough league game versus Whitman-Hanson HS on Jan. 8 and is scheduled to play at home this Friday night against Dennis-Yarmouth HS (East Gym, 5:30 p.m.) and at home against Sandwich HS next Tues. (Jan. 15).

North Quincy Wins 2; Improves To 3-1 In ACL

The early-season jitters seem to be quickly evaporating for the defending Atlantic Coast League North co-champions North Quincy Red Raiders.

North, which started the 2007-2008 basketball season with three consecutive losses, has stormed back to win four out of their last five games to even their record to 4-4, but more importantly, the team has upped its ACL record to 3-1. Wins last week over Marshfield High School (Jan. 2), 68-47, and Nauset HS (Jan. 4), 66-40, gives North some nice momentum as the team enters the meat of its 2008 league schedule.

The Red Raiders now play eight consecutive league games, including one against city rival Quincy HS (Jan. 25) and a home game against Whitman-Hanson HS (Jan.

29), last year's co-champion of the North Division with the Raiders.

In their last home game against Nauset HS, North Quincy senior captain Rebecca Goreham scored 15 points to lead all Raider scorers. North took a commanding 35-14 halftime lead behind strong overall team defense and a balanced offensive attack, led by Goreham.

Junior forward Siobhan Carnell scored ten points, and forward Jessie Howlett finished the game with 9 points for the hosts.

Earlier last week in a game against a tough Marshfield HS team, North Quincy, once again, used solid defensive fundamentals and a balanced offensive attack to take an early 20-10 first quarter lead. The offensive star of the game Goreham (38 points in two games) who finished the game with a team-high 23 points. Her efforts on the offensive and defensive glass and her opportune scoring helped keep a pesky Rams' team from rallying late.

Junior Siobhan Carnell (11 points, 9-of-10 from the free throw line) and senior guard Mary Kate Stille (lockdown defense) helped the hosts earn their second straight league win.

The Raiders played Tuesday night against Plymouth North HS, and are scheduled to play two games before The Sun's deadline next Monday. North Quincy will play on the road against Sandwich HS this Friday and against Plymouth South at home (NQHS Gym, 6:30 p.m.) on Jan. 15.

Presidents Hockey Ice Silver Lake, Plymouth N.

The Quincy Presidents went 2-0 last week, coming from behind in both games late, to run their season record to 4-2 overall, 2-1 in Atlantic Coast League action.

On Saturday (Jan. 5), Quincy's senior forward Ted Walsh scored the game-winner on a third period power play for the visiting Presidents, helping Quincy earn a 2-1 victory over Silver Lake Regional High School.

Walsh's goal came with just under four minutes remaining in the game. The Presidents got on the board in the first period on a goal from senior Nick Masone. Walsh and Jim Finn were credited with an assist on Masone's first period goal.

The Presidents faced-off against ACL rival Plymouth North on Jan. 2 and came away with another late-game victory. Trailing by a 1-0 score late in the third and final period, lightning struck the Quincy side of the ice twice in a two minute span.

The Blue Eagles of Plymouth North broke a 0-0 deadlock early in the third period. Senior David McGrath scored off a feed from Dan MacInnes and Steve Wight, but their 1-0 lead could not withstand the final Quincy offensive barrage.

"It was a great up-and-down game," said Quincy assistant coach Ted Walsh, Jr. "Anyone who saw it got their money's worth."

Ted Walsh finished the victory with an assist capping off a productive week for the senior forward.

Quincy played against Blue Hills Regional HS in a non-league game on Monday (Jan. 7), and hosted Whitman-Hanson HS yesterday (Jan. 9) at the Quincy Youth Arena. Their next scheduled game is this Sat. (Jan. 12) on the road versus Sandwich HS.

The good news is that with a little bit of planning and foresight, you can organize everything and still keep yourself shipshape and moving. Here are some tips from Move Free Advanced, a leader in joint health supplements:

- Plan ahead. Organize tasks in ways that conserve energy and are less likely to promote joint discomfort. For example, break your projects down by floors and focus on all projects you need to tackle on each floor of your home in turn.

- Turn big jobs into smaller ones. Do a load of laundry every other day instead of trying to do all the laundry in a single day.

- Eat right to feel right. Many believe that eating a balanced diet can help to prevent achy joints from occurring. That is because a balanced diet can provide the body with natural vitamins and nutrients required by the body's joints.

- Keep moving. Moderate exercise can help to strengthen joints and promote flexibility. Losing weight or maintaining a healthy weight can also help to lessen the stress or strain on the joints, especially the knees.

- Consider a dietary supplement to round out your diet and exercise regimen. Since the GAIT (Glucosamine/Chondroitin Arthritis Intervention Trail) study, funded by the National Institutes of Health, endorsed glucosamine and chondroitin as an alternative treatment for sore joints, they have been widely recommended for relief of joint discomfort.

Glucosamine and chondroitin are used by the body to help make and maintain cartilage, providing skeletal support and improving joint mobility. One of the latest developments in the category is Move Free Advanced, a combination of glucosamine, chondroitin and two unique ingredients.

These special ingredients protect joints and cartilage from breaking down and also replenish your joints, signaling the body to produce more fluid.

Blood Pressure and Exercise

Q. Recently my doctor diagnosed me with borderline high blood pressure. She suggested I exercise, eat properly and lower my stress levels. Although I currently walk three days a week, this obviously is not enough. What type of exercise program should I begin that will help lower my blood pressure?

A. High blood pressure can cause heart failure, heart attack, stroke, kidney conditions and vision problems. With more than 50 million Americans now suffering from this condition, it is important to take the recommendations of your doctor seriously. And although there are some uncontrollable factors that can increase blood pressure (such as heredity), exercise certainly can lower your risk.

Blood pressure is defined as the force of blood pushing against the walls of blood vessels. High blood pressure requires your heart to work harder as it pumps blood via blood vessels throughout your body. The harder your heart has to work, the more likely it is that your arteries will begin to harden.

Exercise is important in keeping your heart and arteries healthy; it increases circulation and cardiovascular endurance, strengthens bones, lowers body fat percentages and helps relieve or decrease stress.

A successful exercise routine includes cardiovascular or aerobic exercise, strength training and proper nutrition. How you incorporate these elements into your daily life will depend on your lifestyle.

Your current walking regimen sounds great. The length of time you spend and the intensity which you are walking is significant. Three days a week sounds good. Try to maintain an intensity in which you can carry on a conversation and not overexert yourself. Adding additional types of aerobic exercise, such as cycling, hiking and swimming to your routine can also benefit your heart.

Try to complete a minimum of 30 minutes of aerobic exercise at least three days a week. If you are unable to walk for 30 continuous minutes, break it up into smaller sections.

While a total body strength-training routine can improve muscle strength, it also can help reduce your body-fat percentage, which in turn will help reduce high blood pressure. Be sure to focus on all major muscle groups, such as your chest, shoulders, legs and core muscles (abdominals and back). Again, be careful of your intensity when strength training. Choose resistance that is challenging but still allows you to complete the exercise without compromising the proper technique.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write to Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Survivors: Stronger, Happier and More Optimistic

Breast Cancer Survivors Have Healthier Outlook On Life

(NAPS) — There is very little doubt that surviving breast cancer is a life-changing experience—one that transforms many women's lives for the better.

According to a recent survey of more than 500 women who were diagnosed with breast cancer, many women find a "bright side" to having survived the disease. In fact, they state that having breast cancer has made them stronger, happier and more optimistic.

The survey, which was commissioned by AstraZeneca and conducted by Harris Interactive, consisted of interviews with 543 women in the United States who were diagnosed with breast cancer. It found that the vast majority (87 percent) of the women said that their experience with cancer made them a stronger person, while 92 percent reported a positive change in their lifestyles since being diagnosed. Moreover, nearly two-thirds (63 percent) of the women said they are hopeful and optimistic about the future. And about four in five (83 percent) said they were better able to put their lives in perspective.

"Being diagnosed with breast cancer gives you a whole new perspective on life," said Deborah Powell, a breast cancer survivor. "Surviving breast cancer taught me to treasure and enjoy every day."

Perceptions of what it means to be a breast cancer survivor were positive as well. More than half (56 percent) of women who have had breast cancer say being a survivor means beating the odds, while half (50 percent) say being a survivor means being a new person and changing for the better. When asked to describe the personality traits of a breast cancer survivor, the majority of women surveyed characterized survivors as "strong" and a "fighter" and as "determined" and "optimistic."

While breast cancer remains the second-leading cause of cancer deaths in women after lung cancer and the most frequently diagnosed cancer in women, the future does look promising. Due to an increasing focus on early detection and recent medical and scientific advances, mortality rates from breast cancer in women have declined steadily since 1990. Today, more women are surviving breast cancer, remaining disease-free and living longer and healthier lives.

As a result, the survivorship community is flourishing. Today, there are 2.3 million breast cancer survivors, making it the largest group of cancer survivors in the U.S.

It is estimated that there will be 178,480 new cases of breast cancer in the U.S. during 2007. An estimated 40,460 women will die from the disease this year. Mammography screening, which is recommended annually for women 40 years and older, frequently detects early signs of breast cancer and improves survival chances.

Getting Connected

Along with survivorship comes a strong sense of connection among women who have experienced breast cancer. The survey showed that breast cancer survivors are more likely to identify a great deal with other women who have had breast cancer (66 percent) than with people of the same ethnic/racial background (41 percent) or religious beliefs (40 percent). And more than a third (34 percent) of women said that they relied heavily on other breast cancer survivors on their path to recovery.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MANAGING YOUR GUMS

Like infections elsewhere in the body, oral infections pose serious health risks. This should be of concern to the millions of Americans who have periodontal (gum) disease. The chronic nature of the disease is particularly concerning. Pregnant women should recognize that periodontal disease increases the risk for preterm births and low birth-weight babies. However, studies indicate that while a woman with periodontal disease is seven times more likely to deliver prematurely, appropriate treatment during pregnancy can reduce preterm births by up to 87%. Both men and women should also know that people with gum disease may be four times more likely to develop heart disease and have increased risk for stroke. These are reasons enough to visit the dentist regularly.

We take great pride in the work we perform. We'll be sure to review oral and general health history and give you all the options available to you. Your dental health is our number one priority. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for superior quality dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. One fourth of all adults over age 35 have gum disease, and that percentage increases to about half of all Americans 55 and older.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your good intentions could backfire if you're not careful with other people's feelings. Try using persuasion, not pressure, to get others to see your side of the situation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your dedication to finishing the task at hand is laudable. But be careful not to overdo the mid-night oil bit. Take time for relaxation with someone very special.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although your intuition will help you make some tough choices in the first half of the month, you'll need more facts to back up your actions later on.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) All that hard work and research in the workplace finally pays off as you hoped it would. Ignore comments from jealous types who are out to get the Goat riled up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unfair decision creates unnecessary problems. But avoid anger and move carefully as you work this out. Expect to get support from an unlikely source.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A fuzzy financial vista persists until mid-month, when things begin to clear up. You'll also gain a better perspective on how to handle those pesky personal problems.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

A wit once remarked that the number of times the average man says no to temptation is once weakly! . . . It has also been said that the difference between those whom the world esteems as good, and those whom it condemns as bad, is in many cases little else than that the former have been better sheltered from temptation. . .

Everyone of us at sometime in our lives go through the experience of temptation. Temptation is a trial. Have you ever noticed that a lot of times temptation seems to be directed at those points in our lives where we seem least able to withstand. "Lead us not into temptation" is simply the petition that God will keep us free from the trial of temptation. God never tempts anyone. We tempt ourselves.

A life without temptation and trial would appear to be an ideal existence. But is this true? We don't think so. . . We all need to stand before the hard situations of life if we are going to get out of life the blessings it promises.

Dr. Carmen M. Mariano of Quincy was inaugurated as the first president of Archbishop Williams High School during a recent ceremony presided over by His Eminence, Sean Cardinal O'Malley.

Inauguration services were held in the Catholic co-educational high school's 1000-seat auditorium. In addition to a cadre of dignitaries and community leaders, Archbishop Williams High School board members, students, parents, teachers, and friends and family of Dr. Mariano attended the inauguration.

A reception was held on the school's campus following the ceremony.

Dr. Mariano officially began his duties as President of Archbishop Williams High School on Aug. 6, adopting the lead role in guiding the school's growth, direction and vision.

Winter Costs Nearing $1 Million Mark

Koch Gets An 'A' In First Snow Storm Test

By TOM HENSHAW

The week-old administration of Mayor Tom Koch got an A for effort in the wake of Monday's storm that dumped some five inches of snow on the city.

But concerns were rising about the seasonal price tag for snow removal that is approaching $1 million with another, lesser snow storm expected this afternoon (Thursday) and tomorrow.

"The downtown cleanup went quite well," said Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association. "Everyone heeded advice and stayed away. Quincy Center was spooky quiet."

The cleanup all over the city went well, too, with the addition of 50 plow teams to the city's snow removal arsenal keeping the main roads open, most neighborhood streets passable and complaints to a minimum.

Christopher Walker, policy director in the Koch administration, said the city budget was already $600,000 to $700,000 in the hole before the latest storm began. Estimates of the cost of this week's storm started at $80,000.

"This storm should push it up closer to a million," he said.

The amount budgeted for Fiscal 2008 is $200,000 in the contractual budget and $100,000 in the personnel budget. The difference will be made up in the Fiscal 2009 budget.

Walker said the city experienced no major problems during the storm, which began in the early hours of Monday morning and petered out in midafternoon.

"We were way ahead of it," said Tom Gorman, the city's emergency management director. "There were some tree limbs down. There were some power outages but power was restored quickly."

"We didn't really get the storm they predicted. There was not as much snow, only five or six inches. There's another storm Friday but it will be mostly rain."

Gorman said no emergency shelters had to be

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee was picked as

The Fin Com, as well as the Ordinance and Oversight Committees, are committees of the whole, meaning that all nine members of the City Council are also committee-men.

Gutro was named chair of the Ordinance Committee with Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin as vice chair.

McNamee was appointed chair of the Oversight Committee with Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly vice chair.

Clasby Returns As Council On Aging Director

Thomas Clasby has returned as Director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

Clasby, who resigned in October because of differences with former Mayor William Phelan's administration over a planned senior citizen center, was reappointed by Mayor Thomas Koch.

Clasby joined the Council on Aging in 1997 and was named director in 1999.

"Tom has for years worked tirelessly on behalf of our city's seniors, I am proud to bring him back where he belongs," Koch said. "He is dedicated, hard-working, and truly cares about our seniors and our city. I am looking forward to working with him on so many issues."

During his tenure, Koch

noted, the transportation program has grown to include a fleet of 12 vehicles, providing free medical transportation to Quincy seniors daily. He has developed the elder service plan, which is a comprehensive initiative designed to network with agencies to provide legal assistance, health screenings, tax programs and referrals to elders and families. Working closely with other departments in the City.

Clasby has been involved in the Senior Olympics, the Annual Senior Conference and the development of senior housing at Naval Terrace.

"I am extremely excited to return to a job in the city that I love," Clasby said. "Working with the seniors in this community has been a phenomenal experience. I know that Mayor Koch, who once served as the Council on Aging Director, is passionate about senior issues. It will be an honor to work in his administration."

Clasby is a native of Squantum, a graduate of North Quincy High School, Quincy College and the Franciscan University of Ohio.

Koch, School Officials To Meet On NQHS Crossing Issue

No one could have stopped a car to prevent last week's accident in which a teenager was seriously injured near North Quincy High School, according to a witness statement provided to police at the scene of the accident.

"The driver never had a chance. Even in the best of conditions, you couldn't stop in time," states the witness in the police report provided by Police Lt. Kevin Tobin.

According to the police report, she said she "pulled her jacket over her head, ran across the street without looking."

It was raining at the time, police said. She was transported to Boston

Medical Center with serious injuries.

Regardless of such circumstances, the accident is one more statistic indicating that that section of Hancock Street is dangerous for pedestrians due to the high traffic volume, the proximity of the high school, a McDonald Drive-Through restaurant, and the T station.

A seven-year-old was injured there in December and a 47-year-old father was killed at Hunt and Hancock Streets just over a year ago.

"It's been an area of consistent concern," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin who drives through the area every morning. One possible idea may be an island as the street is wide for crossing.

School Committee member Anne Mahoney said safety issues in the area will be discussed Friday when she and other school officials meet with Mayor Thomas Koch. Mahoney said that the NQHS Parent Teachers' Organization also plans to discuss the problem.

Traffic was a major issue in the recent mayoral campaign.

Mahoney said traffic issues on Hancock Street need to be studied as a whole, all along Hancock Street, as changes in one area impact another. Nearby is Sacred Heart Elementary School.

Both Mahoney who headed the Committee's Health, Safety and Security Committee and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee outlined major traffic improvements recently made in the area after Mahoney's Committee filed a report.

McNamee noted that, among other improvements in the area near NQHS, the City has retimed the signals, provided line markings that delineate specific moves, provided rumble strips, new signs and signals with arrows for turns. The pedestrian crosswalk signs are fluorescent.

"That's an inherently dangerous area," McNamee said of the Hancock Street crossing section. "It's a busy urban area that will never be made inherently safe," especially when "young children are not paying attention to traffic."

Calls On Bush To Act

QCAP Cites Heating Oil Costs Top Emergency

By LAURA GRIFFIN

President Bush must act immediately on the current heating fuel emergency, according to Beth Ann Strollo, Executive Director of Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP).

"He needs to release emergency fuel assistance right away," Strollo said last week, adding that her agency needs more fuel assistance urgently in order to help the hundreds of local residents in crisis.

QCAP, a non-profit organization with headquarters in Quincy, serves over 23,000 low and moderate income people on the South Shore and Norfolk County. The agency is funded through private and public grants and contributions.

Last year, QCAP aided nearly 3000 households through the Fuel Assistance Program. This year's numbers are already increasing.

"We think most people have already exhausted their benefits," said Tracy Donahue, QCAP Director of Planning and Development.

Strollo issued the SOS at a joint press conference with Taylor Caswell, Regional Director of the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The heating fuel emergency tops QCAP's current list of emergencies along with the housing and mortgage crisis, according to Strollo, who then accepted an oversized $40,000 replica check from Caswell.

The HUD grant funds are earmarked for financial education programs and family housing counseling which are of major importance, according to both Caswell and Strollo.

QCAP services include homeownership education, mortgage default and foreclosure assistance, homelessness prevention, credit and budget counseling, down payment assistance and Home Equity Conversion Mortgage counseling for seniors.

Through the education programs, participants learn "all the ins and outs" of mortgages and home ownership before purchasing homes, according to Strollo.

QCAP's First-Time Home Buyers program registered 390 households last year; of that number, 69 people purchased their first home armed with solid financial education.

"The value of housing counseling can not be overstated," said Caswell. "Housing education programs offered by Quincy Community Action Programs and other HUD-certified housing counseling agencies help families make informed choices...."

Mortgage Crisis

Strollo and Caswell addressed the current mortgage foreclosure crisis. Both urged families and individuals to get help early, as soon as they begin experiencing financial problems.

"Call early," said Stoller, "the minute, you get five, 10 days behind (on the mortgage payment)."

"The bad loans that people got into three years ago, the ARM (adjustable rate mort-

The molasses flowed into the street, knocked over the local firehouse and pushed over the support beams for the elevated train line. In all, 21 people were killed.

Hillary's Tearful Moments

Her critics have made a big deal out of Hillary Clinton's pre-primary emotional moments in New Hampshire.

Like she's trying to cry her way to the White House on a sympathy vote.

They have her as a calculating political ice lady with no feelings. Just wrapped in politics. No real warmth.

You would think she had never shed a tear before. Well, she did once right here in Quincy.

That was back in October 1996 during her visit as First Lady.

She drew a rousing crowd of some 10,000 to the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library for an afternoon rally for her husband President Bill Clinton, Vice-President Al Gore and other Democrats.

Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and other notable Democrats were here, too. But it was Hillary's show.

The late Paul Harold had a surprise for me that day.

HAROLD

"You brought tears to Hillary's eyes," he said.

What!

Actually, he was responsible for it happening. Here's how.

Hillary's father, Hugh Rodham, was my company commander during boot training at the Great Lakes, Ill. Naval Training Center during World War II. I was in Company 1968 in the Camp Green Bay section of the sprawling basic training facility.

After three months of training through a bitter winter, we graduated and the Navy took photos of the entire company and individual ones.

One of the photos was of Hillary's father and me, looking like a couple of Navy buddies.

Anyway, a few days before Hillary was scheduled to appear in Quincy, I happened to mention to Harold, one of those in charge of the visit, that I knew her father and that he was my company commander at Great Lakes.

I also told him that I still had a photo of us together.

"That's interesting," he said, and asked for a copy of the photo, which I gave him.

Mayor James Sheets, Harold and other city councillors were invited to meet the First Lady inside the library before she was to speak to the crowd outside.

While Harold was chatting with her, he pulled out the photo of her father and me and showed it to her.

"Wow!" she said, according to Harold, quite surprised to be standing in Quincy looking at a photo of her father. "Look at those two handsome guys." (Thanks, Hillary)

Then it kind of hit her. Her father had died in 1993. And seeing the photo of him as a young Navy chief petty officer was an unexpected sentimental surprise for her.

"Tears just welled in her eyes," Harold said. He then gave her the copy of the photo.

After the end of the speaking program, Hillary wanted to meet me and made her way through the crowd with Harold's help to where I was standing.

"Thank you so much for the photo," she said. "It was such a nice surprise."

She wanted to know what kind of a company commander her father was.

"Tough," I told her. "But only doing his job."

And, he was tough. No horsing around. It was: "You're in the Navy now. You're going off to war-not to a high school picnic. You better be ready."

We weren't overly fond of him at first, but by the time we finished boots, a bunch of kids who made up most of Company 1968 had gotten the message. And later

Sometimes I think I see some of her father's toughness in her. But I found out that day, she can be sentimental, too.

For the last four years of the Clinton Presidency I received a Christmas card from the White House.

I found her that day in 1996 to be a dynamic campaigner. Great on her feet. Articulate. Knowledgeable.

I remember writing at the time: "You may like her. Or dislike her. But you can't ignore her. She is a major player on the national political scene."

"There are those out there looking for the first woman president and see Hillary Rodham Clinton or someone like her."

Now campaigning hard to be that first woman president she finds herself the target of her rivals.

Barack Obama and John Edwards ganged up on her during that pre-primary debate in New Hampshire but Hillary knows how to play hard-ball.

By winning New Hampshire, she slowed down the Obama train-momentarily at least-and gave us more time to look him over. And the other candidates, too.

Obama is the best speaker among all the candidates-Democrat and Republican-but you would like to know more about what he would do as president. And what the other candidates would do including Hillary.

Right now I don't know who I'll vote for. Maybe a Democrat. Maybe a Republican. I'd like to hear more about the issues and where each of the candidates stands. I haven't heard enough to make up my mind.

Did Hillary shed her tear or two in New Hampshire for the sympathy vote as her critics claim?

I'd like to think it was a sign that as politically tough as she can be, she's only human, too.

Like that sentimental moment in Quincy.

HUGH RODHAM, Hillary Clinton's father, and Henry Bosworth at Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1924 real photo postcard view of the drive-way entrance to the Eastern Nazarene College at 23 East Elm Avenue in Wollaston. They had moved here in 1919. The building shown here was originally built as the retirement home for Josiah Quincy, Jr., when he completed his term as Mayor of Boston in 1849. He was the second of three Josiah Quincy's to be Mayor of Boston. After he died in 1882 the private Quincy Mansion School for Girls used his home until the college bought it. At the time of this picture, the college only had three other small buildings on its campus. As they expanded and built more buildings they kept this original building for many years, but finally the house was razed and part of this site is now home to their church on East Elm and Wendell Avenues. School Safety No. 1 Priority

I am writing in response to the letter published in the Jan. 3 edition of The Quincy Sun. It is my hope that the response will ease some of the concerns that may have been raised by the letter.

As the Director of Security for the Quincy Public Schools, I know that the School Committee along with the Superintendent of Schools hold the safety of our students and staff as the number one priority, as well as our police and fire departments. Our school committee has a locked door policy for all schools and has provided every school with surveillance equipment. When you visit any of our schools you are either met by a security person or have to sign in at the office. With our priority on security, we now have nine security officers in our high schools. These security staff also covers the other schools within the system as needed.

Mayor Phelan also made school security a number one priority. He budgeted two school resource officers who are housed in the high schools and act as resources to both students and staff, working closely with the deans. We are fortunate to have two Dare officers assigned to the elementary and middle schools. Their function in our schools is to work with elementary and middle school students, teaching decision-making skills in the areas of drug use and violence protection.

Some years ago the police formed a community-policing unit made up of ten patrol officers, a sergeant, and a lieutenant. These officers are assigned to different sections of the city. They are very familiar with the families in their area and some of the problems they may be facing. It is not unusual to see a community officer walking the halls of our schools speaking with some of our students and administrators.

In a new initiative, the Quincy Police are training in "emergency response" to any situation of a school safety nature. They are actually using our schools as training venues.

Quincy Public Schools has developed another very significant partnership with the Transit Authority Police. Out of this collaboration a new and very effective initiative has been formed. Working together, we have instituted a program called "Stop Watch." The program is nationally recognized as a way to get to know students in a non-threatening way to prevent violence and crime in the transit system and surrounding community. The program is a collaboration between school and court personnel and the Quincy and Transit Police Departments.

Another extremely successful program is our monthly "Roundtable Meeting." This is a proactive collaboration of the District Attorney's Office, the Quincy Police Department and Transit Police Department that meet at our monthly "Round Table" meetings where we meet to discuss issues of potential concern and offer training to members on current school safety issues and effective responses to these situations.

The tragic events that have taken place across the country have forced communities and specifically school departments to take a hard look at how to plan for and respond to potential incidents. The day after the Columbine tragedy I was charged, as Director of Security, to formulate an Emergency Procedures Protocol for the Quincy Public Schools. Collaborating with other school administrators, we attended as many training sessions as were available and, along with members of the Quincy Police Department, Quincy Fire Department, the Sheriff's Department and the District Attorney's Office, met to write these comprehensive procedures.

These emergency procedures are practiced at every school in the system in the fall and spring. These procedures are reviewed and evaluated at the end of each year and are revised as needed. Our "Emergency Procedures" have been used by many of our neighboring cities and towns as a template for their own procedures.

In closing, we are well aware of the fact that violence has and can strike anywhere. Our commitment to the safety and well being of students and staff is paramount. I am confident that we have systems and procedures in place and also know that vigilance is practiced by all. As always, administrators and I are available at any time to discuss concerns that anyone may have.

Critical Of Letter On School Safety

I read with interest Christina Randall's letter of Jan. 3 regarding school safety in Quincy.

One could perhaps sympathize with her lengthy tale of the city officials who declined to speak to her on the issue—although they may have taken her more seriously if instead of claiming that her "certifications" in "Death Education and Grief Counseling" qualified her as an expert on school safety—she instead possessed credentials in security or law enforcement. No doubt The Quincy Sun could give her a forum to present a summary both of her proposals to make Quincy schools safer and her estimate of the cost

Quincy's Yesterdays

Sheets To Submit $123.6 Million Budget

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor James A. Sheets said that he will likely submit his budget of $123,600,000 for fiscal 1992 by level funding fire, police and education while cutting all other departments by four percent.

The budget, which will be submitted to the City Council for approval the first week in April, doesn't include money for capital outlay or raises for employees in the city's 21 unions.

In his mid-term address 10 days ago, the mayor gave the school, police and fire departments top funding priority for FY'92, which will begin July 1. He said that he would not close one fire station as a means of saving city dollars. Instead, he said he would maintain the present levels of fire equipment and number of patrol officers.

ANSELMO WILLING TO RETURN TO BOARD

Former School Committee member Frank Anselmo whose resignation two weeks ago touched off a small political controversy regarding a successor, offered a solution to the issue of filling his seat.

In a phone interview with The Quincy Sun, Anselmo, 92, who resigned because of health concerns Jan. 2, said he would finish his term if the city permitted him.

However, Anselmo will not get the chance. Because his letter of resignation was signed and received by City Clerk John Gillis, Mayor Sheets said the resignation could not be withdrawn. Gillis, who contracted the state for its ruling, agreed.

The 1930s ushered in a style of music that became the most accessible and popular in jazz history. In 1935, when the United States was recovering from the Great Depression, big bands flourished as the dance craze swept the country. Nationwide exposure via radio broadcasts and recordings propelled swing music into popular culture. By the late 1930s and early 1940s, Swing had become the most popular musical style and remained so for several years. Pop standards sung by crooners who emerged from the Big Band tradition became pop icons in the late 1940s. Bandleaders such as Glenn Miller and Benny Goodman helped Americans get out of the Great Depression and onto the dance floor.

Please join us for our "Music of Our Lives" celebration. Enjoy fellowship with your friends, family and neighbors. It's a "Swingin' Affair" with Donnie Norton!

remained in effect until 6 a.m. Tuesday. We sent the DPW door-to-door to advise people to get their cars off the streets to make way for the plows."

"The city was prepared for the worst," said Mayor Koch. "I'm proud of the way we reacted."

Meanwhile, the weather was preparing another test for the Koch administration — a chance of snow this afternoon; snow and rain for tomorrow, according to the forecasters.

Gutro Trustee Of Harbor Association

Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro has been elected to the board of trustees of the clean water advocacy group, The Boston Harbor Association.

"We're thrilled that Doug Gutro has agreed to be on our board of trustees," said Vivien Li, the executive director of the TBHA.

"Doug was a pioneer in the revitalization of Wollaston Beach, beginning with his work in the 'Back to the Beaches' campaign and his extensive contributions to the development of the 1999 'Plan to restore Water Quality to Wollaston Beach.'"

"Doug was instrumental in securing funds to implement the plan, which has resulted in better water quality at the beach and his leadership in the 'Back to the Beaches' effort resulted in a number of improvements at Wollaston Beach.

"In addition, Doug has worked with volunteers in coordinating storm drain stenciling activities, which discourages dumping into storm drains which flow to Wollaston Beach and Boston Harbor."

Gutro said he "couldn't be prouder than to be asked to serve as a trustee to TBHA — an organization which has fought for a clean, alive and accessible Boston Harbor for more than three decades.

"Ten years ago, when I began my advocacy for a cleaner, healthier Wollaston Beach, it was The Boston Harbor Association who stepped up early and often to provide recommendations and resources that have led to a cleaner, purer coastline for Quincy."

Gutro is also a co-founder of the Friends of Wollaston Beach and a member of the Metropolitan Beaches Commission, a legislative-initiated group that is focused on the revitalization of public beaches from Nantasket to Nahant.

His term as a trustee of TBHA continues through November, 2010.

to the taxpayers of her recommendations, although surely she could have done so in her letter had she chosen.

That being said, since Ms. Randall claims to be knowledgeable on the subject and in the Columbine incident in particular, she would know that at Columbine (and as has been commonly the case in school shootings) the perpetrators invaded the school openly armed and began blazing away, something which all the metal detectors and guards in the world cannot prevent. Such shootings have taken place in the face of all manner of security measures; as to that, the Red Lake High massacre two years ago began with the gunman killing the security guard manning the school's metal detector.

The unfortunate truth is that the common element in all these attacks has been the ease in which troubled teens have obtained firearms.

New Opera Premieres Tonight At ENC

When Quincy composer Delvyn Case decided to write an opera about religious tolerance, he chose a rather unlikely source of inspiration: The Prioress's Tale, one of Chaucer's famed Canterbury Tales that features decidedly anti-Semitic overtones.

An assistant professor of music at Eastern Nazarene College, Case was only too aware of the sensitivity involved in a Christian liberal arts college presenting an opera based on an anti-Semitic story. He reached out, therefore, to local rabbis and members of the South Shore's Jewish community to gain their input as to the best way to transform Chaucer's tale into a moving musical plea for religious tolerance and cultural understanding.

The result is The Prioress's Tale, Case's original one-act chamber opera which will make its premiere at Eastern Nazarene's Cove Fine Arts Center tonight (Thursday).

Directed by Andrew Ryker, the performance will feature three of Boston's best young opera singers in the principal roles. A panel discussion involving both Christian and Jewish clergy will follow the 7 p.m. performance.

The Prioress's Tale premieres tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at Eastern Nazarene College's Cove Fine Arts Center, 23 East Elm Ave., Quincy. An encore performance will be held Saturday January 19 at 7 p.m. Admission is $10 for adults and $5 for seniors; students of all ages are free.

QCAP Cites Heating Oil Costs Top Emergency

gages) are coming up," said Strollo, urging people to act before an emergency. "Some folks really were misled."

"We can't save everybody; that's not our goal," said Caswell who cited the $125 million mortgage relief program recently packaged by the Federal Reserve Bank and five Boston banks.

Under the Federal Housing Administration program, qualified homeowners will be able to refinance their adjustable rate mortgages to fixed rate 30-year mortgages.

"If you're having a hard time making that mortgage payment, you've got to come in early," said Caswell who added that, unfortunately, "People don't want to admit they have a difficult situation."

Caswell described a family who lost their home after poor financial decisions. They were only five years away from paying off their mortgage when they ran into problems.

Unfortunately, they were only days away from the auction of their house when they finally sought help and that was too late, according to Caswell.

Success Story

In contrast, Strollo introduced a young woman from Wollaston whose home was saved through QCAP intervention. The young woman asked that her name be withheld.

"A foreclosure would have happened, due to our having a baby daughter and my being laid off for a year," the woman said of her family's financial problems. "These are things you can't always plan for."

Both she and her husband work and they've owned their home for seven years. They had a reasonable fixed mortgage rate, but that wasn't enough when problems hit.

She expected to return to work full time after their first baby was born. Then, there was one problem after another. Their baby was sick and she was laid off.

QCAP helped the family through the emergencies and helped the couple rebudget their funds.

Now, QCAP is "trying to help me refinance. I'm trying to get a lower monthly payment."

They're almost back on their feet and she expects to add a part-time paycheck to her husband's paycheck to help ease the family finances.

Most importantly, their baby is healthy now.

Looming Credit Crunch

For Strollo and Caswell, the current mortgage foreclosure crisis is just the tip of the iceberg. Both believe that a credit crisis is ahead.

Strollo described people using their credit cards for essential living expenses, "people who have been using their credit cards for food, heat, gasoline." They come in with thousands of dollars of credit card debt for essentials.

Sometimes, Strollo said, people are opening cards in their children's names to cover heating bills. "People are desperate to keep their heat on."

Strollo said those children will have bad credit before they are even of legal age.

"There has been a lot of loose credit flying around," said Caswell who agreed that financial education should start early. "It does need to start in high school."

Now, said Strollo, credit card companies are targeting high school students, teenagers in high school.

"Fifteen, sixteen year olds have credit cards. They shouldn't," said Strollo.

Both Strollo and Caswell pointed out how important good credit is in any purchasing, in job applications, and in housing.

For more information on refinancing an adjustable rate mortgage, under the FHAsecure program, visit www.fha.gov.

Strollo welcomes all inquiries on housing questions, education, at QCAP, 617-479-8181, EXT. 100.

Founded in 1965, QCAP serves Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton and surrounding Norfolk County and South Shore communities. The agency's motto is "Helping People Help Themselves."

QCAP's 23,000 individual clients and over 10,000 households come from a variety of social, economic and ethnic backgrounds. Of that number, 93% work, are unemployed and looking for work, or are disabled or elderly. Only 7% of the families receive welfare.

The agency's other programs include an emergency food center, free income tax assistance, English courses as a second language, and early education programs.

Use Caution With Space Heaters

I was reading a recent article pertaining to a couple of fatal fires and one statistic stood out; "Half of all residential fires occur between December and February..." (N.F.P.A.)

Why, the article for one refers to a specific accidental fire caused by an electric space heater. It refers to the NFPA statistic indicating that in 2005, space heaters caused 32 percent of home heating fires and 73 percent of deaths from such fires. While there are a number of other reasons for the significant increase in house fires during these months, the space heater issue is worth taking another look at.

Do not leave a space heater on during sleeping hours. I can recall a fatal house fire where a space heater was left unattended while household members slept, and more recently, one in Boston, which ignited bedding while occupants slept. Electric space heaters should never be left on within a bedroom while occupants sleep.

As most manufacturers agree, while in use, a space heater must have a minimum of a three-foot clearance from combustibles, bedding, newspapers, curtains and clothing. Make certain that it is placed upon the floor in such a manner to avoid tipping as well.

Any space heater used should have the label of an independent testing lab such as "UL," which conduct equipment safety reviews.

Never use them near a sink, bathtub or water. If an extension cord is used, make certain it is not faulty or frayed, use cords within their marked rating, and do not overload.

Seventy percent of these fires were caused when combustible materials such as bedding, rubbish or furniture were too close to the heater, and another 15 percent were caused by and electrical failure such as an overloaded extension cord.

With the rising cost of fossil fuels, space heater use tends to increase. This fact makes proper use of space heaters imperative. Please use them safely and be mindful of all the safeguards listed here and the recommendations specified on the manufacturer's instructions as well.

Let's get through these winter months without an incident. Pay attention to the recommendations, pay attention to detail and use space heaters safely.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

TREATING PSORIASIS OF THE FEET

The soles of the feet need to be tough but flexible. As a result, the soles are a common place for a person to get psoriasis. The condition can look pustular, swollen, or cracked. People need to address the problem quickly because it can be painful and make it difficult to walk. Depending on the condition, a podiatrist may recommend a topical combination of tar, salicylic acid, and steroids. He or she may also recommend putting medication on the affected foot, covering the feet with plastic bags, and then socks. Patients can try this while they sleep or for a few hours before going to bed. If topical treatments do not work, oral medications may be prescribed.

Are you plagued by psoriasis or another foot condition that makes every step a painful one? One of the best things you can do to take good care of your feet is to treat them to regular professional podiatric care. With all they do for you, your feet deserve it. We'll do all we can to teach you how you can achieve and maintain optimal foot health. State of the art facilities to treat all foot concerns, chronic conditions, injuries, and hereditary problems are available to you at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Call 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

REAL ESTATE

Good News For Home Buyers And Sellers

South Shore Real Estate . . . A Buyer's Market

By ART FOLEY

Broker/Owner

CENTURY 21 Annex Realty

When it comes to real estate, the home buyer is truly in the "driver's seat" when it comes to housing purchases in Massachusetts.

Inventory is high and prices are low...which means that working with an experienced real estate broker is more important than ever. With a wide selection of houses available, in all kinds of configurations and conditions, professional assistance in the form of a qualified broker can help potential buyers sift through the confusion and find the home that is right for them at a price that works.

One of "life's lessons" for would-be home-buyers is that there will always be people who must sell their home, whether it is due to relocation, financial reasons or a need for more space. With the influx of properties on the market and interest rates at a low, now is the ideal time for first time buyers or those looking to "buy up."

On the other hand, al-

though it is a buyer's market, motivated sellers, too, can still be successful. By aggressively pricing a home and staying in tune with current market trends, the seller can take advantage of price dips to sell to educated buyers. The end result, for both buyer and seller is the ability to either purchase a home that he or she may not have been able to afford a few years ago.

Putting all this into a local context, 386 single family homes have been sold in Quincy in 2007 with an average of 109 days on the market...more than double over the past five years. The average sale price has risen 17 percent since 2002, but we are currently experiencing a peak in sale price decreases. Sale prices in this area have declined seven percent since 2005.

Unlike other parts of the state, the South Shore...Quincy in particular...is at a distinct advantage when it comes to real estate, Quincy's proximity to Boston and easy access to public transportation makes the area attractive to buyers. And with gas prices on the rise and those inevitable snowy New England winters, Quincy's numerous public transportation points provide the accessibility of city living combined with the comfort of the suburbs.

As with other industries, though, change does not happen overnight. The South Shore might seem to be faring well during this economic downturn, but it will still be another year or two before we see any significant improvement. The real estate market has a major impact on the economy, and the Fed is currently working to lower interest rates to a reasonable level which should help boost the market and in turn the local and national economy. With a drop in interest rates, the hope is that the inventory will begin to shrink once again and the industry will level out. Buyers should do their homework regarding mortgage rates and the properties on the market...sellers should

Why 50% Of Homes Listed For Sale Don't Sell The First Time And What to Do About It

Quincy - If your home has just come off the market and hasn't sold, don't get discouraged. The reason your home did not sell may have nothing to do with your home or the market. In reality, your home may have been one of the more desirable properties for sale.

So Why Didn't Your Home Sell?

Last year almost half of the homes listed for sale never sold at all, and many sellers found that there was a tremendous amount a homeowner needed to be educated on to sell their home for top dollar in the shortest time period.

Don't risk making the wrong choices and losing both time and money on your investment. Before you hire a realtor, know the right questions to ask to save you time and money.

Industry experts have prepared a free special report called "How to Sell a House that Didn't Sell" which educates you on the issues involved.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report call 800-611-0351 and enter ID#1012. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Call now to make sure your home sells next time you list it for sale. www.sellthathouseinfo.com

Hints For Homeowners

Home-Improvement Expert Offers Tips On Uncovering Potential Problems

(NAPS) – Home repairs and maintenance are inevitable, but with careful planning and the proper tools, perhaps the next problem can be detected and prevented before it happens.

"The most common complaint from homeowners is that they didn't know they had a problem until it was too late," says Ron Hazelton, host of the nationally syndicated television series "Ron Hazelton's House Calls." "It's what's hidden behind things, obstructed from view or in a hard-to-reach place, that can cause potential problems."

Get the Gunk Out

Dirty, clogged gutters can cause problems, including flooded basements and damage to the home's foundation, exterior trim and landscaping. To clean, simply remove all debris with a gutterscoop or small garden trowel so water can drain properly. Plan to clean gutters at least twice a year, more often if the roof is directly beneath trees. Consider installing gutter guards to prevent additional debris from building up.

Don't forget to inspect one of the most used appliances in the home: the clothes dryer. "The most important maintenance for any dryer is a clear exhaust," says Hazelton. Many dryer failures and fires usually result from an improperly maintained vent system. Disconnect, clean and inspect the dryer duct once a month. This will dry clothing faster, increase life span and, most importantly, reduce fire hazard.

Keep Out the Cold

Keep cold air out of your house by sealing gaps around doors and windows with weather stripping. Also, inspect the exterior of the house for cracks and use caulk to seal. Proper installation is crucial when it comes to keeping a house warm throughout the winter and cool in the summer. To find out how much insulation is recommended, visit the U.S. Department of Energy's Web site at www.energy.gov.

But how can you tell if your walls, ceiling and attic already contain enough insulation? The new RIDGID SeeSnake micro inspection camera allows you to get behind walls or above ceilings to see for yourself.

The SeeSnake micro features a minicamera and bright LED lights on the end of a 3-foot flexible cable that allows users to see around corners and behind walls, and inside ducts, attics and crawl spaces. It fits into almost any space and projects an image of the hidden area onto a handle-mounted LCD screen.

"Insulation is one of the easiest, most cost-effective ways of increasing your home's energy efficiency, as well as saving money on energy bills," Hazelton said. "Plus, there's no need to remove large sections of drywall or create gaping holes in your ceiling just to get a peak at your insulation if you have the proper tools."

Fire It Up

Remember to replace your furnace filter regularly and have a professional service your heating systems once a year. Check registers, vents and ducts to make sure there is little or no debris. "With a tool like the SeeSnake micro, you can get a peek at these tight spots, and even remove a small piece of debris with their Hook Tip that can pick up, tug or pull small objects," says Hazelton. "A clean system helps heating and cooling equipment run more efficiently, conserving energy and saving money for homeowners."

Bulging Floor? Check Joists

Q. I saw your column a while back about sagging floorboards. Well, I have the opposite problem. A couple of spots underneath my living-room carpet feel like there is a "hump" there. When I pulled back a section of carpet to check if there was something underneath, I saw nothing. The underlayment looked fine. But those areas feel out of line with the rest of the floor. Do you have any idea what this could be? — Joseph T., Ogden, Utah

A. If you've ruled out problems with the carpet and subflooring, the joists underneath may be a possibility. These are large boards that support the subfloor, which can be accessed from the basement or crawlspace. Like all wooden structures, homes contract and expand, and settle over time, and this affects the structure in different ways.

In this case, it's possible that a joist has warped and is arching or bulging upward, creating that odd hump in the floor (that there are two spots, suggests two warped joists). This can be corrected by using the weight of the house to straighten the board.

Slide a level along the carpet to find the highest point of the hump. Mark it, then measure to that point from some element that extends to the area below (such as a heating duct or pipe). This measurement will help you mark the correct spot on the joist below where the high point of the bulge is centered.

Once you've found your spot, take a reciprocating saw and make a straight cut at that spot, starting at the bottom edge of the joist and going to just 3/4ths of the depth of the joist (do not cut all the way through the joist).

Leave the joist that way for a few weeks, checking the floor occasionally with a level. Don't place excessive weight on that spot. Let the joist settle naturally. Once the spot is flush with the rest of the floor, go back down to the joist. Reinforce it by nailing a board of the same width to the joist (alongside, not underneath). The reinforcing board should be at least 6 feet long and secured with 16d nails in pairs, staggered a foot apart. Drive three nails on either side of the cut.

She only showed us houses that met our criteria. We found our new home after looking at just three houses. We couldn't be happier!

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Jan. 7, at approximately 12:40 P.M., Officers' Daniel Francis, Matt Tobin and David Levine were dispatched to the 100 block of Quincy Shore Drive for a "Breaking and Entering in progress."

While en route to the location, Quincy Police Communications notified the responding units that the caller/victim reported that the suspect fled his residence in a brown Toyota Camry northbound on Quincy Shore Drive.

As units were checking the area, Sergeant Steven Igo notified communications that he had located the suspect vehicle behind 440 East Squantum Street (The Moorings apartment complex), which is within a mile of the crime scene.

Sergeant Igo informed communications that a lone white male occupied the vehicle. The Officers responded to assist Sergeant Igo, who had the suspect handcuffed when they arrived. During a pat-frisk of the suspect conducted by Sergeant James McNeil, numerous pieces of jewelry, collective coins, collective paper currency and prescription medication were retrieved from the suspect's pockets.

While Sergeant McNeil was assisting Sergeant Igo, Officer Tobin began an inventory search of the suspect's vehicle and found a metal pry-bar on the front passenger seat. Additional pieces of jewelry were recovered from inside the vehicle, along with a black shoulder bag that contained a slotted screwdriver and latex style rubber gloves. While assisting Officer Tobin with the search of the vehicle, Officer Francis recovered a hypodermic syringe and a clear plastic corner bag containing a brown powder residue.

Detective Paul Pieper transported the victim/caller to the suspect's location for the purposes of a show-up identification. The victim positively identified the suspect as the individual who had broken into his home.

Officer Francis then returned to the crime scene, where he and Detective William Monteith interviewed the victim, who stated that he had stopped home during his lunch break to walk his dog. He said that when he entered his apartment via the rear door, he immediately discovered wood shards on the hallway floor. He continued into his apartment and he observed his wife's jewelry to be scattered across their bed and his computer moved from another room.

The victim yelled out "hello" and then heard sounds consistent with someone being in the living room. The victim said he then observed a white male peer from around the wall separating the living room from the dining room. The suspect then fled on foot out the front door and the victim gave chase. The suspect jumped into a brown Toyota Camry and drove off.

The victim immediately called 911 to report the break and give out the license plate of the getaway car, which was instrumental in apprehending the suspect. Detective Monteith photographed the apartment and processed items for fingerprint evidence. The doorjamb had tool marks consistent with a pry-bar being used to gain access and the door lock mechanism was on the hallway floor.

After returning to the station, it was discovered that the suspect's driver license was suspended. It was soon discovered that the suspect has an active abuse prevention order issued against him. An abuse prevention order, which has many options, was obtained by his mother with the following stipulations: * 1.) No abuse * 2.) No contact, and stay away 100 yards * 3.) Stay away from the plaintiff's residence * 10.) Allowed to pick-up personal belongings * 12.) Surrender all firearms

This is significant because the suspect was apprehended in the parking lot of his mother's home (within 100 yards). He also used the telephone at the station to call his mother, which was also a violation. (This was prior to Officers learning about the outstanding order) The suspect, a 46-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with B&E to a Building during the Daytime for the Commission of a Felony, Possession of Burglary Tools to wit pry-bar, screwdriver, flashlight, latex gloves, Operating a Motor Vehicle after Suspension (Subsequent offense), Violation of Abuse Prevention Act, being within 100 yards, and at the residence of his mother, Violation of Abuse Prevention Act, calling his mother at booking, Larceny of Drugs, Malicious Destruction of Property over $250 to wit apartment door and Larceny over $250 (jewelry).

Nice Work!

RECENT BREAKS: Since December 1, 2007, there have been a total of 44 break-ins throughout the city. The majority have been to homes and are discovered after the resident gets home from work or school. This means that most of the break-ins are occurring during the day when no one is home. The method of entry varies, but one commonality is that the access point is either in the rear of the house or a side area

Fundraiser Jan. 25 At Sons Of Italy

Quincy To Host 2008 Babe Ruth World Series

Mayor Thomas P. Koch and the Babe Ruth World Series Committee are proud to announce that the City of Quincy will once again host the 14-year old Babe Ruth World Series at Adams Field during the month of August.

The contract signing will take place at the Jan. 25 World Series fundraiser to be held at the Quincy Sons of Italy. Mayor Koch, National Vice President Robert Faherty, and Quincy World Series President Dick Lombardi will officially usher in the 2008 series.

For the third time in the past six years, Quincy will serve as host for this exciting event. In 2003 and 2005, the World Series drew close to 60,000 visitors to Quincy. The all-volunteer Quincy Babe Ruth World Series Committee is now hard at work preparing to make the 2008 series bigger and better.

There are significant costs associated with bringing the World Series to Quincy, approximately $250,000. The Series Committee covers all costs associated with the event including fees, concessions, security, overtime, etc. Therefore, fundraising is a critical component of committee planning.

A fundraiser will be held on Friday evening, Jan. 25 from 7 p.m. until midnight at the Quincy Sons of Italy. The cost is $15 per ticket, two tickets for $25, and includes a pasta supper (7:30-9 p.m.). The fundraiser will feature entertainment by DJ Mark McGillicuddy, and a silent auction will also take place.

This event offers all an opportunity to support the efforts of the World Series Committee and enjoy an inexpensive night out.

For ticket information, contact Dick Lombardi (617-479-5724), John Norton (617-472-8894), Beth Luizzo (617-328-1416), Patti Stearns (617-472-0951), or Joe Brill (617-733-8026).

Senior leadership helped the Quincy girls' basketball team end last week with a 1-1 record.

The Presidents rallied from nine points down in the final five and a half minutes of play last Thursday night against Dennis-Yarmouth High School and came away with 57-51 league win.

Quincy (5-4 overall, 3-2 in the ACL), which lost to defending ACL North co-champion Whitman-Hanson HS 62-22 last Tuesday (Jan. 8), received 27 points from senior captain/guard Meagan Tobin, including two huge three-pointers during the final five and half minutes of play to grab an important league win.

"This was an important and big win for us," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch. "We are going to have to fight each game to give us the chance to make the post season tournament, and coming off the game against Whitman-Hanson we really needed a victory. At this point in the season, we can not afford to lose too many games and being 5-4 instead of 4-5 is a big plus."

The Presidents came out of the gates against D-Y firing on all cylinders, taking an early nine-point first half lead. Using their patented full court pressure defense, Quincy forced D-Y into a number of first-half turnovers, which they converted to easy buckets early.

"We came out and built a nine-point lead to start the game," Bretsch added. "It was a great way to open the game."

Senior center Kerri Ryan (16 points, 8 rebounds) made her presence felt early and often coming off the bench. Ryan gave Quincy an inside presence that has been missing for most of the season, and her play opened up shooting lanes for Tobin and senior captain/guard Marybeth Torpey.

"Kerri came off the bench and contributed huge," said Bretsch. "She has been on the varsity team for a couple of seasons, but she played a huge role in this win. Her play down low opened up the court and allowed us to take the early lead."

The Presidents would hold the lead heading into the halftime break despite allowing D-Y to cut the nine-point deficit to just one at the end of the first half.

"D-Y went on a late scoring run heading into the half, but we still held a lead and were in good shape entering the second-half of play, but our play in the third quarter was not our best."

The Presidents scored just seven points in the third quarter, turning their nine-point lead into a nine-point deficit, and forcing them to come-from-behind in the fourth quarter.

"They really beat us up in that third quarter, allowing us to score just those seven points," said Bretsch. "We needed to get back to what we do best (pressure defense) in the final quarter, and when we finally did that, we got back on track."

Torpey (eight points, eight rebounds) led the way for Quincy early in the final quarter, and it was her suffocating defense that got the winning rally going. She finished the fourth quarter by scoring all eight of her points and getting five of her steals.

"When we went back to pressure defense, Marybeth forced several turnovers that we turned into easy scores," Bretsch said. "She dominated on defense."

But it was Tobin who finally put the Dolphins away. Her two three-pointers (Torpey also buried a three-pointer during the comeback) in the final minutes of play put the game out of reach.

"Meagan is our best shooter and when she is on, she can really hurt opposing teams," Bretsch added. "The play of Tobin, Torpey and Ryan propelled us to victory."

Quincy played Sandwich HS on Tuesday night (Jan. 15) and the team is scheduled to play against Falmouth HS Friday night on the Cape.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustlin, D.M.D.

BRIDGING GAPS

Similar to a highway bridge spanning two embankments to connect a roadway gap, a dental bridge replaces missing teeth with prosthetic teeth (known as the "pontic" that span the gap between remaining healthy teeth on either side. One important function of the dental bridge is preventing the adjacent teeth from drifting into the empty space. The teeth to which a fixed bridge is attached are called "abutment teeth." In most cases, these abutment teeth must be prepared to accept the bridge. If they are reasonably healthy and free of large fillings, the dentist may recommend a resin-bonded bridge, which reduces the amount of necessary preparation by fusing the pontic to metal bands that are bonded to the abutment teeth.

Replacing missing teeth will improve the entire health of your mouth by keeping the surrounding teeth in position and can also help maintain the structure of your face and jaw. It's obvious that our smiles (or more specifically, our teeth) are important to us in many ways. We'll help you decide if and what type of bridge would be right for you. Our team is comprised of a group of professionals dedicated to making your dental experience as pleasant as possible. You will find our staff knowledgeable, courteous, and helpful. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer exceptional professional dental care. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesia with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. A "cantilever bridge" is used when there are healthy teeth (to which the bridge may be attached) on only one side of the gap, and the area is under less stress.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be hurt by a colleague's harsh criticism. But don't let it shake your confidence in what you're trying to do. A more positive aspect starts to appear by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're torn between your sensible self and the part of you that enjoys acquiring lovely things. Best advice: Wait for an end-of-month sale and then buy something wonderful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your artistic side has practical applications this week, such as redecorating your home or redesigning your personal stationery. Whatever you do, someone special will like it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You could be drawn into a problem 'twixt friends or family members. Best bet: Ask the questions that go to the heart of the matter, then get them all together for a group hug.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you love being the center of attention, your big Lion's heart impels you to share the spotlight with a colleague who helped you with that well-praised project.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your eagerness to act on a challenge is wisely tempered early in the week by a lack of necessary information. Things begin to clear up during the weekend. LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A relationship you'd hoped would keep going seems to be going nowhere. Close it out and move on to a brighter romantic aspect just beginning to manifest itself.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things don't go completely as planned this week. But enjoy the surprises, even if you have to adjust your schedule. Some of them could be quite delightful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Making choices is usually easy for a straight-shooting Archer. But a new development could deflect your aim. Try to put off decisions until you know more.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While part of you might prefer taking a more familiar path, let your more daring and — admit it — super-curious self see what the unexplored has to offer.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Those nasty types have slithered back under the rocks and present no more problems. Now's the time to move ahead on that promising new relationship.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new offer could clear up that lingering money problem. Also, a more confident attitude on your part might well help get that personal situation back on track.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of turning chaos into order. You're also generous with your help for those who seek it.

Recent Breaks

with an obstructed view. Some breaks were caused by doors being kicked in. In others, small panes of windows on a door or adjacent to it were broken and the suspect reached in and unlocked the door. Screens were cut to access windows, which were either propped (unlocked) up or forced open.

In a few cases, front doors were left unlocked. Since so many people work or are away from the home during the day, suspects look for indications that no one is home, like mail or newspapers, driveways without cars and upon closer inspection, listening for sound coming out of the home. What can be done? Firstly, residents need to reduce the chances that they will be victimized by eliminating blind spots caused by shrubs or bushes around windows and doors. Proper locks, like deadbolts, need to be installed so that criminals will have to hit the door numerous times, which creates noise. If there is a small window next to or part of a door that can be broken to gain access, the deadbolt lock should not have a twist handle inside. Ground floor windows should be locked and inserts installed that limit the height a window can be raised. Leaving a radio on with the volume up can be enough to discourage a criminal from your house! A car in the driveway is a sign that there could be someone home, so join a carpool and leave your car behind. The most important step residents can take is to report anything suspicious in their neighborhood, including people who may be soliciting door to door. Some criminals will use this ruse, appearing to be a salesman, knocking on the door repeatedly, determining that no one is home and then quickly forcing the door. As in the case above, arrests have been made for break-ins, but it is through the efforts of the community that we are able to prevent further breaks and catch suspects.

If you have information about a break-in or any other crime, please contact us on the 617 479 1212 line (not traced), the Detective Bureau at 617 745 5764, or if it is a drug related matter, the Drug Hotline at 617 328 4527. A new method is to use the Quincy Police online option by going to HYPERLINK "http://tinyurl.com/ytf6td" http://tinyurl.com/ytf6td, to report drug or suspicious activity.

Mark Crosby, Government Access Coordinator at QATV, cable channel 10, will be broadcasting a "Crime Watch" show about home security co-hosted with the Quincy Police Department. It is a very informative 30minute show on how to secure your home and will be shown on January 17th at 6:00 P.M., January 18th, at 8:00 A.M., January 23rd, at 6:00 P.M. and on January 24th at 8:00 A.M.

New And Expanded Website At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center has a new 153-page website with 60 per cent more content, an expanded directory of more than 200 physicians and a section written in Cantonese.

The new website also includes a guide to help patients during their stay at QMC, information about the hospital's clinical and medical services, a section for "out of town" visitors and a continually updated news and events section.

New navigation in the physician directory enables viewers to select a physician by name, location, specialty, gender or language spoken.

The website was installed by the public relations and marketing firm of Smith &

Suita, Inc., and is available at www.quincymc.org.

"Today's patients often research their health care choices on the Internet before deciding on a medical facility or health care provider," said Janice Sullivan, director of marketing and public relations at QMC.

"Our new Quincy Medical Center website makes it quick and simple for people to obtain the information they need to make intelligent health care choices.

"The website is often the patient's first contact and our new site is so customer friendly with engaging visuals, it also communicates our professional and compassionate approach to caring for patients and their families."

COYOTE PACK is making its home in the Squantum marshes not 100 feet from the upscale condos in Marina Bay. Two pups are missing from this family portrait taken by Steve Dunleavy of Schooner Lane.

'They're Getting Closer And Bolder'

Coyote Pack Haunts Marina Bay Condos

A pack of five brazen coyotes, a father and four offspring, are haunting the Squantum marshes not far from the upscale condos at Marina Bay.

"The pack has been here for a couple of years," said Steve Dunleavy, who lives on Schooner Lane. "You can see them not 50 or 100 feet from the house."

"Each year they get bolder and closer. You used to be able to shoot them away but now they just stand there and look at you. Each year they're a little less afraid."

Dunleavy's concern is for Beacon and Sparkle, his two cats, prime targets on which a suburban coyote can polish his or her hunting skills.

"We don't let Sparkle out," he said. "It's too dangerous. But Beacon is the kind that has to go out. We don't let her out at night but now the coyotes are around during the day, too."

Originally, there were six members of the pack but one of them vanished a short time ago. Dunleavy thinks it's the mother, who was reddish in color while the others are gray.

"They look very healthy," said Dunleavy. "They have nice fur and they certainly are not starving. You can see the pups playing in the snow and jumping on each other."

The pups appear to have been born last March or April and are just now coming into their own as hunters.

Dunleavy has found that there is very little that can be done about coyotes in suburbia.

"My wife talked to the animal officer," he said. "He gave her a brochure that warns her not to feed them and maybe you can scare them away by banging pots and pans."

"In theory, you can hunt them but you can't shoot a gun within 300 feet of a house in Quincy."

"You can't trap them, except in a box trap and Massachusetts law does not allow you to take a wild animal in one place and transport it to another."

Koch 'Committed' To Peace In Dept.

'Progress' On Police Problem

By TOM HENSHAW

The "temporary truce" between Police Chief Robert Crowley and the patrolmen's union has entered its second week amid hints that some progress is being made toward a settlement.

"The mayor has met with both sides once," said Christopher Walker, the policy director in Mayor Tom Koch's administration. "It's safe to say that there is some progress."

"I am committed to leading on this issue," said Koch. "I am committed to resolving the issues within our Police Department."

"I am committed to ensuring that our residents get the level of public safety they expect and deserve."

Other than that, both Crowley and Bruce Tait, president of the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association, as well as the mayor remained close mouthed about any movement in the long-standing feud.

"The mayor is fully engaged," said Walker. "We're not talking about results."

Is another meeting scheduled?

"No comment," said Walker.

Tait's blog, qppoa.com, the source of many vitriolic comments about the chief that eventually reached the media, was closed to the public as part of the truce.

The feud between Crowley and Tait dates back to a personal dispute at a time even before they became police chief and union president respectively.

Davis Calls Meeting On Proposed Lowe's Home Improvement Center

City Council President Jay Davis has scheduled a neighborhood meeting Wednesday, Jan. 30 at 7 p.m., to discuss proposed plans for construction of a Lowe's Home Improvement Center along Burgin Parkway and Penn Street.

Lowe's plans, also, involve relocating and reconfiguring Grasso Park on Columbia Street and the use of a portion of Penn Street.

The meeting will be held

JAY DAVIS

at the Ward 4 Neighborhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., according to Davis, the Ward 4 city councillor.

Specific details on the proposal are not finalized, according to a Lowe's spokesperson, Karen Cobb, who said the company would not have any comment at this time.

However, company representatives have met with local officials and will address neighborhood concerns, according to Davis who considers the retailer's project will be a major plus for the city.

Lowe's presence would add "a strong commercial base that will increase our tax base," said Davis who noted the home improvement business would bring good jobs and easy access to Lowe's for Quincy residents. In addition, he said the structure would be union-built.

"The closest Lowe's is in

Bell Says Voters Key To Democracy, Human Rights

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Some 350 persons gave civil rights activist Ron Bell a standing ovation at North Quincy High School Monday after he described how he helped register 40,000 new voters in Boston through the "The Power of a Dream."

Speaking at the 12th Annual Martin Luther King, Jr., Breakfast Celebration, Bell said that a nightmare came first, and, then his dream, then rejection, failure, and, finally a whopping success.

However, Bell warned the audience, as did other speakers, that much work must still be done and vigilance is essential.

Dist. Atty. William Keating sounded an alarm, stating that more and more elementary and middle school youngsters are involved in human rights violations.

Later, award recipient Alden Poole reminded listeners that King's message was one of non-violence and peace and the United States is at war once again.

"Dreams are essential. Dreams are what make us get up in the morning and go out into the world. Dreams are what inspire us and fuel our imagination," said Bell, the keynote speaker for the event organized by the Quincy Human Rights Commission

KEYNOTE SPEAKER Ron Bell, the governor's Director of Civic Engagement, got a standing ovation at Quincy's 12th Annual Martin Luther King Breakfast.

(HRC).

Bell had the audience responding with "Amen" and "Dunk the Vote" as he described his dream of increasing voter registration across the country.

Bell said his voter drive, "Dunk the Vote," was first shaped by the Charles Stuart case when black men were humiliated in Boston.

In that 1989 case, the killer-husband, Stuart charged that a black man killed his 30-year-old pregnant wife as she left childbirth classes at a Boston hospital. Police believed him.

At the time, Bell was the 27-year-old Director of the Mission Hill Community Center and he witnessed, day after day, the public degradation of young men.

"Even today, I can remember black men being strip-searched in front of the Center, in complete violation of their civil rights. This whole experience reminded me of what it meant to be black in Boston," said Bell.

In spite of naysayers and rejection from others in the community, Bell began a voter registration drive.

The drive sputtered at the outset because "the men whose civil rights were being violated, were not coming out to register, so I had to think of another way of bringing them together. I came up with a basketball tournament."

"Dunk the Vote" then took off because, in order to play, each participant had to be a registered voter.

"Why did I want to take on that kind of challenge?" Bell asked, citing friends who outright rejected both him and his project. Bell then quoted Dr. King who said,

"The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience, but where he stands at times of challenge and controversy."

Voters are essential to a free and democratic society that is committed to equality and human rights, said Bell who warned that, right now,

Gutro Ordinance Would Give Seniors Break On Water Bills

Senior citizens and low income homeowners in Quincy, beset by high costs of health care and energy, would get a break on their water and sewer bills under an ordinance proposed by Ward 5 City Councillor Doug Gutro Tuesday night.

The measure would give seniors over 65 and low income homeowners a 15 per cent annual discount on water and sewer bills, a savings similar to that enjoyed by residents of 23 communities in the MWRA district.

"This initiative is long overdue here in Quincy," said Gutro.

"Our seniors, many of whom are on fixed incomes, continue to face unrelenting increases in health care, prescription drugs and energy costs while a slowing economy diminishes their nest eggs.

"Our seniors and low income families deserve a break and this discount in water and sewer bills will provide that relief to those in our community who have long called Quincy their home, yet struggle to make ends meet."

Gutro estimated that slightly more than 3,500 over-65 and low-income households would be eligible for the discount. Each would save $100 annually, he said.

Eligible seniors would be those who have reached their 65th birthday prior to the fiscal year with no income or asset requirements.

Low income households would be those whose total income does not exceed 80 per cent of the median income in Norfolk County as reported by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Gutro's proposal calls for applications to be filed by April 1, 2008, with discounts taking effect in water and sewer charges billed on and after July 1, 2008.

Under the ordinance, senior applicants must have been residents of Massachusetts for the preceding 10 years, owned and occupied the residence for five years or be the surviving spouse who inherits the property and otherwise qualifies.

Eligible residents would be entitled to a 15 per cent discount for a single family residence, 7.5 per cent for a two-family residence, 5 per cent for a three-family residence and nothing for any other building.

Gutro's proposed ordinance was sent to committee for hearing.

Initial $50,000 Contract Signed

Flood Relief In Sight For Sixth Avenue Homes

Relief from chronic flooding is finally coming to harried residents of Sixth Avenue in Quincy Point.

Mayor Tom Koch signed a $50,000 contract with the engineering firm of Weston and Sampson to begin drainage improvements on the street.

"It's great news that we're finally moving forward," said Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

"We've identified a design and we're moving forward with that design. I appreciate the mayor's efforts in getting this project going. Hopefully we can start construction in a matter of months."

The contract calls for engineering to relocate an 800-foot drainage pipe and to re-direct storm run-off away from the backyards of Sixth Avenue homes.

Raymondi called the flooding a constant problem "for several decades."

"Councillor Raymondi has been a tireless advocate for this neighborhood and this project and I'm proud we're finally getting the ball rolling," said Koch.

"I look forward to working with Councillor Raymondi and all of our councillors on projects like these throughout the city."

Those Mayoral Challenges

Don't know how many eventful challenges Tom Koch will face as mayor.

Arthur Tobin had one—the Blizzard of '78—just after taking office. And brought Quincy through it with him.

Jim Sheets spearheaded an around-the-clock, around-the-weeks, around-the-months effort to keep Quincy Hospital—now Quincy Medical Center—open.

SHEETS

Hopefully for Koch and for all of us—he won't have to face challenges like that or the ones another mayor named Tom had to deal with.

That was Tom Burgin.

His tenure as mayor included part of the Great Depression, the Hurricane of 1938 and the days just after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

He was elected mayor in 1935 at age 33 and re-elected to three more terms, his fourth without opposition.

He was Quincy's first mayor to win re-election unopposed (Frank McCauley, Sheets, William Phelan the other three). He left that fourth term in November 1942 to serve in the Navy during World War II. (He came back from the war to become a city councillor and mayor under Plan E.)

Burgin reminisced a little about his years as mayor in this column in 1984:

The Depression: "Some 10,000 people in Quincy were on relief rolls and another 1,800 on federal WPA and PWA projects. It was pathetic and I will never forget it."

Hurricane Of 1938: "There were 3,900 trees down and all the fire alarm boxes and police (call) boxes were out of commission. There was no electricity."

Pearl Harbor Attack: Burgin rushed back from Cape Cod and went 72 hours without sleep readying the city for the war's demands.

A day later, 1,700 troops arrived in Quincy and the city had to billet them by that night.

"We had to commandeer Masonic halls, Knights of Columbus halls, church halls—but we did it."

His thoughts on other subjects:

His Favorite Mayors: He was reluctant to name them but after some thought and prodding, he confided:

"Of the recent ones, Jim McIntyre. I was close to him. I thought the world of him."

"In the early days I looked up to Perley Barbour and Joseph Whiton and had the highest regard for Charles Francis Adams."

Biggest Change In City: "The advent of the MBTA. It completely changed Quincy Square and Wollaston, Norfolk Downs, Atlantic and Quincy Adams."

TOBIN

Favorite Achievement: Surprisingly, it was not political but the YMCA building on Coddington Street. He was president of the YMCA when more than a $1 million was raised to build it, the biggest fundraiser at that time in the city's history.

"I think that would stand as the greatest memorial anyone would want to leave—it's dedicated to youth."

But there is another memorial.

Renaming Upland Road to Honorable Thomas S. Burgin Parkway:

"I was humbled. It was awfully nice of them to do it. How nice it is to give someone a pat on the back while he is here rather than send flowers later."

And, how did he vision the Quincy of the future?

"Quincy will go through a great change. It has been a residential city of houses but the apartments are coming.

"There will be a great growth in the business community—a substantial change in residential. But our zoning will help. There will be no skyscrapers."

Burgin died in 1986 at age 83.

No Quincy mayor served during more challenging times.

YOU'RE A YOUNG old-timer if you can remember the Presidents John and John Quincy Adams birthplaces painted red.

They were that color for some 80 years until the city turned them over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

Research, at the time, showed that Abigail Adams wanted the John Quincy Adams birthplace "stone" color and the John Adams birthplace white, as they where in 1807, the year the last member of the family lived there.

Later research, however, indicated that the John Adams birthplace actually should be unpainted as it now is.

QUINCY'S PAUL FELDMAN, who got his newspaper career start at The Sun, is now Foreign Editor of the Los Angeles Times.

He was recently invited to travel to North Korea with the International Reporting Project.

In an article on his impressions and observations he wrote:

"It didn't take long to realize that although the impoverished North Korean government appears willing to open its doors slightly to earn much needed hard currency, it's willing to do so only on its own terms."

Paul is the son of Marion Feldman Needel of Quincy and the late Jason Feldman who owned the popular Jason's Music and Luggage Shop on Hancock Street in Quincy Center.

Energy Crisis Topic Of Library Forum Feb. 3

The public is invited to a free National Issues Forum discussion on "The Energy Problem: Choices for an Uncertain Future" Sunday, Feb. 3, at 2:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

The non-partisan forum will provide citizens an opportunity to gather, talk, listen and learn of the threat to the American way of life through unstable sources of energy in hopes of finding a workable solution.

During the forum, participants will consider three possible approaches to the problem, reducing dependency on foreign energy, developing non-fossil fuel alternatives and reducing consumer demand for energy.

Free booklets on the topic will be available for participants prior to the forum. To register and obtain a booklet, call 617-376-1316 or e-mail quref@ocn.org.

The forum is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD of Bird Street in Houghs Neck was postmarked in 1930, but it was published before 1920. Taken from near what is today's Edgewater Drive, the view is towards Macy Street, which crosses about six houses down. At the time of this picture, most of the cottages in Houghs Neck were still summer residences. Most of those shown here have been somewhat altered over the years, some to gain a better advantage of their water views, but all are now year-round homes. The one on the right has been replaced. The street looks pretty narrow here and this section of Bird Street was accepted by the city in 1934, but is still only 33 feet wide. What appears to be a street across the foreground is misleading. There never was a street there. This is one of a series of black and white Houghs Neck picture postcards that were artistically augmented by the publisher Charles A. Litchfield who lived in Merrymount. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Police Department Issue Putting Safety At Risk

Recent news reports have now confirmed what I have witnessed for many years—Quincy Police Department patrol officers sitting in their police cruisers parked in parking lots reading newspapers and drinking coffee, not performing their jobs. Now that the Patrolmen's Union President Bruce Tait has publicly confirmed this, the secret is out. This is putting the safety of the City of Quincy at risk and must be stopped immediately!

If Patrolmen's Union has a disagreement with Police Chief Crowley, then deal with it as professionals, not by shirking your job responsibilities. As long as their paycheck is issued by the City of Quincy and funded by the taxpayers, then do your job! If they fail to perform their job, the officers should be disciplined like any other employee would be for failure to perform their job responsibilities. Also, if they don't like working for Chief Crowley, then the option to go find another job elsewhere is available to them.

I would like to recognize those members of the Quincy Police Department who do an outstanding job each day, but we all know it only takes the actions of few to ruin it all!

Mayor Koch, here is your first opportunity to show true leadership. Please address this issue with all parties and ensure public safety becomes the number one priority for the Quincy Police Department. Also, this can be a source of revenue in these days of increased fiscal demands.

Senator Obama Special Person

Presidential candidates, both Democratic and Republican, are all anxious to serve America and the world in these troublesome times of history. All of them deserve our admiration and respect. The future U.S. President should include all of them in their Advisory Committee.

I find Senator Barack Obama to be the best of the best. It is unforgettable that before he joined the U.S. Senate and without Washington experience he was against the war on Iraq. Senator Hillary Clinton, I cannot forget, was for war on Serbia and for war on Iraq.

Senator Obama's father is from Kenya and his mother from Kansas. Thus he is the "Kenya, Kansas Kid." Senator Obama is very special.

But to describe a very special person, especially a special politician is an impossible task. The best we can do is to say that some special person resembles some other special person.

If Senator Stewart Symington had been Senator Barack Obama's contemporary, he would have used the same praise for him as he used for Senator John F. Kennedy: "Senator Barack Obama has something special that the rest of us do not have."

Congressman Bill Delahunt was able to size up Senator Obama and endorse him before he waited for Iowa and New Hampshire to vote. Delahunt would be a very precious addition to Obama's cabinet.

Senator Obama preaches the same ideology to his fellow Americans and to his fellow citizens of the world inscribed in our money, "In God We Trust, E Pluribus Unum"—Unity in Diversity.

Gen's Tiramisu Bowl

Here is a great recipe I received from my cousin Gen following a Christmas lunch we recently had with several cousins.

When you think of tiramisu, lady fingers come to mind because that's what they usually are made with. But his recipe is done with vanilla wafers and one surely to please.

Tiramisu Bowl

- 1-ounce package of cream cheese (softened)
- 3 cups cold milk
- 2 packages Jell-O vanilla flavor instant pudding and pie filling.
- 1-8 ounce tub of cool whip topping, thawed and divided
- 48 vanilla wafers
- 1/2 cup brewed coffee, cooled, divided

2 squares semi-sweet baking chocolate (coarsely grated)

1 cup fresh raspberries

Beat the cream cheese in a large bowl until creamy. Gradually add the milk. Add the dry pudding mix and stir well. Then add the whipped topping.

Line the bottom and sides of a bowl with half of the wafers. Drizzle with half of the coffee, layer half of the pudding mixture over the wafers, and then top with half of the grated chocolate. Repeat all layers starting with the wafers and coffee. Top with remaining whipped topping and the raspberries.

Refrigerate for at least two hours if you can wait that long and then enjoy!

Girl Scout Cookie Sale Underway

The Girl Scouts' annual cookie sale is underway locally to benefit local troops in the Patriots' Trail Council. The cookies will be sold through March 16.

The Girl Scout cookie sale is now over 100 years old with its beginnings in a Muskogee, OK kitchen. The program is designed to help Scouts develop leadership skills, set goals, learn money management and develop marketing skills.

Not only are the Scouts selling the traditional favorites, but, this year, they've added Cinna-Spins, a cinnamon swirl cookie packaged in five ready-to-grab-and-go 100 calorie packs.

Traditional favorites like Thin Mints, Caramel deLites, Peanut Butter Patties, Shortbread, Peanut Butter Sandwiches, Lemonades, and Thanks-A-Lot delights are also available.

All cookies are zero trans fat per serving in compliance with the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations.

The Patriots' Trail Council is one of the largest organizations in Greater Boston dedicated to young girls. The Council serves 23,000 Scouts with 10,500 adult volunteers in 65 cities and towns.

Once the baker is paid, all funds from the sales of cookies remain in the area where the cookies are sold. The proceeds are used for council projects, such as maintaining campsites, providing travel assistance funds, and the expenses of leadership programs for adult volunteers.

Some councils allow troops to use a portion of their revenue for special trips to museums or exhibits, camps and community service programs.

The Patriots' Council chose ABC Bakers of Richmond, VA, for the 2007-2008 season.

Girl Scout cookies are $4 a box. For information on local sales, please visit www.ptgirlscouts.org.

QUINCY COLLEGE graduates waiting in line to receive their degrees on stage in the grand ballroom of the Quincy Marriott Hotel during the recent winter commencement.

Winter Commencement Held At The Quincy Marriott

Quincy College Awards Degrees To 156 Graduates

Twenty-three Quincy residents were among the 156 students who received degrees and certificates from Quincy College at its winter commencement held recently at the Marriott Hotel in Quincy.

Commencement speaker Susan G. Paris, assistant dean of Sciences and Quincy College alumna, presented a heartfelt speech filled with personal recollections and supportive encouragement about encountering self-doubt throughout her life. "The new and unknown will always be a little frightening, but in a good way," she told the graduates.

After her speech, Paris was awarded the Distinguished Alumna Award, presented to her by Quincy College President Martha Sue Harris.

President Harris then introduced two more special guests, awarding them with two distinct awards. Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti was awarded the Certificate of Appreciation to the Sheriff's Office for providing the Honor Guard for Quincy College commencements as well as his efforts and contributions to the local community.

John Warren Geils, Jr., also known as Jay Geils of the legendary rock and roll group The J. Geils Band, was awarded an honorary associate's degree for his contributions to music and education. Geils addressed the audience and said to the rows of graduates, "Pursue your dreams no matter how crazy."

Graduates, faculty, staff, families and friends were treated to an enlightening and good-humored student reflection, which was presented by fellow classmates and winter graduate, Barbara Pickering. Pickering reminisced about some of her favorite and most memorable classes offering up some witty comments about her experience getting through math and the uniqueness of her favorite professors.

Pickering received loud applause and a standing ovation from the audience as she ended her speech by saying to her fellow graduates, "We need to take life one step at a time, but we must, we must keep stepping!"

Following Pickering's speech, President Harris and the Quincy College Board of Governors lined up to the front of the state for the awarding of the degrees. One by one, each student adorned in commencement regalia marched to the stage to receive their diploma.

As the graduation ceremony came to a close, and when the last person of the recessional march exited the hotel's grand ballroom, graduates with their families and friends lingered in the hallway congratulating and wishing the best of luck to their fellow graduates and friends.

Abigail's Crossing Gift Shop Plans Closing By March 31

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Abigail's Crossing, a landmark gift shop in Quincy Center, will close permanently in early spring, according to shop owner Joanne Dondero of Quincy.

"It's not for financial reasons; it's a life change," Dondero says, "I want to go out as a success."

Dondero said her business is thriving, but she's decided now it's time for family, her oil painting and travel with her husband Hank.

"Quincy needs a gift shop and Quincy needs the business," Dondero said, but added, "It's just that my family is more important. If I keep putting it off and putting it off, these things will never be done."

"I worked very hard to maintain a level of pride and reputation that I'm proud of," said Dondero in explaining why she won't sell the shop, its inventory, or its name to a new business owner. She welcomes newcomers to open a similar store and suggests they, too, can be a success.

The Quincy Square landmark, located across from the Church of the Presidents, opened Tuesday, Nov. 16, 1993 at 1352 Hancock St. and moved a few doors up to its current location at 1360 Hancock St., four years ago.

Everything in the store will be marked down 15% when the closing sale begins Friday, Feb. 1. Dondero expects to lock up for the final time on March 31. The shop will be missed.

"It's hard to talk about," said Maralin Manning, Executive Director of the Quincy Business Association who considers the closing of Abigail's Crossing a big loss for Quincy Square.

"She is a stellar retailer..." Manning said, "She's built such a reputation for quality. I understand her wanting to close out the name."

However, Manning said she hopes that another gift shop will move in at that location quickly, "The spot is great... We need the business."

Fifteen years ago, Dondero found the location during her daily walks with a friend. She decided a gift shop would be the ideal business. Her husband helped her pick the unique name that identifies the city and the shop's location across from

"civil society is shrinking. We are becoming a country of the corporations, by the corporations and for the corporations."

"Our democracy, that means government by the people, is underfunded," said Bell who then described outdated voting equipment, bridges that fall down, schools that fail, bigger potholes, bigger deficits and smaller expectations for Americans.

"We need to change that, because, without voter turnout and participation in the process, special interest groups are running the government and the country. We need to organize people and build power in the community."

Each of Monday's speakers echoed Bell's message and stressed the need for sacrifice and vigilance in the eternal search for human rights for all.

Keating warned that a younger generation of children needs immediate attention as he is witnessing more and more human rights offenses involving younger and younger children.

Keating said that, more and more, "the unfortunate acts of young people" are coming to his attention. The offenders are now younger and younger, in "late elementary and middle school years. They are younger, I think, than when I took office," said Keating.

Keating then quoted King as he urged all to "straighten our backs and work ever harder."

"Freedom comes at a cost," said Rev. Dr. Thomas Phang, Canon for Asian American Ministry, Episcopal Diocese in his opening prayer for the breakfast participants.

Phang urged his listeners to "continue to speak out against injustice" so that Dr. King's vision "may not be a dream, but a reality."

Mayor Thomas Koch congratulated the audience for braving the sub-freezing temperatures and bitter wind to participate in the event.

"It is important to come together," said Koch adding that the actions of evil persons are not as dangerous "as the appalling silence of the good people."

"Quincy will not remain silent...." promised Koch.

Event organizer Ann Yeomans, Chairperson of the HRC, said that commission members "do want to work with the schools, talk about human rights."

Yeomans, Keating and City Council President Jay Davis presented the awards for the three recipients, Dr. Joseph McDermott and Janet and Alden Poole. Moderators were Kumu Gupta, HRC Vice-chairman and Harvey Solomon, HRC treasurer.

Elizabeth McDermott accepted the plaque on behalf of her husband who is temporarily hospitalized at Quincy Medical Center. Dr. McDermott, a retired optometrist, is a long-time activist and member of the Human Rights Commission.

Alden Poole reminded the audience that King's message was one of non-violence and that King rejected war as the solution to world problems.

Unfortunately, Poole said the United States has not progressed toward peace in the years since and he noted that there are "21 different countries we have bombed."

On his chest, Poole wore an array of medals earned during his years as a combat veteran of World War II. He said he wears what he called the "fruit salad" of medals because they give him "credibility when I speak against war." He is a member of Veterans for Peace and of Disabled American Veterans.

The audience applauded when his wife Janet, in her acceptance speech, described her recent arrest for protesting the war in Iraq.

Both Pooles have spoken on non-violence, war myths, the depleted uranium cover-ups, and the death penalty at colleges, high schools and parishes. They were, also, active in raising awareness of the evils of apartheid in South Africa.

Janet Poole chaired the English Department at Woodward School for 18 years and was president of the Quincy League of Women Voters.

Alden Poole was former executive news editor at the Boston Herald and taught at Simmons College where he was also chairman of the Department of Communications and is emeritus professor.

Young People Help Make King Breakfast Success

Adults gave most of the speeches Monday, but teenagers cooked and served the food and kept the music going at Monday's Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast Celebration at North Quincy High School.

Seventeen-year-old Allegra Fletcher offered a solo rendition of "Lift Every Voice And Sing," and, then, encouraged the audience to join the chorus and, later, the singing of "We Shall Overcome."

In addition, 17 youngsters, ages 7 to 11, from Germantown Neighborhood Center had a major impact on the audience.

Midway through the event, the 17 youngsters, each carrying a portrait of King, took the microphone to offer short, but powerful, one-sentence lessons from King and their thoughts on Human Rights.

The food was the best ever, according to Ann Yeomans, chairperson of the Quincy Human Rights Commission, who congratulated the Quincy High School Culinary Arts Class for their superb cooking.

Six teenagers, members of the high schools' Robotics Club, volunteered their holiday morning to serve the 350 guests at North Quincy High School.

Servers were Bao Nguyen, 18, and Tim Schow, 17 of North Quincy High School and Vincent Wong, 17, Fan Li, 17; Allen Barrett, 17; and James Keith, 17, all of Quincy High School.

Overseeing the food serving were the Robotic Club's coordinators, Paul Mouriello and Charles Richard, who were joined by Ginna Scanlan, Director, Dept. of Career and Tech Education and Donna Betrand, secretary.

The youngsters from Germantown who spoke at the breakfast were Bianca Cadet, David Pham, Tien Le, Jennifer Luo, Isabella Batres, Katherine Dormady, Tanea Savage

Vanessa Ly, Linda Do, Cyanna Manning, Joshua Quinlan, Nathan Quinlan, David MacLathlin, Ja'von Moor, Gieovanny Soto, Olivia Rothwell and Talya Peoples.

A Job Well Done

On Jan. 14, at approximately 5:15 p.m., Detective Tom Cleary assisted Boston Police Officers in the 300 block of Granite Street, serving an arrest warrant for Breaking & Entering, Malicious Damage of Property Over $250 and Possession of Burglary Tools.

Upon arrival, Quincy Police Officers joined Boston Police Officers in surrounding the perimeter of the dwelling. Detective Cleary and Boston Police Sergeant Dalrymple approached the front door cautiously and confirmed the name of the suspect to the name on the mailbox. The Officers rang the doorbell numerous times and knocked on the door numerous times. By looking through the front door window, Detective Cleary could see a small boy on the couch watching TV.

As the Officers knocked, the small boy would look over at the door and then roll back over on the couch, appearing to be sleeping. After approximately 10 minutes of this same activity and with no response from an adult at this home, Detective Cleary called for the area supervisor, Sergeant Patrick Faherty, to respond to this location over concerns that the little boy might be home by himself.

While waiting the arrival of Sgt. Faherty and maintaining the perimeter, Detective Cleary continued to ring the doorbell and knock on the front door and window. Boston Police Officer Joseph Zanolli was watching the north side of the home that had views through the living room and kitchen windows, when he saw the kitchen window open and a male start to exit the window attempting to flee. When the Officer identified himself and ordered the suspect out and to the ground, the suspect retreated back inside. Based on past booking photos of the suspect, the Officer was able to positively identify the suspect climbing out of the window as the person the warrant was for.

A few minutes later, the suspect started to come out of the window again. He was ordered to walk out the front door with his hands up. Officers watching from the perimeter radioed that the suspect was walking toward the front door, and then he suddenly stopped and changed directions. With the concern of Officer safety as well as the safety of the little boy and others possibly in the home (other names on the mailbox), Detective Cleary forced open the locked front door by kicking it in.

As soon as the door was breached, the Officers witnessed the suspect run towards them. When the suspect failed to comply, Officers rushed him and brought him to the floor, where he was handcuffed. For Officer safety purposes, a protective sweep (a search for others hiding inside the apartment) was conducted.

One female adult came out of a room and into the hallway crying hysterically. Another female emerged from a room, and then ran toward a front bedroom. Both females were apprehended and questioned, while the little boy was interviewed and determined to be okay.

Officers inside the apartment needed a search warrant to closely examine each room for evidence related to the warrant. In this case, in plain view were six laptop computers stacked on the floor and as well as two computer projectors, two printer-fax-copy machines, a keyboard, computer equipment, cables, and power adapters. In the living room and kitchen areas were numerous tools, power saws, hand tools, tool boxes empty and full, canvas tool bags, pry bars, industrial style cable cutters and small cable cutters.

The suspect, a 35-year old Quincy resident was transported to the Quincy Police Station and booked, then turned over to the Boston Police.

This case shows just how unpredictable police work can be. Each case presents its own unique set of circumstances. Here, Officers had to ensure the safety of the child knowing that the suspect was inside the apartment with him. Decisions often have to be made quickly and with limited information and once a plan is constructed, it can change or be aborted as a reaction to what the suspects or others present do.

Nice Work!

'Progress' On Police Problem

It began straining the patience of the public when it was reported that Quincy police officers were arresting fewer speeders and drunken drivers to spite the chief.

In the period between 2006 and 2007, civil citations for speeding dropped from 1,543 to 1,139 and arrests for speeding went down from 596 to 505.

Public outrage reached a crescendo when Tait was quoted as saying:

"It's much easier to sit behind a building somewhere listening to sports radio, drinking a cup of coffee.

"In talking to the guys, the attitude seems to be, 'Why should I stick my neck out?

We get paid the same regardless of how many cars we stop."

But Tait said he had nothing to do with the apparent boycott of speeding tickets.

Even as Crowley moved into the chief's office in 2004, cars of union members started sporting bumperstickers reading "2012: A New Beginning," referring to Crowley's mandatory retirement year.

In the past year, the chief and the union headed by Tait have tangled over:

- What the union called Crowley's "deliberate" order to Officer Michael O'Brien to drive a cruiser after his license had expired so he could cite him for it.

- The chief's suspension for five days without pay of Officer Joseph McGunigle after he refused to stop ticketing his neighbors for violation of the dog laws.

- Crowley's plan to unilaterally narrow the window for vacation days so that the patrolmen could not take single day vacations outside the vacation season.

- The reported failure of Crowley's department to provide full coverage of the 13 sectors of the city 24 hours a day, seven days a week, a complaint that reached the City Council.

Crowley told the Council that staffing never fell below 11 sector cars on a shift and Tait called the chief's comment "a blatant lie."

term in November.

"After all, I'm just moving across the hall," he said. "I'm looking forward to it. And I'm looking forward to remaining on the Council and working with the mayor for the next term."

The superintendent-director is charged with supervision of the 300-acre facility in the town of Walpole that serves the 28 communities in Norfolk County.

Its curriculum is similar to a vocational-technical school with its emphasis on farming and related subjects.

"This is an exciting time for Norfolk Aggie and under his leadership and vision, our school will maintain its status as an excellent agricultural school," said Angela L. Avery, who is retiring as superintendent-director July 1 after 10 years on the job.

John Hancock Plunge Jan. 26

What happens when you're standing there on the beach in your bikini and the temperature drops into the low 20s and the weatherman swears it's going to snow?

Well, for one thing, they won't let you go in the water.

That's what happened to those hardy souls who were ready to take the second annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge into the waters off Mound Street Beach last Saturday.

The Plunge, a fund-raiser for Interfaith Social Services, has been rescheduled for Saturday, Jan. 26 at the same time (12 noon) and the same place (Mound Street Beach, Quincy Point).

This time, and in the future, it's damn the icebergs, full Speedo ahead!

"We goofed by listening to the weather reports this week," admitted Chickie Abdallah, the event coordinator.

"We were very concerned for the safety of our participants in the Plunge having to skip and slide to the waters. "Therefore, in the future, the annual John Hancock Birthday Plunge will be held on the Saturday closest to his birthday (Jan. 23) no matter what the weather turns out to be.

"Congratulations to the hardy folks for speaking up.

"We have listened and have learned that, when folks are volunteering to raise money for Interfaith Social Services which helps so many families in need, they are very determined."

There is still time to enter the 2008 Plunge as a Full Plunger or a Waist Wader or a Knee Higher or a Dunkin' Toe Nut.

For more information, contact Chickie Abdallah at 617-479-2142 or Leo Kelly, chair of the Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission, at 617-773-1534.

Triple Header For Paglierani Family

Quincy Artist Wins White House Honors, Sons Navy Acclaim

By LAURA GRIFFIN

One might say that Wollaston's Paglierani family won a triple-header or the Triple Crown over the recent holidays.

Anet Paglierani, the mother, was honored at the White House and two Navy admirals cited two of her sons for their accomplishments.

All three ceremonies were held within three days in Washington, DC, and Virginia.

On Nov. 28, First Lady Laura Bush personally welcomed Anet to the White House where she congratulated the Quincy artist for her hand-painted Christmas ornament decorating the White House tree.

Anet's ornament depicts the Adams mansion, birthplaces, and the Mendes bible. Her ornament was chosen through a contest by the National Park Service to represent Adams National Historic Park.

"Thank you for helping us celebrate America's natural and historical treasures..." wrote Bush in her letter congratulating Anet.

On that same day, Navy Admiral David Venlet cited her son, Joseph Paglierani, for his achievement as senior executive and Deputy Program manager at the AV-BB Harriet Joint Program office.

Two days later, Admiral William Landay, ONR, awarded the Naval Research's 2006 Cheapskate Prize to her son, Michael Paglierani, and a second civilian, Robert Roush.

"She was so excited about

THE ADAMS MANSION is depicted in this hand-painted ornament by Wollaston's Anet Paglierani. The ornament was hung on the White House Christmas tree.

it; we almost had to give her smelling salts," said Julie Molloy, Publicity Director of the Quincy Art Association, as she recalled her friend's response to all the accolades.

"She not only got to go to Washington to see her ornament on the tree," said Molloy, "but all three ceremonies were in Washington at the same time." The family members then celebrated together.

"She was one of the original founders of the Quincy Art Association," said Molloy of the South Shore art group which now numbers some 500 members and is housed in the Little Building, the original Quincy High School on High School Avenue.

Anet's daughter, Elena McClanahan of Foxboro, accompanied her to the White House and other ceremonies. Their father, Albert, was unable to attend due to illness.

A third son, Steven of Marston Mills, was overseeing an inspection by the Coast Guard at the Steamship Authority on Cape Cod where he works as an engineer.

All three sons are following in their father footsteps as engineers, according to Anet who added that Michael also inherited her artistic ability.

"We are so proud of her," said Joseph whose work entails managing trade relationships on specific projects between the United States, the United Kingdom, Spain and Italy.

His expertise involves identifying cooperative projects in which the four international partners can share costs and solutions. He is also responsible for insuring that United States defense security requirements are met.

Joseph and his family of Valley Lee, MD arranged a special visit to the White House to see his mother's ornament on the Christmas Tree.

The United State Navy's Cheapskate Prize is a highly coveted honor for individuals and teams who have "clearly demonstrated initiative, creativity and the successful accomplishment of a project that saves costs through Science and Technology (S&T)."

Michael's award was a major honor but its name actually brought tears of laughter from his mother when she first heard the news. She thought that he was kidding. "You're pulling my leg," Anet told her son, "You must be kidding."

"We dubbed him 'cheapskate' a long time ago because he collects things. Isn't that funny? It's an actual award.... Of all the funny names."

In addition to his engineering work, Michael is an astute antiques collector, refinisher and dealer whose many finds fill his home. One of his home additions features stained glass windows that he found and installed himself, according to Anet.

Once, as a boy, Michael collected driftwood and attached three-dimensional shapes, such as shells and lobstertraps on them. He then took them to a crafts sale in Squantum for his mother's table. That day, Michael sold more items than his mother.

Michael's always collected things, said Anet, adding that he has her artistic ability and his father's engineering skills.

"I'm not crazy about the name of the award," said Michael who now lives in Portsmouth, RI. However, he chuckled and said he takes the family teasing in stride.

"We're more proud of our mother," said Michael, describing her talent and dedication. "We're just working people."

As for her visit to the White House, Anet said, "I was awestruck," and added that she'd just finished reading a book on John and Abigail Adams and thought to herself, "I'm bringing Quincy back to the White House."

Anet loves Quincy and said artists here "don't have to go far to look for a subject to paint." She described the beaches in all seasons, the marshes, and the yachts clubs at sunset "plus all the historical subjects."

As a younger woman, Anet designed greeting cards for Rustcraft. She has sold many of her oil paintings to corporations and several works hang in the city's municipal buildings.

She and her husband have nine grandchildren. They raised their children in the Wollaston home where they've lived for 55 years.

"I sold my home for a nice price and had more than enough to move to Linden Ponds."

Protecting Your New Home And Family

(NAPS)—Congratulations on owning your new home. You've saved diligently to afford your dream house where you can raise a family and create memories to last a lifetime. After all your hard work, it's important to protect your ability to pay for your new home if you die prematurely. Many experts recommend that you consider using life insurance to help safeguard your assets and protect your family's financial future.

In this situation, many homeowners think about purchasing permanent or term life insurance as a mortgage protector. If an adequate amount of life insurance is purchased, the death benefit can be used to pay the rest of the mortgage payments. The death benefit can also cover other expenses, such as educational costs, personal bills and credit card debt. Life insurance can also serve as an income replacement so your family can avoid financial difficulties and maintain the same standard of living without you.

Disposer Deposos Dishwasher

Q. Ever since a handyman installed a new disposer, I have been unable to use my dishwasher. The first time I turned on the dishwasher after the installation, water gushed everywhere. It looks like a hose wasn't attached. I can't get the handyman to return my calls. Can I fix this myself?
— Joyce P., Palm Bay, Fla.

A. It sounds like the handyman didn't finish the job, all right. It is possible to attach the hose yourself, although you might want a strong helper to handle this task as it will require levering a few things in and out of place while working underneath the sink cabinet.

Disposers have an area to connect the dishwasher's drain hose, called the dishwasher nipple. The sink is draining just fine, which means the plug is in place. Locate this nipple, but don't do anything yet.

First, locate the dishwasher drain hose. Make sure it will reach the nipple on the disposer. If it is too short, you'll need to replace the hose — measure the distance between the hose connection on the dishwasher and the nipple, head for the home-improvement store, and pick up a hose that is a couple inches longer than that. If it is too long, the drain hose can be cut to the proper length using a hacksaw or tubing cutter.

Next, make sure the dishwasher drain hose can be properly secured — it should have a metal hose clamp on the end that will go over the nipple; if not, the home improvement store will have one.

Now, you're ready. Turn off power to the circuit controlling the disposer. Remove the plug in the nipple, using a screwdriver to pry it out. Slide the dishwasher drain hose completely over the nipple so that the end of the hose touches the disposer body. Tighten the metal hose clamp (use a Phillips head screwdriver and a pair of pliers to do this).

Run the circuit back on. Run the dishwasher, keeping an eye on the drain hose. If you're really unsure, place a bucket underneath the disposer to catch any leaking water. You may have to readjust the hose's position or tighten the clamp, but as long as the plug isn't still in the nipple you shouldn't have any more problems. And you'll have your dishwasher back.

Why 50% Of Homes Listed For Sale Don't Sell The First Time And What to Do About It

Quincy - If your home has just come off the market and hasn't sold, don't get discouraged. The reason your home did not sell may have nothing to do with your home or the market. In reality, your home may have been one of the more desirable properties for sale.

So Why Didn't Your Home Sell?

Last year almost half of the homes listed for sale never sold at all, and many sellers found that there was a tremendous amount a homeowner needed to be educated on to sell their home for top dollar in the shortest time period.

Don't risk making the wrong choices and losing both time and money on your investment. Before you hire a realtor, know the right questions to ask to save you time and money. Industry experts have prepared a free special report called "How to Sell a House that Didn't Sell" which educates you on the issues involved.

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your free copy of this report call 800-611-4351 and enter ID#1012. You can call anytime, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Call now to make sure your home sells next time you list it for sale. www.quincyhomeinfo.com

Is Geothermal Heating Right For You?

(NAPS) - Keeping your home warm in the winter has never been easier or more environmentally friendly.

Geothermal heating and cooling systems offers the finest in home-comfort conditioning. By utilizing the free, renewable solar energy stored in the ground, geothermal systems are a clean and environmentally friendly source of energy.

So if it is decreased energy costs, enhanced comfort, safety and reliability that you want out of your heating system, a geothermal unit could be the right fit for you.

The experts at WaterFurnace recommend geothermal systems, such as the Envision series from WaterFurnace, which can be easily installed in a wide variety of installations-new or old homes, large or small. Although most systems are simply single units in a forced-air application, they can also be used for other types of installations.

- Geothermal units can provide hot water for radiant floor applications by circulating warm water through tubing encased in the floor. Floors covered in tile, wood, linoleum or stone are kept toasty warm, even on the coldest days. Since the entire floor acts as a giant radiator, you'll experience a comfortably conditioned room with head-to-toe consistent comfort.

- Homes with large demands for domestic or potable water heating will benefit from the exceptional efficiency of a WaterFurnace Synergy geothermal system. This unit provides dedicated hot water for heating and domestic use and both heating and cooling furnished through a conventional duct system to condition the air inside the home. The complete system provides the ultimate in savings and comfort with safe, reliable, quiet performance.

- Units can also be utilized to heat water for pools and spas. You'll find that a geothermal unit will heat your pool or spa for much less than an ordinary pool heater. And compared to fossil fuel-burning heaters, it's much safer, too, without concerns associated with carbon monoxide poisoning.

- A geothermal unit can keep your sidewalks or driveway free of ice and snow during the cold winter months. It eliminates the hazards of walking on ice-covered sidewalks, and helps you forget the backbreaking effort off shoveling snow.

- Geothermal systems operate more efficiently than ordinary heating and air-conditioning systems because they deliver four units of energy for every one unit of electrical energy used. By combining stored Earth energy with safe electric power, homeowners may realize savings of up to 70 percent on heating, cooling and hot water costs when they install a geothermal unit.

Visit www.waterfurnace.com or call 1-800-GEO-SAVE for more information on installing an energy-efficient heating and cooling system like the Envision series by WaterFurnace.

Help for Home Heating Bills

A December poll by CreditCards.com revealed what many are thinking: It's getting tougher to pay heat bills. According to the poll, 27 million Americans expect to have to borrow money to pay for heating fuel or utilities before the winter is over. Twenty million of those expect that they'll need to use credit cards.

If you're having trouble paying your heat bill, there are places you can go for assistance.

- Ask your utility company for a reduced payment plan. You can catch up in the summer when your regular bills are lower. Some states have laws against turning off electricity in the winter, even if a customer is behind on payments. Different states have different requirements, such as paying a small portion of your income, or banning a disconnect if there are medical concerns, low temperatures or elderly occupants of the house.

- Charities know that people are struggling, and many of them have funds set aside to help those who can't pay their fuel bills.

- If you must borrow, look for a credit union where loans will generally have a lower interest rate.

- The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program is funded by Congress with money sent to states to divide among community agencies. LIHEAP got a boost last month when $409 million was added to the budget.

In general, a LIHEAP applicant who receives assistance has an income of $20,650 for a family of four. However, even if your income is over that amount, don't let it stop you from applying. If you can't find a LIHEAP program in your area, call the National Energy Assistance Referral project at 1-866-674-6327 for information on where to apply. (Let it ring a very long time.) Or send email to energyassistance@ncat.org and give your state, county and city. Leave an e-mail or home address for them to send you information.

Don't take the easiest way out if you're having trouble paying utility bills or buying fuel. Taking a cash advance or paying by credit card shouldn't be your first step. Avoid payday loans, too, because of the fees and interest. Don't use the credit card convenience checks you were sent over the holidays. Look for the cash anywhere else first.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Sports-Specific Training Isn't Just for Pros

If you're getting bored with your current workout, you might want to consider sports-specific training. Sports-specific training simply means that you apply "specific" training techniques that mimic a particular sport or activity to improve your performance.

Whether you are a weekend warrior, belong to a recreational basketball league or just want to keep up with the kids, sports-specific training has benefits for everyone — not just the professional athlete.

For instance, if you plan to go skiing this winter, incorporating ski-specific exercises into your fitness routines could possibly prevent common ski injuries to your knees and back. Your trips down the slopes will become a lot more fun as you enjoy the added benefits of increased endurance, muscle strength and agility.

Preparing your body for activities that require balance, agility and overall strength and conditioning is extremely important. For example, playing in a weekly basketball league could slowly begin to stress the body, and over time cause injuries to the knees, back and ankles. Training your body with exercises that mimic movements that will occur during a basketball game will stabilize your joints, strengthen your muscles and improve agility. Medicine-ball twists are a sports-specific exercise you can incorporate into your current fitness routine. The exercise benefits many sports that demand great abdominal and back support. Here's what to do:

Take a lightweight medicine ball or basketball in your hands, stand straight with your knees bent, abdominals and back supported, and arms straight out in front of you at a 90 degree angle. Twist your shoulders in a slow and controlled movement to your right (keeping your abdominals contracted and holding the ball straight out), then twist the left. Repeat this rotation, slowly and controlled, for 10 turns. Repeat if no pain occurs to your back.

Sports-specific training may be just what is needed to help motivate you to reach your fitness goals. Imagine playing a game of tag with your children without restraint, or taking part in a spontaneous tennis match and feeling fit and strong, and you'll become a convert to this sort of training.

Andrea Renee Wyatt, M.S.S., C.S.C.S., is a personal trainer with an extensive background in strength and conditioning as well as therapeutic recreation. If you have a fitness or training question, write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Cancer Prevention Tips For 2008

Experts at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute suggest a few simple steps that could help reduce the risk of developing cancer.

Here are eight to try in 2008.

One: Get up and go

Research shows that moderate to intensive aerobic exercise can reduce the risk of several cancers, including colon and breast.

With their doctor's permission, someone could:

- Use stairs rather than an elevator.
- When possible, walk or ride a bike rather than drive.
- Take an exercise break at work to stretch or take a quick walk.
- Play a team sport
- Use a stationary bicycle or treadmill while watching TV.

Two: Kick the habit

According to the American Cancer Society, smoking is the most preventable cause of death in the United States, accounting for nearly one of every five deaths each year. It causes more than 80 percent of all lung cancer cases and increases the risk of oral, throat, pancreatic, uterine, bladder, and kidney cancers.

Here are some tips to help:

Plan the quit day

- Choose method of quitting:
- Recruit the help, support and encouragement of family and friends.
- Remember why reason for quitting: Family, children, and personal health.

Following through:

The Four "D's"

- Deep breaths.
- Drink lots of water.
- Do something to avoid focusing on cigarette cravings.
- Delay reaching for a cigarette — the urge will pass.

Avoid triggers

- Get rid of cigarettes, lighters, matches and ashtrays.

- Avoid being around people who are smoking.

Three: Sun safety matters year-round

Sunscreen shouldn't be packed away just because it's winter — the sun's harmful rays are present all year long.

In fact, some experts say winter sports enthusiasts can face just as much risk of getting sunburn as summer sunbathers. The snow can reflect the ultraviolet (UV) radiation that causes sunburn. Sunburn in turn increases the risk of developing skin cancer.

- Wear sunscreen with an SPF of 15 or higher. Apply it often and don't forget your neck, ears, and hands.
- Apply lip balm with sunscreen.
- Use eye protection especially for skiing. Look for wrap-around sun glasses and ski goggles with UV protection.

• Avoid excessive exposure to the sun, especially during peak hours between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. when the sun is at its strongest.

Four: Cervical cancer screening:

The American Cancer Society recommends a yearly pap test for all women who are sexually active. Beginning at age 30, women who have had three normal Pap tests in a row may get tested every 2 to 3 years.

Five: Prostate cancer screening:

Beginning at age 50, men who do not have any major medical problems should have a yearly PSA blood test, according to the American Cancer Society. Men at high risk should begin at age 45. This includes African American men and men who have a close relative (father, brother, or son) who had prostate cancer before age 65. Men with several relatives with prostate cancer should get yearly PSA tests starting at age 40.

Six: Colorectal cancer screening:

Experts recommend that beginning at age 50, both men and women at average risk for colorectal cancer should have either a colonoscopy or flexible sigmoidoscopy. People with certain risk factors should begin screening earlier and talk to their doctor about how often.

Seven: Don't forget the dentist

Visiting the dentist is not just about clean and healthy teeth. Dentists are often on the front lines of detecting cancer in the mouth, especially in smokers and users of smokeless tobacco. Research shows more than half of all smokeless tobacco users have non-cancerous or pre-cancerous lesions in their mouth. Their chance of getting oral cancer is 400 percent greater than those who don't use tobacco. In addition to the increased risk of cancer, smoking and chewing tobacco erode teeth and gums.

Eight: Eat an apple a day

One of the easiest ways to reduce the risk of cancer is to eat a daily diet that is loaded with antioxidants.

Studies show people who eat one or more apples a day may reduce their risk of breast, mouth and colorectal cancer. Apple skin contains the cancer-fighting antioxidant quercetin. The best way to get that nutrient is to eat apples uncooked and unpeeled.

Pumpkin and other orange fruits and vegetables, including sweet potato, squash (butternut and acorn), and carrots, contain cancer fighting nutrients called carotenoids, which have been shown to prevent of colon, prostate, lung, and breast cancer.

The bottom line, according to the Dana-Farber experts: eating a balanced diet rich in vegetables and fruits, getting moderate exercise, stopping or avoiding smoking, having an annual dental exam, undergoing the appropriate cancer screening tests, and using sun screen year-round may help reduce a person's risk of developing a number of cancers.

BRUSHING UP

Dentists advise their patients to replace their toothbrushes at least every three to four months to ensure their efficient cleansing action. Toothbrushes should be replaced even sooner when illness strikes, because a brush can harbor bacteria that may be reintroduced into the mouth to prolong sickness. What type of toothbrush should patients reach for when the bristles on their older brushes become frayed? Patients with impaired manual dexterity may be best served by electric toothbrushes. As for traditional manual toothbrushes with their many head shapes and handle-angled options, the Academy of General Dentistry says that one type of toothbrush does not necessarily do a better job of removing plaque than another.

What matters most is that people use their toothbrushes, preferably for up to three minutes per brushing session.

We take great pride in the work we perform. We'll be sure to review your oral and general health history and give you all the options available to you. Your dental health is our number one priority. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for superior quality dental care. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Ideally, a toothbrush should have soft, rounded bristles. Medium to hard bristles may be tough on the gums.

SPORTS

Quincy-North Quincy In Basketball, Hockey Action This Weekend

By SEAN BRENNAN

The battle for city bragging rights is up for grabs this weekend.

Quincy and North Quincy High Schools will meet on the basketball court and on the ice, starting Friday night, in the first of two scheduled home-and-away games for the basketball and hockey programs this winter.

The varsity girls' basketball teams get the weekend started with a 5 p.m. tip-off at Quincy High School's East Gymnasium.

The Presidents (5-6, 3-4 in the ACL North Division) are coming off a tough 49-45 loss to Falmouth High School on Jan. 18, while the Red Raiders (8-5, 7-1 in the ACL North Division) come into the tilt against their city rival on pace to recapture the ACL North crown for the second straight year.

The Raiders currently hold a one game advantage over last year's co-champions, Whitman-Hanson HS (10-2, 6-1), in the race for the North division title.

Quincy senior Meagan Tobin (16.5 points per game) and North Quincy senior Rebecca Goreham (14.7 points per game) are both among the leading scorers in the Atlantic Coast League's North Division.

The boys' teams are scheduled to play immediately after the girls' game is finished. Tip-off is set for 7 p.m.

Quincy and North Quincy are both fighting atop the Atlantic Coast League North Division standings with Plymouth North HS for first place.

The Presidents (8-3 overall, 5-2 in ACL play) defeated Falmouth HS 44-41 on a last second Doug Scott jumper last Friday (Jan. 18). Quincy played a league game against Marshfield HS on Monday (Jan. 21).

The Red Raiders (7-5, 5-3 in the ACL) are coming off a 56-33 league win over Dennis-Yarmouth HS on Jan. 18. Senior forward Marcellus Lee continued his monster season with 28 points and 12 rebounds in the victory.

Scott (22.7 points per game) and Lee (19.4 points per game) are both among the leading scorers in the Atlantic Coast League's North Division.

Both the girls and boys basketball teams will meet again, this time at the NQHS Gym, on Feb. 15.

The hockey teams will face-off for the first time this season on Sat., Jan. 26 at the Quincy Youth Arena. The puck drops at 6:40 p.m.

North Quincy (5-3-3 overall, 4-1-2 in the ACL) is led by forwards Brandon Gilmore (20 goals, 10 assists, 30 points) and Scott Richardson (8-11-19), while goaltender Matt Brundige (six games, 1.59 GAA) is among the top goaltenders in the league.

Quincy (7-4 overall, 5-2 in the ACL) is powered by senior Ted Walsh (10-10-20) and goalie Jeff Giordani (11 games, 2.54 GAA).

When the two teams meet on Saturday it will mark the first time the two city high schools have met since last year's historic Division II South Sectional first round game. A game that saw the Red Raiders advance to the second round with a thrilling 2-1 win in overtime.

The teams will meet again for a second time on Feb. 13 at the Quincy Youth Arena (6:50 p.m.).

Celebrating Patriots AFC Championship

CRONIN'S PUBLICK HOUSE bartender Ashley Connor and patrons Lee Tirrell and Stephen Knowles give each other celebratory high-fives after the New England Patriots advanced to play in Super Bowl XLII with a 21-12 win over the San Diego Chargers in the AFC Championship game.

Seniors Leading North Quincy Success This Season

What a difference a year makes.

The North Quincy Red Raiders, coming off a disappointing 5-13 campaign in 2006-2007, have exploded back onto the local schoolboy basketball scene this winter. The Raiders enter Friday night's showdown against city rival Quincy High School with a 7-5 overall record and an impressive 5-3 record in the competitive Atlantic Coast League.

And the difference this season, according to head coach Kevin Barrett, has been the senior leadership on the court and the experience his team gained during its up-and-down season a year ago.

"The season has been full of positives," Barrett said earlier this week. "This year we have a senior laden team with tons of game experience that has been gained since last year. We have had a bunch of close games so far this year (no loss has been greater than seven points), and unlike last season when we would have folded in those pressure situations, we have thrived."

"I think playing in so many close games last season has really started to pay off for us now. We have won two overtime games, and have a number of single digit wins. Even the games we have lost have been close and that is a good sign heading towards the postseason. It is a credit to the seniors."

One of those seniors who have been excelling in all aspects of his game this year is forward Marcellus Lee.

Lee, who is coming off a huge game against Dennis-Yarmouth High School (28 points, 12 rebounds in the 56-33 win) has been a certified monster on both ends of the court. His play with his back to the basket down low and his presence in the paint has allowed Barrett's team to spread the floor on offense and lock down on defense, and that is a credit to Lee.

"Marcellus has been so much better this year for one reason, he has been so consistent," Barrett said. "He has been applying himself everyday in practice, showing up early and doing what needs to be done to be prepared for game situations. And we are seeing the results."

"Most of his points are scored in the paint, but it is his offensive and defensive rebounding that has allowed for a better flow on offense and defense."

Lee, who is among the leading scorers in the ACL's North Division with a 19.4 points per game average, has also worked hard to improve his free throw shooting, a must for a big-man in basketball.

"Marcellus' biggest adjustment has been his improvement at the free throw line," added Barrett. "In the Dennis-Yarmouth game he was eight-for-nine from the line, and he has a number of games where he was almost perfect there."

"He has worked hard in practice, as has the whole team, at improving his game and what we have worked on is showing in games."

Another senior who has made the jump this winter is point guard Phuoc Nguyen. Nguyen went for ten points and seven assists in the Dennis-Yarmouth game, and it has been his aggressive yet, in control play at the point position that has opened up lanes for Lee and others.

Nguyen has also cut down considerably on his turnovers, and his relentless pursuit on the defensive side of the court has improved also.

"Phuoc, as our point guard, has played smart basketball, and that is what you want from that position," Barrett said. "His turnovers are down, assist are up and he has been making sound decisions distributing the basketball. As he goes so goes our team flow."

"But his biggest contributions usually come on the defensive end. He can be a pest to the other teams guards and his defense translates into easy baskets."

The Raiders picked up their second straight league win last Friday (Jan. 18) with the aforementioned 56-33 win over Dennis-Yarmouth (1-9 overall, 1-7 in ACL). The team's fifth league win puts them in a dogfight for first place with Quincy (8-3, 5-2) and Plymouth North (9-2, 5-2) High Schools atop the ACL North Division.

Lee (28 points, 12 rebounds) and Nguyen (10 points, 7 assists) powered the offense against the Dolphins, but it was the defense that took over the game.

"Good win heading into the Quincy game," said Barrett. "Lee dominated like he has, and the team played solid 'D'."

North Quincy knocked off Plymouth South (1-10, 1-7) for their sixth win on Jan. 15, 59-50 to top last year's win total of five games.

Forward Matt O'Neill led all North scores with 13 points. He also finished the game with eight rebounds. Lee ended the game with ten points.

Other players contributing included Jordan Thomson and Dennis Martin (first game back from an injury).

"We played well and spread the ball around," said Barrett. "It was good to get Dennis back. He got his feet wet at practice and came back against Plymouth South and played well. It was good to see."

Next up for the Raiders is the first of two showdowns with the high-flying Presidents (Friday, 7 p.m., QHS' East Gym).

Barrett knows that Quincy will be jacked-up and he expects his team to be the same.

"High school basketball doesn't get much more exciting than this. That gym will be packed (1,500 people should not be a surprise), and it should be a great atmosphere."

North will have to deal with Quincy guard Doug Scott (22.7 ppg) first and foremost, but Quincy can come at you from all sides.

"Scott is one of the best players in Eastern Massachusetts. He can take over any game, but the rest of their roster is great, too. It should be fun."

Quincy/North Quincy Track Has Success At State Relays

The Quincy/North Quincy co-ed winter track team competed in the Division I State Relays last Saturday, Jan. 1, and the team had a number of impressive individual performances.

The 4 x 800-meter relay team of Mary Schwartz, Erica Brady, Caitlin McCarthy and Alyssa Mullen finished in thirteenth place with a time of 10:24.

Schwartz ran the fastest leg with a time of 2:30.1.

In the distance medley, Quincy/North Quincy finished in eleventh place, with Mullen running a time of 3:58 for the 1200-meter leg, McCarthy a 70 seconds for the 400, Schwartz a time of 2:31 for the 800-meter, and Brady a time of 5:32 for the mile portion of the medley.

According to Q/NQ head coach, Geoff Hennessy, this team of runners is trying to reach the Nationals' qualifying standard of 12:45 by the end of February.

Schwartz, Brady and Mullen will soon team up with teammate Jess Davis to compete in the 4 x 800-meters and possibly the Distance Medley at the Bob McIntyre Elite Relays on Jan. 27 at the Reggie Lewis Track Center in Boston.

The Quincy/North Quincy freshmen and sophomores took part in the Paul Davey Invitational at Franklin High School on Martin Luther King, Jr. Day last Monday, and, once again, Schwartz was an individual standout.

Schwartz finished first in the girls' 1000-meter run with a personal best time of 3:18.1.

Freshmen Nick Gillespie broke the six-minute barrier in the one-mile for the first time, clocking in at 5:58.7 and Nerry Francois threw a personal best in the girls' shot put with a distance of 23'04" feet.

Quincy/North Quincy vs. Whitman-Hanson H.S.

The Quincy/North Quincy girls' winter indoor track team may have lost to Whitman-Hanson High School, one of the premier track programs in the state, 82-18 on Jan. 16 at the Reggie Lewis Track Center in Boston, but the final score was not reflective of the team's overall performance, according to head coach Geoff Hennessy.

Quincy/North Quincy had a number of runners who turned in outstanding races. In the one-mile event, Alyssa Mullen, competing in the mile for the first time, placed first with a time of 5:29.9.

Erica Brady finished in second place in the 1000-meters with a finishing time of 3:16, while teammate Mary Schwartz took second place in the 600-meters with a time of 1:47, well under the state-qualifying standard.

Others runners standing out against Whitman-Hanson included Mabel Setow, Jenn Nahn and Erin Collins.

Setow ran her fastest time ever in the 300-meters, finishing in a time of 50.6 seconds, but did not place. Nahn clocked in at 10.49 seconds in the 100-meter hurdles, finishing in third place, and Collins continued her undefeated season in the shot put event, finishing first with a throw of 27'7" feet.

The boys' team lost to Whitman-Hanson 76-24.

Jeff Pereira won the 55-meter hurdles with a time of eight seconds flat, and Paul Reamer finished first in the long jump with a distance of 18.2 feet.

Sir Albert Howard (1873-1947), a British botanist, is often referred to as the father of modern organic agriculture. He went to India to teach Western agricultural techniques, but instead adopted their culture's nature-based approaches to farming (such as composting). His work and writings influenced many to further develop organic methods.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A wise person once said, "Nothing more is needed to make a man unhappy than to believe he is." ...

Through the years, we all have made mistakes. We all have had certain habits, moods, fears and feelings of guilt which have kept us restless and unhappy at certain times. Yet it is possible to turn from the inadequate and unhappy things of life and begin living a new life. This can be done by deciding we are through with unhappiness... we are going to cast unhappiness behind us...

TRUE... there is some unhappiness that can never be cast aside, but some of it can... TRUE... we need constantly to remind ourselves that we can be about as happy as we make up our minds to be... TRUE... circumstances play a part in our lives - but isn't it also true that will power and faith play an important part?... TRUE... it is never too late to change. This has become a truth so often repeated that it is a truism.

Couldn't it be said that happiness can be ours when we are supported by this hope and confidence?...

Kumu Gupta Graduates Commonwealth Seminar At State House

Kumu Gupta of Quincy, a member of the Advisory Board of the newly formed Asian American Commission of the Commonwealth and vice chairperson of the Quincy Human Rights Commission, recently graduated the 12th Commonwealth Seminar (MassCS) held in the Senate Reading Room of the State House.

Mayor-elect Lisa Wong of Fitchburg, the first Asian American female mayor in Massachusetts history, was the keynote speaker at the ceremony.

MassCS is a private program founded by former Senator Jarrett Barrios and Joel Barrera intended to open the doors of the State House to diverse leaders. The program has now trained more than 400 diverse leaders — recruited from communities of color, immigrant groups, and others working directly to benefit those communities — to become more effective advocates on state-level issues.

Participants go through an intensive program that explains the legislative and budget process and introduces leaders to legislators and administration officials.

Past graduates of the program include: EOHHS Communication Director Juan Martinez; David Halbert in the Governor's office; Heather Ross, who serves as research director for Leader Byron Rushing and many other diverse leaders who are contributing to the public life of Massachusetts.

Immediately following the graduation ceremony in the Senate Reading Room, there was a reception in Nurses' Hall in honor of the graduates.

the Church of the Presidents. "I was home with my kids for 25 years," said Dondero of the years before her gift shop. Three of her four children, Caroline Goff, Mark and Jennifer, still live in Quincy while daughter Jonna Sheehy lives in South Boston.

Inside Abigail's Crossing, candle and potpourri fragrances fill the air and shoppers find a wealth of unique furniture, figurines, plush animals, clocks, toys, frames, and mementos of historic Quincy as well as frames, photos, sketches and mirrors which can be ordered depicting specific schools and colleges.

"I'll still have my website," Dondero said, adding that clients will be able to order familiar items online at www.abigailscrossinggifs.com.

While she has no misgivings about moving on, Dondero is sad as she begins closing this chapter with friends and customers, and, especially her staff.

"It breaks my heart because my heart belongs to Quincy," Dondero who, along with her husband, is a lifelong resident.

She said she'll miss everybody and the shop and the work.

"My heart will break for the customers who will miss us," said Dondero. "It's not just about me."

"I loved doing my windows and knowing people enjoyed them," she said, but also added that owning a business is a serious undertaking that takes up time.

"It's something you don't leave your job when you go home," said Dondero. She enjoyed the gift shows, the skimming of magazines for ideas and the people, but business owners are working or thinking of their shop even when it's closed.

In her farewell letter to friends and clients, Dondero said she wanted to spend more time with her husband, her children and grandchildren, her mother, Virginia Kasper of Houghs Neck who is 88 and her husband's mother, Madeline Dondero of Marina Bay, 92.

She also speaks of playing with her three grandchildren, Madison, Courtney and Nathan, who are still young and her desire to spend more time cooking, gardening, and "even doing housework."

"That's pretty sad. That'll get old quick," she laughed, referring to her housework reference.

In her office at Abigail's Crossing, Dondero pointed to a painting on her wall that had two prize ribbons attached. "I want to get back to oil painting. I haven't been able to paint for years."

"I'm not going to sit around and let the moss grow," said Dondero, adding that she will stay on the board of Discover Quincy.

Davis Calls Meeting On Lowe's

North Weymouth, now," said Davis who also cited the potential aesthetic gains for South Quincy. The proposed building would help in "cleaning up an entrance to our city that has been an eyesore."

Davis referred to the parking of large vehicles at the site.

In a Jan. 17 letter to constituents, Davis described the process involved in approvals for the development, and steps that have already been taken. He invited residents to call him at his office or cell phone.

A Notice of Intent was filed on Sept. 28 with the Conservation Commission, which held public hearings in November and December. After two public hearings and a review by state agencies, the commission issued an Order of Conditions, which allows the project to go forward provided various orders are met.

The next official meeting will be held Feb. 4 with the Park and Recreation Board. Following the meeting, commissioners will advise the City Council regarding changes to Grasso Park. The reconfiguration, also, requires approval of the Planning Board, and the state legislature.

According to Davis, the Planning Board has tentatively scheduled a meeting, Wednesday, March 12 when members will review the request for a special permit. Planners must also consider recommendations for the abandonment and relocation of Grasso Park and the abandonment of a portion of Penn St.

Subsequently, the City Council will begin a review and, like the Planning Board, will hold public hearings.

"The City Council plays the largest role in the permitting of this proposal," Davis wrote, noting that the council must review recommendations of all city departments.

The Zoning Board will also, review the Lowe's application because a portion of the site is in a flood plain district.

According to Davis' letter, state agencies have already begun a review of the conservation issues involved in the plans, but state agencies must also consider the impact of the plan on state land and traffic.

Cahill Recommends Way To Fund Fore River Bridge

State Treasurer Tim Cahill has proposed the use of tax-exempt municipal bonds known as Grant Anticipation Notes (GANs) to finance construction of 10 structurally unsound bridges in Massachusetts, including the Fore River Bridge.

"We can't afford a public safety tragedy; we need a permanent solution for the Fore River and other bridges," he told a news conference Tuesday. "This plan offers a fiscally responsible way to fund these urgent projects."

Use of the GANs would not only allow the state to fix the bridges now, thus preventing a potential public safety disaster, but also permit the state to lock in project costs and repay the bonds with future federal highway funds.

The last Fore River Bridge, which takes Route

3A from Quincy to Weymouth, was built in the 1930s, torn down in 2004 and replaced with a temporary bridge, known colloquially as "the erector set." It's figured to last only another five years.

A permanent replacement, 60 feet wide with four 12-foot travel lanes and two eight-foot sidewalks, is estimated will cost about $160 million. It is scheduled to go out to bid in 2010.

The 10 bridges nominated by Cahill for GANs funding were identified by the Massachusetts Transportation Finance Commission as in dire need of repair with no funding mechanism identified.

Joint Convention To Fill Open School Board Seat Feb. 11

A joint convention of city councillors and School Committee members will convene Monday, Feb. 11, at 5 p.m. in the council chamber at City Hall to choose a successor to James Timmins on the school board.

Timmins, who has two years to go in his first four-year term on the committee, resigned his seat Jan. 23 to become city solicitor in the administration of Mayor Tom Koch.

"We have a lot of exciting and challenging issues facing the School Committee and I look forward to welcoming a new member," said Koch, who is chairman of the committee by virtue of his office as mayor.

"I expect the convention to be an orderly and respectful process and I will do everything possible to make sure that happens."

Thus far, two candidates have expressed an interest in replacing Timmins for the two years remaining in his term.

• Nicholas Puleo, 24, a senior budget analyst for the State Senate Ways and Means Committee, who finished a distant fourth in the five-candidate race for School Committee with 7,296 votes last November.

• Karl Roos, 40, a pharmaceutical salesperson and treasurer of the Wollaston School PTO, who has three children in the school and whose wife is a guidance counselor at Braintree High School.

• Eileen Mullen, 50, an education advocate and tutor who twice ran unsuccessfully for a seat on the committee and who finished last in November with 7,136 votes, has not indicated an interest in replacing Timmins.

Traffic At NQHS To Be Discussed

The traffic situation around North Quincy High School will be discussed at a meeting of the Parents Advisory Committee Thursday, Feb. 7, at 7 p.m. in the Trophy Room at the school.

Principal Earl Metzler and Assistant Principal Pam Mateu will present their monthly reports. Ann interested parties are invited to attend.

Senator Meets With Mayor

Kerry Promises To Work With Koch On City Projects

Senator John Kerry promised to press for federal help for transportation, infrastructure and education projects during a Monday morning meeting at City Hall with Mayor Thomas Koch.

"He promised to work with us," Koch said after meeting privately with Kerry. "We presented some of our issues."

Kerry said the half-hour discussion covered such items as the economic stimulus package, the commuter boat, a transportation bond, and the Fore River site.

The two leaders also discussed the upcoming HBO series on the Adams family. The production by Tom Hanks is expected to draw thousands and thousands of tourists to Quincy.

"We did talk about the Park Service," said Koch, noting that the city and the Adams National Historical Park are preparing for the deluge.

Just 24 hours before

Kerry's visit, Republican Jim Ogonowski, a retired Air Force officer and Dracut farmer, announced his candidacy for Kerry's senate seat. He will oppose Kerry in November.

On Oct. 16, Ogonowski lost a special election for Congress when he ran against Democrat Nikki Tsongas, widow of former Senator Paul Tsongas.

"I'm ready for the battle," said Kerry, adding, "I've been through battles all my life. I'm very confident"

With his experience as a senator, Kerry said that he's delivered millions of dollars for state projects and can continue to work for the Bay State through his powerful committees.

However, Kerry does agree with Ogonowski's charge that "Washington is not working."

"Washington is broken," said Kerry, adding "and I've been working to fix it." Kerry, also, said that is why he is supporting Sen. Obama Barack in his bid for the presidency.

Kerry said he believes the immigration issue must be addressed, but opposes drivers' licenses for illegal immigrants.

As for wind turbines, a current issue in Quincy and across the state, Kerry said, "We need to have some sort of standards and environmental studies. 'It's not a silver bullet,'" said Kerry who noted that he has been a leader in supporting renewable energy with a goal of 20 percent reduction by 2020.

He cited his initiative that would have provided $23 billion in incentives for alternative energies with the funds funneled from the oil company tax breaks. Oil company profits currently exceed $253 billion, according to Kerry who said the companies opposed the measure.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 1, 1884, the first portion of the Oxford English Dictionary is published. Today, at a whopping 20 volumes weighing more than 137 pounds, it would reportedly take one person 120 years to type all 59 million words in the OED.

• On Jan. 31, 1923, novelist Norman Mailer is born in Long Branch, N.J. In 1948 he wrote his first novel, "The Naked and the Dead," based on his own experiences in the Army during World War II. The book became a popular and critical success.

• On Jan. 29, 1936, the U.S. Baseball Hall of Fame elects its first members in Cooperstown, N.Y.: Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson. It has elected 278 individuals in all, including 225 players, 17 managers, 8 umpires and 28 executives and pioneers.

• On Feb. 3, 1948, the first Cadillac with tail fins was produced, signaling the dawn of the tail fin era. General Motors increased the size of the Cadillac's "tail feathers" every year throughout the 1950s. In 1959, the model's sales slumped dramatically, sounding the death knell for the tail fin.

• On Jan. 30, 1969, perhaps the most influential musical group of all time, the Beatles, make their last public performance, giving an impromptu concert on the roof of their London recording studio.

• On Feb. 2, 1980, details of ABSCAM, an FBI operation to uncover political corruption in the government, are released to the public. Thirty-one public officials were targeted for investigation. In the operation, FBI agents posed as representatives of Abdul Enterprises, Ltd., a fictional business owned by an Arab sheik.

• On Jan. 28, 1966, Jerry Seigel, creator of Superman, dies at age 81. Seigel created Superman with Joe Shuster when they were both teenagers in the 1930s. All the major newspaper syndicates rejected the character. In 1938, however, Seigel and Shuster finally landed a comic-book deal, and the Man of Steel became an instant hit.

Just One More Time . . .

Every now and then I find myself thinking of things I wish I could see, do, or hear one more time.

I've mentioned some of them from time to time and now some more. Such memories as:

• President-elect John F. Kennedy, in his father Joseph's home in the Kennedy compound a few hours after his slim win over Richard Nixon, pouring drinks and chatting with the press.

When asked what he thought had made the difference between victory and defeat, he replied: "He (Nixon) fooled around too long in the South."

And confiding he was going to play some golf when he got to Florida. "But don't print that, they'll think I'm another Ike."

• Ruth Gordon, calling from her apartment in New York City or her home on Martha's Vineyard all excited about her latest movie or TV appearance and reminding me to keep an eye on her birth certificate at City Hall.

• Hum and Strum, Max Zides and Tom Currier, singing "Heart Of My Heart" at the Fox & Hounds Restaurant.

• See John Gillis again in a crewcut.

• Order the 45-cent luncheon special at the Howard Johnson restaurant downstairs at the Granite Trust building. (Now Bank of America.)

• Take in a movie at the Lincoln, Strand, Quincy, or Alhambra Theater.

• Rev. John Banks, tending to his beehive in the tower of Bethany Congregational Church.

• Meet Dorothy Lamour once again.

She was the first celebrity I ever interviewed. She was at Veterans Stadium on a war bond selling tour and I was a young, green reporter at the Old Quincy Patriot Ledger. I got so flustered being next to her I kept asking her "How do you like, Quincy?" She giggled, knew I was in trouble and then helped me get through it by interviewing herself.

• At our second meeting 10 years later, pulling me down beside her at the Latin Quarter where she was appearing and kidding, "C'mon now, you're not a cub reporter anymore." (I did better in that interview.)

• See Munroe MacLean on one side of Veterans Stadium and Jack Donahue on the other, plotting strategy at a Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving football game.

successfully in the workplace and pursue a higher standard of living.

The classes are designed for flexibility and are structured around student demand and schedules. They will be held in the morning and evening.

Classes will meet twice a week for 16 weeks with the exception of Intensive Beginners which will meet for 12 weeks.

Registration is on a first come first served basis and class size is limited. The fee for most classes will be $90. Registered students may purchase their books for $25 from the QARI.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1924 postcard view of the Stoney Brae Golf clubhouse at the top of Forbes Hill in Wollaston. Notice the old cars on the left and if you look closely you can see the flag had only 48 stars. Forbes Hill is a glacial-drift drumlin just like the harbor islands and, as such, its composition is quite different from the nearby volcanic-formed granite hills of West Quincy. But, like its granite neighbors, this hill also provides golfers with spectacular views of Boston harbor. Now known as the Furnace Brook Golf Club, the golf course originally had 18 holes and was bisected by Furnace Brook as well as the Parkway. Today's nine-hole course was created when the portion of land south of the Parkway, with the other nine holes, was sold and developed into house lots in the early 1950s. Under an agreement when the Stoney Brae Club went bankrupt, the Furnace Brook Club currently leases this land from the city. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

$5.50 Tax Rate Increase Estimated

By FRANK McCAULEY

The 1963 tax rate shapes up to approximately $82.80, and increase of $5.50 based on the budget Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa will send to the City Council after he spent the weekend completing cuts from the requested appropriations of department heads.

This advance estimate is subject to considerable variations since there are four big question marks in the formula: the 1963 property valuation, the cost of snow removal for the rest of the winter, the figures on the so-called "Cherry Street" and the mayor's final decision on estimated receipts.

DEADLINE NEAR ON

PLANS FOR DREDGING OF RIVERS

Maritime firms and other parties interested in the proposed $12.5 million dredging project in the Town and Fore Rivers have only one more month to present their views before the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. Mayor Della Chiesa was informed today by Col. P.C. Hyzer, division engineer, U.S. Army Engineers.

The district engineers have reported favorably on the big project, which involves deepening the present 27-foot Fore River to 35-feet.

In addition to the general costs borne by the Federal Government, the State would have to assume the cost of about $1,540,000 for making alterations on sewers under Fore River.

She Supports Kucinich

I want to encourage everyone in Quincy to vote on Tuesday, Feb. 5. I want to remind everyone that Representative Dennis Kucinich from the 10th District of Ohio is running again for President in the Democratic Primary. He has extended his hand to participate in every debate and has been denied this opportunity. Please lend your ear to his ideas for green-collar workers and for non-for-profit healthcare for all.

Know that he supports same sex marriage. Know that he supports reproductive choice. Know that he supports fully funded education from pre-kindergarten to college, as well, as fully paid day care—we have the money. Remember that he has always opposed the war in Iraq and has consistently voted against funding this war. Kucinich has emphasized the connection between global warming and global warming—we need to end our reliance on oil and prioritize wind and solar energy.

He believes in water as a human right. He stands by our Constitution and our Civil Liberties. Read for yourself, if you'd like, in his books A Prayer for America and The Courage to Survive. Perhaps you will find that he is a lot like any one of us—capable and grateful for the opportunity to work and

Artichoke Recipes For Super Bowl

As far as combinations are concerned in the food category, a popular favorite is artichoke hearts and spinach.

I made a pie with both of them, which can be made ahead so when you're watching the Super Bowl on Sunday, you just have to cut it and put in the microwave, or place in a warming oven.

I bought frozen artichoke hearts unseasoned in a bag. They are also available in the box.

It didn't need any kind of crust, it just makes its own and it's more calorie friendly. It even tastes better the day after.

ARTICHOKE, SPINACH PIE

8 ounces or so of artichoke hearts (if frozen just defrost enough but not thoroughly)

1 package of chopped spinach (defrost and then drain out the liquid)

6 eggs (beaten)

1/4 cup of flour (optional)

1/2 cup parmesan or Romano grated cheese

1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese (or favorite)

salt and pepper to taste

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a bowl, beat the eggs and then add all of the other ingredients until well blended. Reserve a little of the shredded cheese for the top.

Place in a greased pie plate or square baking pan and bake for 30-35 minutes until done and clear after tested (I use a toothpick).

Here is an artichoke dip from our daughter Ann Marie which also can be reheated the day after.

HOT ARTICHOKE DIP

1-14 ounce of artichoke hearts (unseasoned)

2 tablespoons grated parmesan cheese

2 tablespoons low-fat sour cream

1 teaspoon lemon juice

a few drops of hot sauce (optional)

1/4 cup low-fat yogurt.

paprika for topping

Place all of the ingredients except the yogurt and paprika in a processor or blender and chop until finely done. Add the yogurt and stir well. Spoon into a one quart baking dish and sprinkle it with paprika. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes. Serve with breadsticks.

Quincy Youths Tour The World
With B.C. High School Choir

Five students from Quincy — Mark Hogan, Eric Jaukkuri, Ryan Law, Donald Luchini and Joseph Principato — are members of BC High's Concert Choir, a group of 29 young men who have become world-travelers of late.

After a Christmas 2006 performance in Washington, DC at the White House, a spring break tour of Prague, a June performance at the Von Trapp Lodge in Vermont, the choir spent a few days after Thanksgiving on a whirlwind musical tour of Dublin, Ireland.

Under the direction of Dr. Marina Rozenberg of Quincy and guided by English faculty Gene Holmes '72 and Jeff Toto '99 (who also sing bass), the choir had the chance to visit — and sing at — some of the most famous landmarks in Ireland.

The Choir started its visit with a stop at Ireland's largest church, St. Patrick's Cathedral. There, they joined voices in an impromptu hymn, Medieval Glorias, much to the delight of nearby tourists. The singers then moved from the exalted cathedral of the saints to the lowly confines of the condemned — Kilmainham Gaol, where many of the leaders of Irish rebellions were jailed and executed. That evening, they sang the Mass at St. Joseph's Church, the home parish of Mary McAleese, the President of Ireland, and after Mass serenaded the faithful in Latin, Russian, Italian, Spanish, and English with an eleven piece set.

The highlight of the tour was a friendship concert with the young women of Notre Dame Secondary School in Dublin, where the two groups sang together and bridged the cultural divide with a post-performance pizza party.

In April, the choir will complete the final leg of their international tour in grand style by traveling to Russia where they will perform joint concerts with the Sergiev Posad Chamber Choir and tour the city of Moscow before traveling to Kazan to participate in the prestigious Kazan State Music Festival as guests of the Kazan Conservatory where Dr. Rozenberg earned her degrees.

he Boston College High School Concert Choir will perform at home this spring at the Annual Spring Concert in April and the Catholic School Choir Festival May 10 at BC High.

Boston College High School is a Jesuit, Catholic, college-preparatory school for young men founded in 1863. The school enrolls approximately 1300 students from some 100 communities in eastern Massachusetts.

Accounts Running Heavy Deficits City Council Rejects Senior Water/Sewer Discount For Now

The City Council's Ordinance Committee Monday rejected a proposed ordinance offering senior citizens and low income homeowners a 15 per cent annual discount on water and sewer bills.

Members opposed the discount after learning the water and sewer enterprise accounts are running at a multi-million dollar deficit this year and after members objected to a blanket discount for seniors without establishing a means test and income levels.

Committee members agreed to reconsider the discount proposal submitted by Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro at a later date provided income maximums and other changes are inserted in the measure's language.

"I'd like to revisit this at a later date," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who also called for "a full scale examination from the top down" of the water and sewer funds and additional efforts in collections.

Gutro said the initiative would only have cost each ratepayer one dollar a month, but he acknowledge that the proposal needed some adjustments before new consideration.

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick informed councillors that the water/sewer funds are currently running at a $3 million to $8 million deficit.

"It may necessitate a complete audit," said Fitzpatrick. He stated that if there is a shortfall at the fiscal year's end, the funds would have to come from taxpayers, rather than ratepayers.

"We would attempt to recoup all of those indirect costs from the general fund," said Fitzpatrick who added, "We're all committed to correcting this potential shortfall."

"How did we get here without a red flag going up?" Gutro asked.

Fitzpatrick outlined the areas impacting the fund. In the first place, he said, "People aren't paying their bills on time." He also said there is lower consumption.

In addition, the sewer fund appears to be a recurring problem because the city has "...consistently missed the mark on the sewer rate" by charging too low a rate and the sewer fund has been charged "costs that belong in water."

In addition, Fitzpatrick said he had expected that new commercial water meters would have been installed earlier under the city's $30 million energy savings program. Those meters will now be installed next month and are expected to provide better measurements on commercial water use.

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan moved that the proposal be defeated saying this is not a good time to put a new burden on ratepayers.

"There's no income test on it," said Keenan. "Somebody else has to pay. Anytime you give someone a break, you pass it on to renters or a working family."

In response, Gutro cited residents who had addressed the council earlier in the evening. Those speakers described seniors' giving up cars and other sacrifices to keep their homes.

However, other councillors were, also, reluctant to give the discount to all seniors.

"You're just upping the bill again and again and again," said Councillor Joseph Finn and Councillor Jay Davis cited the problems facing young families, single moms, and parents who work two jobs.

"The biggest issue I have is the (lack of) means test," said Davis.

The council canceled a public hearing on the proposal and agreed to revisit the issue at a later date.

Campus of Caring is currently seeking a donation of 5-7 acres of suitable land on the South Shore. Quincy College Awards School Pin To Nursing Graduates Quincy College's Associate Degree in Nursing Professional Recognition Ceremony was a memorable event for 62 of the school's nursing graduates.

Family, friends, faculty, staff and some other very special guests recently filled Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center to show their support for each of the new graduates.

With Pomp and Circumstance playing in the background, the graduates marched proudly down the church aisle as family members and friends popped in and out of the pews to take pictures.

Kristin M. Parks, chairwoman of the Associate Degree Program in Nursing, welcomed everyone to the night's momentous occasion. She asked the graduates to stand up and give a round of applause to their family and friends for their love, support and patience as they (the graduates) spent the last few years completing their nursing degree. She then introduced the faculty of the nursing program who also received a loud applause from the graduates.

Among the list of speakers was Peter Tsaffaras, chairman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, and Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, who congratulated all of the graduates for their accomplishments in the nursing program.

As Mayor Koch brought his speech to a close he said to the graduates, "You will be touching many lives from here on out."

Other speakers included college President Martha Sue Harris and Sean Roper as the Professional Recognition Speaker. Roper graduated from the nursing program at Quincy College in 2007. He reminisced about his time in the nursing program saying, "Time has gone by fast and I have learned so much. I pray that you do great things."

Awarding of the school pin was done by Professor Susan Cahill of the nursing program. While pinning many of her now-previous students, she received many hand shakes, hugs and kisses from the graduates. Some of the graduates were pinned by other faculty members of their choice and family members who are also nurses.

After the last graduate received her pin, class representatives took to the stage to bid their fellow graduates farewell and good luck.

The ceremony concluded with closing remarks from

Margaret P. Rancourt, coordinator of the Part-Time Associate Degree Program in Nursing, who looked onto the graduates with pride and tears of joy. In closing she said to the graduates, "I am so proud to have worked with you and for you."

Sheriff's 'Are You OK?' Program Gets Emergency Medical Help For Quincy Man

A 66-year-old Quincy man was resting comfortably at his home after staff members from Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti's "Are You OK?" program that he felt unsteady and feared his blood pressure might be abnormal. The operator immediately summoned emergency medical help and told the man to stay seated until the ambulance arrived.

"Once again, the 'Are You OK?' program worked by getting medical help to someone before an urgent situation turned into a tragic one," Bellotti said.

Each morning, operators

from "Are You OK?" place phone calls to elderly people who live alone. If the person says he or she does not feel well or does not answer the phone, Bellotti's staffers notify a relative or neighbor or ask the local police to go to the residence.

The recent "save" marked the 52nd time "Are You OK?" has put a person in touch with emergency help since Bellotti established the program and made it available throughout Norfolk County in 2001.

"My staff is trained to pick up on the slightest indication of a problem," Bellotti said. "This provides significant peace-of-mind to the elderly participants as well as their concerned loved ones."

"And the program is totally free of charge to all participants, so there is no reason not to sign up for 'Are You OK?' if it can help you," he added.

Anyone wishing to sign up for the program or learn more about it may call the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at 781-751-3504.

New Valuations, Tax Bills Raise Residents' Concerns

Finn, adding that other affordable housing providers "are all having a very difficult time."

Finn and Raymondi spoke Monday at a City Council Finance Committee meeting called to address citizen complaints regarding the recent real estate revaluations.

At the meeting, residents expressed confusion and outrage because the assessed values of their homes and, consequently, their real estate taxes have increased, while the selling prices have dropped phenomenally.

Raymondi had asked the committee to hold the hearing describing what he called, "a crisis in credibility" due to the new home valuations. He cited numerous complaints regarding home values and higher real estate taxes.

"Somebody actually believed there was a conspiracy," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis who explained that his research showed that houses with the highest values are coming down in price while modest, smaller and starter homes have remained the same in value and, oftentimes, increased in value.

Davis believes this accounts for some of the changes.

Some 50 residents attended the meeting and ten took to the microphone to outline specific complaints on the new real estate values.

One resident described her condominium on Southern Artery where the value has increased from $237,500 to $314,200 in two years,

A Squantum resident said her taxes are up $1500 and a Rustic Place homeowner said his is the only house on his street that has increased.

They seem to have arbitrarily picked numbers," said another speaker.

"Everybody knows the values of the houses have gone down. I don't understand why we don't have a better explanation," said Tom Manning who said he knows senior citizens "who gave up their cars to stay in their house."

In one case, a woman said her area is subject to flooding which has cost her thousands over the years. She has two sump pumps, has made no improvements and now is being forced out due to higher taxes and expenses.

Board of Assessors Chairperson Marion Fantucchio and Assessor Stephen Roche outlined the valuation and abatement process and introduced Michael Tarello and Patrick Donovan of the city's appraisal firm, Visual Appraisal Technology of Northboro.

Tarello and Donovan explained procedures for viewing homes and the sales analysis. On average, assessments were reduced for single family by 2%, condominiums by 1% and two families by 7%.

According to their records, 66 percent of the city's residential properties experienced no change. Another 20 percent increased by one to three percent while the valuations for 2600 properties increased by four percent or more.

Actual values increased overall only in Squantum with North Quincy taking the highest decrease at six percent, followed by Quincy Center, five percent and Quincy Point, four percent.

Fantucchio repeatedly told residents that only way that a change can be allowed is through an application for abatement. The deadline is Friday.

"There may be something that needs to be corrected. That's why we have the abatement process," said Fantucchio.

She also explained the valuation process and the numerous checks on local valuations by the state Department of Revenue. State legislation determines valuation, taxing and abatement decisions.

"We had to work with sales that took place during calendar year 2006," said Fantucchio, noting that the revaluation process began Jan. 1, 2007. As of Monday, the number of abatement filings was the lowest in years, according to Fantucchio.

"We cannot, on Jan. 2007, tell you what properties will sell for in 2007. We have to arrive at a value. We can't use predictions. We have to go on facts."

The DOR checked everything," said Fantucchio, "If our values were not good, the DOR would not have approved it."

Three hours later after company's presentation, few of the residents were satisfied. On leaving City Hall, one resident said of the company, "I think they're from Mars."

Sad Loss For Quincy

Rev. Pang Heads To China For Episcopal Ministry

Dozens of friends of Rev. Dr. Thomas Pang bid a sad farewell to the dynamic priest recently at St. Chrysostom's Church, Wollaston, as Dr. Pang prepared to leave for a new assignment in China.

Dr. Pang left Boston's Logan Airport Tuesday the Chinese territory of Macao which he will begin a two year ministry later this week.

For the past two years, Dr. Pang worked in Boston and in Quincy with Rev. David Hefling, Rector of St. Chrysostom's Church.

It is there that he met such friends and admirers as Joe and Kate Shannon who wrote recently, "Thank you Reverend Pang, for your contributions to the community."

Fr. Hefling said that Dr.

Pang's new post is a significant honor as he will be working directly as assistant to the archbishop.

"It's a big deal," said Fr. Hefling, adding that Dr. Pang will be charged with establishing a new diocese in Macao. However, he will be sorely missed here as he brought so much to education, and the sharing of cultures locally.

Iris Chen, Interim Director of the Episcopal Chinese Center of the Greater Boston Chinese Community Services, describes him as a wonderful supervisor. The programs serve about 100 persons each week.

"He taught us a lot of things," said Chen, adding he's a very strong leader.

"It's been great," said

Father Hefling, adding, "He is terrific, very energetic."

On every project, Dr. Pang usually goes above and beyond, according to Fr. Hefling who cited his colleagues' work in establishing a Chinese ministry at St. Chrysostom's Church.

Fr. Hefling described Dr. Pang's efforts in voter registration and in bringing Chinese culture to Quincy through choirs and dancers, and particularly, the Chinese New Year's celebration.

As an example of how much he'll be missed, Fr. Hefling said that Dr. Pang was "one persons doing multiple programs and now there are five people taking his place."

HEADING TO CHINA for a new ministry is Dr. Thomas Pang, formerly associated with St. Chrysostom's Church, Wollaston. Left to right are Rev. Mark Smith, Deacon, Dr. Pang, and Rev. David Hefling, Rector of St. Chrysostom's Church. Deacon Smith will be serving as administrator for the Asian American ministries in Fr. Pang's absence.

Task Force Named To Overhaul Zoning Laws

Suggestions can be e-mailed to Christopher Walker, the policy director on Koch's staff, at cwalker@ci.quincy.ma.us or attend one of the public hearings.

"This is the first step toward a la goal — directing development toward the right places: Crown Colony, the shipyard and downtown Quincy," said Koch.

The mayor pledged the full resources of City Hall behind the zoning effort, noting that Planning, Building and Legal Departments will play an advisory role to the task force.

He added that he expects the administration's plan to dovetail with the City Council's effort to limit development in Residence B zoning districts.

Last year the council enacted a one-year moratorium on residential development in those zones and recently began working on legislation to change building rules in those neighborhoods.

"The council deserves credit for taking on this issue and I am looking forward to working with the council on its proposal and the more universal ideas that the task force will be working on," said Koch.

He said he has asked Council President Jay Davis to recommend two councilors to be part of the task force.

Those volunteers named to the task force by Koch on Tuesday included:

Jim Edwards, a local architect and member of the Quincy Historical Society.

Melissa Kelleter-Stamos, an asset manager and real estate professional.

Robert Kachinsky, a retired civil engineer with 40 years experience who is now helping Boston with its Emerald Necklace project.

Greg Galvin, a Squantum attorney with land-use expertise.

Richard Meade, retired director of the Planning Department.

William Cuniff, former long-time member of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Steve Striffler, an attorney and engineer.

A member of the mayor's Asian-American Advisory Committee will be named later.

Unenrolled Nearly Top Democrats In Primary

Democrats still outnumber Republicans by more than 4 to 1 in Quincy but the number of unenrolled or independent voters is creeping up on them.

The voter register in City Clerk Joseph Shea's office on Jan. 24 showed 24,713 Democrats to a mere 5,875 Republicans but there were 23,875 unenrolled and the figure is climbing.

The total registered vote for Tuesday's primary election is 54,627.

When the register closed for the municipal election in September the number of Democrats stood at 24,280 with 5,794 Republicans and 22,665 unenrolled for a grand total of 53,569.

That's an increase of 433 Democrats, 81 Republicans and a whopping 828 independents, a total of 1,058 new voters attracted by the races on both the Republican and Democratic ballots.

The Jan. 24 count also shows 72 members of the Working Families Party, eight members of the Green Rainbow Party and an all others total of 366.

Spotlight On Clinton-Obama, McCain-Romney

House, as major factors in the turnout.

Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, and McCain, the Arizona senator, fighting for the top spot in the Republican primary, will help bring out the vote, Shea said.

So, also, will the feisty televised debates among both Democrat and Republican candidates.

Former North Carolina Senator John Edwards and former Alaska Senator Mike Gravel are still in the hunt on the Democratic side.

Joseph Biden, Christopher Dodd, Dennis Kucinich and Bill Richardson have dropped out of the race but their names will remain on the Democratic ballot.

Former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani, former Arkansas Governor Mike Huckabee and Texas Congressman Ron Paul hope for impressive finishes in the Republican primary here.

Three Republicans have dropped out but their names, too, are still on the ballot. They are Fred Thompson, Tom Tancredo and Duncan Hunter.

Obama has picked up some heavyweight support from Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and Governor Deval Patrick as well as Congressman William Delahunt.

Clinton has Boston Mayor Thomas Menino in her corner.

McCain carried Quincy over George W. Bush in 2000 with 65 per cent of the vote to 29.8 per cent.

Al Gore was the Democratic winner with 58 per cent to William Bradley's 34.6 per cent.

In that 2000 rivalry, McCain had strong support from unenrolled (independent) voters and Democrats who switched their political status to unenrolled just for that election.

Shea notes that there are signs that McCain has similar support this year. At least some 200 to 300 voters have changed party designation for next Tuesday.

"Most of those crossing over are Democrats although there have been a few Republicans, too," said Shea. "And most of them changing indicated they were doing so for McCain. Mitt Romney could benefit, too."

In the 2004 primaries, Kerry easily took Quincy with 70 per cent of the vote to Edwards' 20.2 per cent.

Bush was the only candidate on the Republican ballot with only 994 voting. He received 811 votes for 83 per cent.

Registered Democrats and Republicans only can vote in their party's primary election unless they switch to unenrolled before the deadline. They can then vote in either primary. This year's deadline was Jan. 16.

On the local political front next Tuesday, Quincy has four candidates for state committee posts.

Patrick McDermott, the Norfolk County Register of Deeds and a former city councillor, is up for reelection as Democratic State Committeeman.

Dominic Paulo of Quincy Shore Drive is challenging incumbent Matthew Sisk of Braintree of Republican State Committeeman.

Also on the ballot are candidates — and write-in openings — for Democratic and Republican ward committees.

Candidates on the Democratic ballot are in Wards 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. The Ward 6 ballot has no names.

There is space for write-in votes on all six Republican ward ballots and the Ward 6 Democratic ballot.

Up to 35 Democrats and Republicans can be elected in each of the six Quincy wards.

For Those In Need

Sacred Heart Students Collect Over 200 Coats

Sacred Heart School students recently collected 225 warm coats through a drive sponsored by the Student Council to be given to local children and adults in need of winter wear.

Student Council Advisor Christine Norris said the school's response was part of the students' community outreach and "the amazing work our students have been doing."

According to Norris, the students learned of the winter coat drive through a Fox 25 News spot which featured the project initiated by Charles Anton of Anton Cleaners in Braintree.

The students decided this would be a perfect community project this winter, according to Norris.

"We sent home a flier," said Norris, describing the students' request for donations of warm coats that had been gently worn, had all their buttons and had no stains or big tears.

Then, the coats came in by the dozens. On Jan. 7 and Jan. 14, two parents delivered the coats to Anton, the Braintree cleaner, who will clean and press them and deliver them to such destinations as Cradles to Crayons.

In the past, Sacred Heart youngsters have collected $300 for service projects through a "dress-down day," other funds through a "Crazy Hat Day," and have participated in fund-raisers organized by Red Sox first baseman Kevin Youkilis for the Jimmy Fund.

Next on the council agenda is a penny drive, according to Norris who said these funds will benefit autistic children. The Penny Drive will begin the second week of February and the class that brings in the most pennies will be given a party.

"This is a new idea," said Norris who said, "We've got the supplies to roll them."

Sacred Heart School, located at 370 Hancock St., North Quincy, has approximately 300 students from preschool through Grade 8. The 13-member Student Council consists of two elected students from Grade 5 through Grade 8 with five elected officers.

John Hancock Plungers Wade In For Charity

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The reality of wind-chilled 33-degree temperatures had no visible effect on the spirits of the daredevils who took the John Hancock Plunge into the waters of Mound Street Beach last Saturday.

Of the 120 people who showed up for this second annual fundraising event for Interfaith Social Services, only the actual plungers were dressed in anything other than complete winter wear.

But, as one participant commented, their "hearts were warm with good deeds."

In an effort to hold the event close to Hancock's birthdate (Jan. 23), the Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission and the Mound Street Beach Association were determined to go on despite the cold.

The Plunge was postponed from Jan. 19 due to frigid conditions on that date.

Nearly 30 plungers got wet, some going for a swim, some just dunking their toes — and then there was Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin, whose plunge was protested by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi because of the hip-high boots Coughlin was wearing.

"There's got to be a rule that the body must make contact with the water," teased Raymondi. "This should not be allowed to happen. Don't give him a prize."

Joyce King, svelte in an Esther Williams-style bathing suit, was the first in the water, followed by bathers in a variety of swim-wear, including Bermuda shorts and a Valentine outfit complete with a heart-shaped pillow on her back, worn by Mary-Jo Kahler.

Kahler, who was working out the "pins and needles" she felt on her skin when emerging from the water, tied for the best costume prize with Lorraine Paolucci, who was dressed as a clown.

A prize for the oldest plunger went to 82-year-old Jean Ross and for the youngest to Michael Lee, 8.

After being persistently challenged to take the plunge himself, Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly, chairman of the sponsoring Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission, eventually joined the seven other toe-dunkers who actually got their ankles wet.

"We raised a lot of money for Interfaith Social Services, which is the primary reason for doing this, but we cannot forget John Hancock," said Kelly.

"The event is one of several programs we do to honor Hancock, who was born in Quincy, just like the Adams'. Some people don't know that.

"I think we all should take time to think about what a great city we live in and what an historical marvel it is."

Mayor Tom Koch attended the plunge, even though he was not a plunger.

"This is a highlight of the winter doldrums, coming down to the Mound Street Beach and enjoying the wonderful folks here who recognize the importance of Quincy's waterfront and who raise funds for Interfaith Social Services, a great organization that does a lot of good work for the city," he said.

Chickie Abdallah, the event coordinator, also joined the toe-dunkers this year.

'DUNKIN' TOE NUT' title is bestowed on Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly as he wades up to his ankles. That's Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin in protective hip boots beside him.

PIONEER. Joyce King strides purposefully into the icy waters, leading the pack in the John Hancock Plunge.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Jan. 21, at approximately 12:40 p.m., Officers Paul Matthews and John Leuchte were dispatched to James Street on a report of a Breaking and Entering in progress. Enroute to the location, the Dispatcher provided a description of two males seen entering a home. The caller stated that one of the suspects, wearing a gray jacket removed a basement window to get inside.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon arrival, Officer Matthews observed that the front door to the single family home was wide open. Officer Leuchte covered the rear of the residence as Officer Matthews entered through the front door.

As the Officer cautiously walked down the hallway toward the kitchen, he heard a loud thud in the kitchen. Officer Matthews turned the corner into the kitchen and encountered a male suspect who looked shocked to see the police. From training, Officer Matthews looked at the hands of the suspect and saw that he was holding a Jimenez Arms sliver/black 9mm handgun in his right hand. The suspect saw that Officer Matthews had his gun out and immediately dropped his handgun and fled out the rear door.

Officer Matthews radioed Officer Leuchte that the suspect was coming out the rear door and then grabbed the handgun and gave chase. Officer Leuchte tackled the suspect at the end of the driveway and then handcuffed the suspect. Officer Matthews informed Communications that one suspect was under arrest and a second suspect had fled the residence and may be armed. As Officer Leuchte led the suspect to his cruiser, Officer Matthews went back into the residence to look for any other suspects.

Officer Leuchte broadcasted a physical description of the second suspect and then advised other Officers in the area that a witness saw the second suspect running down James Street in the direction of Lancaster Street with a blue laptop computer. Officer Matthews unloaded the 9mm weapon and found there were seven rounds. He noticed that the rear door had been damaged and in the living room there was a large gray safe lying on its left side on an armchair.

Upstairs, it appeared that the suspects had rifled through most of the upstairs bedrooms. Within a matter of minutes of Officer Leuchte's radio broadcast, Community Policing Officer James Dentremon informed Quincy Communications that he was detaining a suspect outside of 28 Grafton Street. Dare Officer John Grazioso assisted Officer Dentremon in placing the suspect in the rear of Officer Dentremon's marked cruiser.

Approximately five minutes later, Chief Crowley, informed Quincy Control that he had just located the stolen laptop computer wrapped up in a black vest in the driveway of 28 Grafton Street. Meanwhile, Officer Matthews checked the area of the crime scene and found a hand-held two way Motorola radio lying in a snow bank outside of 19 James Street. He also located a yellow and black handle flat tipped screwdriver a few feet from the radio's location in a snow bank a few feet from the crime scene.

Officer Brian Flaherty arrived on scene with the two witnesses to confirm and identify that the suspects were linked to the break-in on James Street. Officer Ryan Donnelly removed both suspects from the marked units and both witnesses confirmed that they were the males they saw leaving the scene.

Once both witnesses had confirmed the suspects' identification, a pat frisk of one of the suspects clothing revealed a roll of gray duct tape and ten black zip ties. Both suspects were transported back to QPD Headquarters for booking.

Suspect #1, a 36-year-old Dorchester resident, was charged with Breaking and Entering into a Dwelling and Illegal Possession of a Firearm. The second suspect, a 38-year-old Dorchester resident, was charged with Breaking and Entering into a Dwelling.

Nice Work!

Past breaks for the week were on Taffrail Road, Farrington Street, Stewart Street and Copeland Street.

Project Lifesaver To Find Lost Alzheimer's Victims

The Quincy Police Department will launch its Project Lifesaver Program, a system for tracking lost Alzheimer's patients, with ceremonies Friday, Feb. 1, at 2 p.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St.

The heart of the program is a wrist band worn by patients that emit a constant tracking signal that transmits over a pulse-carrier wave radio-frequency to a specially trained search and rescue team.

Search times for those suffering from Alzheimer's Disease and related disorders like Down's Syndrome have been cut from hours and days to minutes. In nearly 400 searches, no deaths or serious injuries have been reported.

Project Lifesaver recommends two Emergency Response Kits costing $5,510. The kits include equipment to track and two transmitters as well as administrative costs for operator certification.

After that, each transmitter will cost about $300 and the monthly replacement of the battery and band for each transmitter is about $8.

The Police Department is asking for private donations and grants from the public to defray these costs since many of the intended clients will find them a financial burden.

More than four million people in the United States have Alzheimer's and well over 50 per cent of them wander and become lost, unaware of their situations and each representing a critical emergency.

Almost half of those who are missing face death if they are not located within 24 hours and many more can become injured or fall into the hands of predators.

Nicole's Law Implementation

I'd like to take this opportunity to finalize comments regarding the implementation of the Nicole's Law where the last deadline regarding installation for some occupancy took effect January 1, 2008.

If you recall the Nicole's Law placed certain requirements on owners of all residential properties to install and maintain carbon monoxide detectors. During the initial phase of the implementation all residences, i.e., 1 & 2 family homes, multi-family buildings, apartments, condominiums, townhouses, lodging homes and dormitories were required to have properly located CO detectors by March 31, 2006.

A deadline of January 1, 2007 was applicable if owners opted for an alternate compliance option. Of course this law only applies if fossil fuel burning equipment is located within the residence or if there is attached or enclosed parking.

A later phase of this law required CO detectors within occupancies less permanently lived within such as hotels, motels, nursing homes, hospitals and day care facilities. An extended deadline of January 1, 2008 had to meet for any of these occupancies opting for any of the hard-wired technical options.

Of course compliance with installation is not enough while landlords also must inspect, test and maintain the CO alarms at least once a year or at the beginning of any rental period. Batteries if applicable, are required to be replaced once a year. Tenants should report any problems with alarms to the landlord immediately and learn to recognize the difference between the smoke detector and the carbon monoxide alarm.

Additionally, the use of any of the hard-wired technical options not specified here require follow up inspections and maintenance and emergency planning in the event of a CO incident.

Quite frankly, like many of the State Fire Marshal's mandates, this law was handed down to us to decipher and implement, while in this instance it was done so in increments. We in turn have done our best to educate those affected by it while being as thorough as we can during its implementation.

That implementation is coming to a close now while we remain here to answer any ongoing questions you may have. Of course, not implementation is effective unless alarms and systems are continuously maintained. We now rely on you to honor the intent of the law and adequately maintain these CO detectors.

Thank you for doing so.

RECOGNIZING MORTON'S NEUROMA

When a nerve gets compressed and irritated, it sometimes forms a thickening called a neuroma. A certain type of neuroma called "Morton's Neuroma" is common at the base of the third and fourth toes. Symptoms of Morton's Neuroma include tingling, burning, or numbness in the area of the neuroma. Pain is likely, too. A person may feel as if something is inside the ball of the foot, or as if he or she has something in his or her shoe. The symptoms are likely to start gradually and only occur occasionally. A person can alleviate the pain with a foot massage, but the pain will eventually get worse. Treatment methods depend on the severity of the condition.

If you suffer from sharp pain, numbness, or a burning feeling in your feet, a never condition may be the cause. These can result from wearing tight shoes, being on your feet too long at a time, or general medical conditions. Nerve conditions like Morton's Neuroma can be hard to detect, however, podiatrists are specially trained to identify them, relieve any pain they cause, and correct them whenever possible. There's no need to suffer... we can help at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. Call 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S: High-heeled shoes are a common cause of Morton's Neuroma.

Emergency Legislation Helps Residents Keep Warm This Winter

For many Massachusetts families this time of year can be an enormous burden. With the temperature dropping, many worry about how they will keep their homes warm while the cost of oil continues to rise.

State lawmakers have been working to alleviate the burden so families can get through the cold months ahead.

The legislature recently passed emergency legislation, providing $15 million in state funding to supplement the federal money appropriated for the Federal Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP). This funding is vital for residents on a fixed or limited income. The other crucial part of the equation is connecting them to these resources.

Families should know help is available and how to obtain it. One initiative, Energy Bucks, which is a partnership between Massachusetts utility companies, Low-Income Energy Affordability Network (LEAN) and local community action programs, like the Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) helps encourage families to apply for the existing programs so they can manage their energy costs. Energy Bucks educates residents about fuel assistance, discounts on utility rates and energy efficiency programs.

These services can help save qualified families up to 30 percent on their energy bills by insulating and weatherizing their homes, repairing or replacing a heating system, receiving discount rates for electric and gas, installing energy efficient appliances and obtaining fuel assistance. By spreading the word about the resources available, Energy Bucks is linking residents to programs that will help them stretch their dollars as the weather gets colder.

Residents can go the Energy Bucks website (www.energybucks.com) or call 1-866-LESSCOST to find their local community action program who will help them determine eligibility, explain the programs and help them with the application process. The Quincy Community Action Program saw a 14 percent increase in fuel assistance applications in fiscal year 2006 and that demand held steady last year. There were 3,000 clients who received assistance through QCAP, and we expect that demand will likely be the same or increase this winter.

The price of heating oil — topping $3 a gallon — forces people to make choices they shouldn't have to make food or fuel. Keeping warm or buying a prescription. Year after year, there are more people who are finding themselves making those terrible trade-offs.

With young children and elderly residents particularly vulnerable to health stressors induced by the winter months, it's vital to get people assistance when they need it. There are more than 800,000 households who meet the eligibility requirements for at least one program or grant, but less than 30 percent participate. For assistance please call QCAP (617) 479-8181 ext. 101. You will be required to provide income and housing information.

By educating people about their options, we can help them stay healthy. Massachusetts legislators will keep fighting for funding, while the Energy Bucks partnership works tirelessly to make sure no one is left in the cold. There is a lot to be thankful for this year. But staying warm should be a given and not a blessing.

State Senator Michael W. Morrissey (D-Quincy) is the chairman of the Senate Telecommunication, Utilities & Energy Committee.

Beth Ann Strollo is the Executive Director of Quincy Community Action Programs.

Pellet Stoves Cut Heating Costs

With the cost of heating fuels skyrocketing, many homeowners are looking for cheaper alternatives to get through the winter.

Pellet stoves are gaining interest as a means of using biomass fuels — fuels made from wood waste products. Sawdust left over from lumber manufacturing processes, fruit pits and shelled corn are pressed into pellet shapes with most of the moisture removed. The pellets become an inexpensive, hot-burning fuel that can be used in pellet stoves.

As with any alternative heating system, there are pros and cons.

On the positive side:

- The pellets themselves are cheaper than other fuels. For example, if you're paying $2.59 per gallon for propane, that comes to $36.36 per million BTU. Oil at $3.30 per gallon costs $30.66 per million BTU. Pellets would cost $17.15 per million BTU by comparison.

- Pellet stoves don't need a chimney, thereby saving the cost of have one built or of tying into an existing one. The flue can be run through an outside wall.

- Pellet stoves are safer around children because the outside doesn't get hot.

- Pellet stoves are "load and go" in that you load the hopper, put the temperature setting where you want it, and you're done.

On the other hand:

- Pellet stoves require electricity to run the motor and blower. If you have a power failure, the stove stops working.

- Pellets might not be immediately available in your area. If you pay to ship, your costs will go up. Generally they can be found in building supply stores, stove dealers and garden-supply stores in areas near lumber mills and wood processing plants.

- More maintenance is required for a pellet stove, and generally you'll need an experienced technician to make service calls.

When choosing a pellet stove, consider the top- or bottom-feed models. With a top feed, there's a smaller chance of fire in the hopper, but the combustion chamber can become clogged with burned material called "clinkers." The bottom-feed model is easier to clean as the ashes are dumped into a drawer, but the top feed tends to produce more heat.

As with any major purchase, do your homework. Check the warranty carefully, determine what size stove is best for the area to be heated, and consider a maintenance agreement.

Conway-Assisted Holiday Toy Drive A Success

When Corie Bulman sees the smiles on the faces of the children she helps, it makes the hard work on her annual Holiday Toy Drive worth it.

For the last eight years, Bulman has been working with Jack Conway Company employees and family on the toy drive. They provide presents for children living in shelters in the Taunton, Brockton and South Boston areas.

Bulman, the granddaughter of company Chairman Jack Conway, compiles the childrens wish lists, and then sends them to employees who want to donate. When all the gifts are purchased and collected, dozens of volunteers wrap them before

Bulman makes the delivery to the various shelters.

"All the help I get is really pretty special," said Bulman, a Scituate native and Quincy resident. "It was a difficult year for a lot of people, but everyone still participated for the kids."

This year, the drive served 92 children, the most in its history. Bulman personally interviews each child's parents, to find out what they need and update their sizes. This process brings her close to the families and their situations.

Some of them are very young mothers. They are close in age to Bulman, who just finished college. And they are facing tough situations.

"There was one woman who just moved here from Africa and she had no winter clothes for her kids," said

Bulman. "And some of them have lots of children and they count on the toy drive a lot."

Bulman said 22 of the Conway offices participated in the toy drive. She mentioned Conway-Hingham manager Mary McCready as a steady volunteer who oversaw collection of the toys at her office and spearheaded the wrapping effort. And there were dozens of volunteers in all who helped collect, transport and wrap the gifts.

"It does become taxing, but I am thankful for the help," said Bulman. "And of course its all worth it because of the satisfaction you get from the kids shining faces."

Internet Accessible Land Records Research Expanded At Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces the expansion of the internet accessible land records research available at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

The ongoing project has extended and made available all recorded land indexes and images from 1966 back to and including 1956.

"Recorded land records are referenced by a book and page number based on the traditional Common Law recording system. This project has added online scanned images and indexes back to 1956 and has greatly enhanced our current internet accessible library. Standard fifty year title examinations can now be completed right online without the attorney or title examiner having to leave the office," said Register O'Donnell.

"This is a real benefit for the practitioner and consumer alike." Register O'Donnell has already embarked on the next phase of the expansion that will take the online indexing capacity all the way back to 1911. O'Donnell stated, "Our goal is to bring the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds into the homes, municipalities and businesses of Norfolk County, and improve the usefulness of the system to both real estate professionals and the general public."

The Norfolk Registry's internet library now includes every recorded document from over 25,400 volumes since the Registry's inception on September 3, 1793, and over 1.1 million documents filed in Norfolk County's Land Court District dating back to 1901.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High Street, Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101 or on the internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

New Year, New Workout

Q. At the start of the new year, I began a new workout routine that I saw in a fitness magazine. It is designed to help tone your muscles, and it seems to be working; however, there are no exercises specifically for my arms. What type of arm exercises can I do to tone my arms and prepare far in advance for warmer weather?

A. Toned arm muscles are the desire of many exercisers when setting their fitness goals. The appearance of strong, lean and toned muscles can be achieved through a comprehensive exercise program that not only focuses on appearance, but also stability, muscle balance and function.

The muscles most people want to tone are the triceps (back of the arm), biceps (front of the arm) and deltoids (shoulders). Each of these muscle groups must work properly for maximum function, strength and stability.

Great exercises for the arms include bicep curls, triceps extensions and shoulder raises. These exercises can be done with dumbbells, resistance bands, body weight or exercise machines. Be patient when trying new exercises, and complete sets and repetitions that will allow you to progress as you get stronger.

It is recommended that you exercise your larger muscle groups (chest, back, shoulders) before your smaller muscle groups (arms). Your arms help with exercises such as push-ups and pull-ups, and you do not want to fatigue your arms before they have a chance to help perform those exercises. You can complete the arm exercises after the other exercises when doing a total body workout.

Again, don't forget that exercises such as push-ups, pull-ups, chest press and rows also require the arm muscles to work, even though they are not isolated just to the arms. You may already be doing these exercises with your current workout, so keep it up.

Although your workout routine mainly has exercises for your lower body and might not seem to have anything to do with your arms, these exercises can help your arms by helping you gain more lean muscle, which helps in lowering body fat and increasing your overall lean muscle mass.

Give yourself several weeks to see results, and maintain a consistent exercise regime with these additional exercises. Try not to overtrain in trying to reach your goals, and allow your body recovery time in between higher intensity workouts.

Remember that nutrition and other positive lifestyle choices also are important for your body to get in shape for spring and summer.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Helping Eldery Fight Depression

By JOHN PAUL MAROSY

It's that time of year when the "winter blahs" hit hardest. Research shows that the short days of winter with less light can trigger a low-energy type of depression in susceptible individuals called seasonal affective disorder (SAD).

While members of the generation that survived the Depression and World War II are for the most part a resilient group, this time of year finds many older persons depressed.

Temporary sadness in the winter is one thing; serious depression that affects the individual's ability to function in everyday life is quite another matter. SAD is just one trigger; many of these older adults have lost a spouse and outlived many friends. The leading cause of elderly depression is chronic or serious physical illness, but other common triggers include loss of independence, social isolation, and financial limitations. Some medicines can also cause or worsen depressive symptoms, including some drugs for pain, high blood pressure, heart conditions, anticancer, Parkinson's disease, arthritis, and anxiety. In some cases, alcohol may contribute to depression.

When clinically depressed, the older person may lose the will to live. You may find clues indicating the elder is depressed by listening carefully to what he or she says. Comments that are out of the ordinary and allude to feelings of emptiness, hopelessness, self-loathing and/or loss of interest are strong signs that the person may be seriously depressed, especially if he or she had previously felt satisfied with life.

Although under-diagnosed and frequently misdiagnosed among the elderly, depression is highly treatable. The earlier a depressed person receives help, the sooner the symptoms will be alleviated and the quicker the recovery. Effective treatments can include antidepressant medications, psychotherapy (talk therapy), and electroconvulsive therapy.

If you know an older person who you believe may be seriously depressed, here are some tips for you or for the family caregiver closest to him or her:

Get expert help. Depression is a serious illness and should be diagnosed and treated by trained professionals.

Consult with a professional experienced with the elderly. Whenever possible, reach out to a professional who is knowledgeable about mental health issues in later life and believes older people can recover from depression.

Expect to have more than one conversation with the older person. For many elders, mental health issues carry a stigma and may resist seeking help for fear of being labeled "crazy." To overcome this, consider sharing your own feelings or an experience in your own life when you were depressed or feeling blue.

Take an active role in getting the person in for evaluation and treatment.

The nature of depression — low energy, lack of motivation, and helpless feelings — makes it difficult for a person to seek treatment. Also, because depression can cause confusion and forgetfulness, it may also be helpful to accompany the older person to the doctor.

Tell the older person's doctor the changes you have observed. It's unrealistic to expect the doctor to be aware of these changes in your relative or friend.

Some resources you might contact for assistance include:

- The older person's physician. A complete physical examination may uncover any physical illnesses or medications that may be contributing to the depression.

- Private mental health professionals. This group includes psychiatrists, psychologists, and other mental health professionals like psychiatric nurses, individual and family therapists, and social workers.

- Geriatric Mental Health Foundation.

The foundation offers consumer information on the role of the Geriatric Psychiatrist. (www.gmhfonline.org)

Area Agencies on Aging. These federally-funded organizations provide information and referrals for the elderly and family caregivers and may be able to provide you with a list of agencies and professionals specializing in geriatric mental health problems.

To find the Area Agency on Aging serving the community in which the older person lives, visit www.eldercare.gov or call the national Eldercare Locator at 1-(800) 677-1116.

For elders residing in Massachusetts, call 1-(800) AGE-INFO.

John Paul Marosy is executive director of VNA Private Care. Based in Wellesley, VNA Private Care is an affiliate of the Visiting Nurse Association of Boston serving the Boston metropolitan area. He is the author of the award-winning book Elder Care: A Six Step Guide to Balancing Work and Family.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

CROWNING ACHIEVEMENT

When the visible portion of a tooth becomes so decayed or damaged that replacement is required, the dentist will fabricate a "crown" to restore functionality to the tooth. Traditionally, this procedure has involved removing the tooth's crown, taking an impression (upon which the new crown will be constructed), fitting a temporary crown, and cementing the permanent crown in place. Recent CAD/CAM technology (computer-aided design/manufacturing technology) has made it possible to bypass the impression-making step. It allows for the creation of a permanent crown by using a computerized image to create a restoration through a milling chamber that cuts the tooth-like material into a precise replica of the image. When this procedure is done in-office, no impression is necessary.

As material and equipment manufacturers continually introduce new and innovative products that further advance this fabrication method, all participants in the dental treatment process — laboratory, dentist, and ultimately, the patient, continue to benefit. This column is brought to you in the interest of better dental health. You can expect us to give you gentle, comforting care, using the most up-to-date dental techniques and equipment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer almost any type of dental treatment you might need. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. There are a variety of materials from which a crown may be fashioned. The dentist will help you weigh your options.

Reaches 1,000 Points In 58-54 Win North's Goreham Leads Raiders Past Quincy

By SEAN BRENNAN

The girls' basketball game between the Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders last Friday night at QHS' East Gym was game of runs, of (personal) records and, ultimately, survival.

The Red Raiders, in the end, came away with a 58-54 victory, but the Presidents did not lie down, instead they gave North all they could handle and more.

North Quincy (9-5 overall, 8-1 in the ACL), behind ten fourth quarter points from senior captain Rebecca Goreham broke open a 37-37 third quarter deadlock, and in the process solidified their spot as one of the top-two teams in the ACL North Division with Whitman-Hanson HS (10-2, 6-1). These two teams shared the North Division crown last season, and met on Tuesday (Jan. 29) with first-place in the balance.

But the story line of the night was Goreham. One of the ACL's leading scorers this season and the school's all-time rebounding record holder, she needed just 13 points (she averages 14.7 points per game) to become just the third member of North Quincy 1,000-point club.

Through one half of basketball Goreham was held to one point by the suffocating pressure defense applied by the Presidents, and through three-quarters of play, she had only three points.

Then something clicked. Goreham (eight points) and the rest of the Raiders used an 11-4 scoring run to start the final quarter of play to go up on Quincy 48-41. But this Quincy team would not go down without a fight. Seniors Meagan Tobin (game-high 30 points) and Marybeth Torpey, along with sophomore forward Leslie Campbell (10 points, seven in the final eight minutes) helped close the gap to 54-51 with just under a minute to play in regulation.

And then it happened.

Goreham took a pass from junior point guard Siobhan Carnell at the top of the key, dribbled right, past two Quincy defenders and scored her 999th and 1,000th career points on a driving lay-up. The points were huge. Not only because it put North up 56-51, but because before school officials could stop the game to recognize the achievement, Tobin took the outlet pass and quickly moved the ball up the court and buried a three-pointer to bring the score to 56-54.

After Tobin's three-pointer, the game was stopped and Goreham was recognized at center court, presented with a bouquet of flowers and congratulated by family, teammates and the crowd.

When the game resumed, North Quincy junior Kathleen Lynch scored with seconds left to put her team up 58-54, and by the time the ball was back in play, the game was over.

For Goreham, the personal accomplishment was nice, but the team win was more important.

"I am team player. I love to pass the ball and rebound. I definitely could not have done it (reach 1,000 points) without them."

The Presidents did all they could to slow down North Quincy, and after one quarter of play, led 13-11.

Raiders Cruise, Down Quincy 69-54

The North Quincy Red Raiders, using a deadly inside-outside combination, knocked off the Quincy Presidents 69-54 last Friday night at the Quincy High School East Gymnasium in a battle between the two city high schools.

The win by the Red Raiders marked their first victory on the Presidents' home court in the last five years.

With the victory, North Quincy moved to within one game of the top spot in the Atlantic Coast League's North Division. The Raiders (8-5 overall, 6-3 in the ACL) trail just Plymouth North High School (11-2, 7-2) for first place. The two teams are scheduled to play next Tuesday (Feb. 5) in Plymouth.

Quincy fell to 8-5 overall and 5-4 in the ACL with the loss. They are currently sitting in third place in the North Division.

"Whether it was on offense, rebounding or on defense, we got a little out of everyone," said North Quincy head coach Kevin Barrett. "Our goal is still alive in terms of winning the ACL North title."

NQ's senior center Marcellus Lee dominated on both offense and defense for the Raiders. Lee finished the game with 29 points and 21 rebounds, but it was his presence on the block that opened up shooting lanes and open looks for the Raiders' back court of Dennis Martin (19 points), Alex Tragellis, Sean Clifford and Phuoc Nguyen throughout all four quarters.

The game, which began immediately after the thrilling North Quincy-Quincy girls' game (NQ won 58-54), was played in front of a packed house of supporters from both high schools, but it was the Red Raiders who took control early.

The first quarter saw Lee score his team's first four points. He aggressively gained position on the low block and used his size and height to score twice from within three-feet of the basket. With the Presidents loading up to double team him, Lee found senior Dennis Martin open beyond the three-point line and Martin buried the shot to put the Raiders up 13-12 at the end of one quarter of play.

Quincy's Doug Scott (game-high 32 points) did his best to keep his team close. Scott scored nine of his 32 points in that first quarter, including one long-range three and a number of nifty drives and pull-up jumpers.

The second quarter was more of the same for Lee and the Raiders. With Lee grabbing almost every rebound (both on offense and defense) and battling for every second-chance shot, North Quincy slowed the pace of the game down and forced Quincy to play a less up-tempo style of play.

At the halftime break, North held a slim 31-28 lead.

The Presidents came out of their locker room to start the second half and played well. Halfway through the third quarter Quincy pulled ahead for the only time all night (42-40), but after North Quincy forward Matt O'Neil hit a 15-footer to tie the score at 42-42, the Raiders went on a 9-1 scoring run to go up 51-43.

North's Goreham Leads Raiders

Using pressure defense, Quincy limited the Raiders' transition offense, and shutdown Goreham down low on the block. Tobin scored seven points in the first (one three-pointer) eight minutes.

Quincy would go up 19-11 (6-0 scoring run) to start the second quarter, with Tobin hitting a three and getting fouled to start the run.

But this game was one of runs, and the Raiders used a 10-0 run to take a 21-19 lead. Senior Mary Kate Stille capped it off with a three of her own.

The Presidents came right back with another 8-0 scoring run to go up 27-21, but a Carnell three-pointer cut the deficit to 28-26 Quincy at the break.

The third quarter saw North Quincy go scoreless for 5:30 minutes, and the Presidents built a eight-point lead behind play of Tobin (six points) and Campbell (three points). The Raiders responded with buckets by Stille, Carnell, Catherine O'Connell, Rushri Wijesundera and Simone Leary to draw even at 37-37 entering the final eight minutes of regulation.

Eight minutes and ten points from Goreham later, the Raiders escaped with the "W."

For Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch, his team's performance was solid, but not quite enough to earn the win.

"We knew (Goreham) was going to get her points. We knew defense was going to be the focus and we did that in the first half. In the second half, they did what they do and that is pound the boards."

Some highlights for Quincy included Tobin's 30-point performance, and the play of Leslie Campbell. But it was Marybeth Torpey who set a school record. Torpey eclipsed the old assist record of 180 with a third quarter helper.

Playing well for the Raiders were Carnell (12 points), Lynch (nine points) and O'Connell (eight points).

North played W-H on Tuesday and are scheduled to play against Marshfield HS on Friday night on the road.

Quincy hosts Norwell HS in a non-league game today (Jan. 30) and will play at home against Plymouth North on Friday (6:30 tip-off).

NORTH QUINCY'S REBECCA GOREHAM in-bounds the ball from the baseline during the fourth quarter of last Friday's game against Quincy. Goreham scored ten points, including her 1,000-career point in the final eight minutes to help the Raiders come-from-behind and beat the Presidents 58-54.

Quincy would get to within nine points on an Andy Boucicaut jumper near the end of the third, but would not get any closer the rest of the game.

The inside play of Lee and the shooting of the Raiders' guards put the game out-of-reach in the final quarter, and in the end, North Quincy's inside-outside combination proved to be too much for the Presidents to handle.

"Too much Lee and Martin did a great job from the outside," said Quincy head coach Bob Fisher. "They won the game on the block, and Lee's presence was huge."

Playing well for North Quincy were Lee, Martin and guards Alex Tragellis and Sean Clifford. After starting point guard Phuoc Nguyen was forced to sit because of foul trouble, both Tragellis and Clifford protected the ball from the swarming Quincy defense in the second half (NQ had 12 turnovers, just two in the second half). Their management of the ball allowed North to run all their offensive sets through Lee in the third and fourth quarters.

For Quincy, Scott was once again the go-to-guy, but seniors Martin Bowes and Boucicaut both had moments when they were the best players on the court. Bowes finished the game with two blocks, while Boucicaut played hard on defense and offense.

North Quincy played against Whitman-Hanson HS on Tuesday (Jan. 29) and will host Marshfield HS this Friday (6:30 p.m. tip-off). The showdown with Plymouth North HS, and a hold on first place in the ACL North Division, will be played at 6:30 p.m. on Feb. 5.

Quincy's next game is Friday (Feb. 1) versus Plymouth North HS. The team will play Whitman-Hanson HS on Feb. 4.

4 x 800 Team Records Fastest Time In 24 Years

The Quincy/North Quincy girls' 4 x 800 team ran the fastest time in school history since 1984 at the recent Bob McIntyre Relays (Jan. 26), held at the Reggie Lewis Track Center in Boston.

Coach Geoff Hennessy entered his team in the race even though the only placed thirteenth in the Class A Relays two weekends ago.

The team of Jess Davis (2:28.0), Erica Brady (2:31.0), Mary Schwartz (2:29.7) and Alyssa Mullen (2:27.4) clocked at 9:58.01, finishing first in the unseeded heat and ninth overall in a field of 30 teams.

"All four girls ran their best times for the season over the 800-meter distance," Hennessy added. "The girls are trying to qualify for a trip to the Nike Nationals in the Distance Medley Relay to be held in New York City on March 14.

"This weekend marks the beginning of championship season. Everyone is training well; we just want to be in a position to race well. So far so good."

The girls' team is scheduled to race in a dual-meet against Norwell High School on Thursday (Jan. 31) to end their Atlantic Coast League schedule. The team will then run in the MSTCA Coaches' meet this weekend.

The ACL Championships are Feb. 8 and the MIAA Division I Championship is scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 17. All meets are at the Reggie Lewis Track Center, Boston.

Youngsters Colin Evans, Kayleen Lenihan Advance To 'Hoop Shoot' State Finals

Two participants from the Quincy qualifier of the Elks "Hoop Shoot" national finals have advanced to the Massachusetts finals after winning the Circle District competition which was held at Marshfield High School last weekend.

Colin Evans will compete in the Boys' 10-11 division, and Kayleen Lenihan will compete in the Girls' 8-9 division. The State Championships will be held in Maynard, MA on Saturday, Feb. 9.

Evans, a four-time Quincy champion, is in the fifth grade at Beechwood Knoll Elementary School. He qualified as the gym champion at the Beechwood Knoll Winter Recreation program.

Lenihan, a two-time Quincy champion, is in the fourth grade at Sacred Heart Elementary School and qualified as the gym champion in the competition at the Parker School Winter Recreation program.

Both Evans and Lenihan won City Championships on Dec. 28 at their Quincy qualifier. The Quincy Recreation Department staff supervises the Quincy events. Volunteers from Elks supervised the Circle District competition and all future competitions.

KAYLEEN LENIHAN (girls' age 8-9 division) and Colin Evans (boys' age 10-11 division) advanced to the Elks "Hoop Shoot" Massachusetts State Finals in Maynard, MA on Feb. 9. Lenihan and Evans will represent the Quincy Lodge of Elks 943 after winning their city and regional competitions over the past month.

The Elks "Hoop Shoot" National Finals is a free event held for the past 35 years, in which boys and girls in three age groups, between ages 8-13, shoot 25 free throws. The sponsor of the Quincy event is the Elks of Quincy Lodge 943, which according to Barry Welch, Director of Recreation, is "a valuable part of the winter Recreation Gym Program. The Elks of Quincy Lodge 943 have generously donated their time for countless numbers of boys and girls over the past 30 years."

The Elks of Quincy Lodge 943, through its Exhausted Ruler Paul Treacy have donated trophies to all Quincy champions and Gym champions. The Elks "Hoop Shoot" National Finals coordinator for the Elks of Quincy Lodge 943 is Ed Miller, retired athletic director for the City of Quincy public schools.

Over one million boys and girls participate at the local level each year in all fifty states. Seventy-two boys and girls will advance to take part in the National Finals in Springfield, MA in April. National champions have their names placed on a plaque, which is exhibited at the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The Elks pay expenses for participants and family to attend the National Finals.

Raiders Ice Presidents 3-0 Behind 26 Saves From Brundige

The Red Raiders shutout the Presidents, 3-0 last Saturday night at the Quincy Youth Arena to complete a perfect three-for-three weekend (boys basketball, girls basketball, boys hockey) for North Quincy High School over city rival Quincy High School.

The Raiders, behind the goaltending of the Atlantic Coast League's best goalie, Matt Brundige (26 saves), improved their 2007-2008 record to 7-3-3 overall and 5-1-2 in ACL action.

The loss drops Quincy's record to 7-6 overall, 5-4 in the ACL.

The gam's first period was a defensive battle. Both the Raiders and the Presidents had numerous scoring opportunities, but neither team could light the lamp.

North Quincy finally got on the scoreboard mid-way through the second period. A penalty against Raider defenseman Matt Furey had placed North on the penalty kill, but North Quincy's special teams and the spectacular goaltending of Brundige held the Presidents without a goal.

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

As the Quincy powerplay ended, Furey bolted out of the box, took a cross-ice pass and skated in on a breakaway. His shot beat Quincy goalie Jeff Giordani to give the Raiders a 1-0 lead they would not relinquish.

North Quincy's offense followed Furey's go-ahead goal with two more scores over the next period and a half. Junior forwards Matt Rodriguez and Joe Vailpando each added a goal and the Raiders went on to win 3-0.

But the story of the game was the play of Brundige (seven games, 1.50 GAA). And that is something that head coach Mike Ciarletta took notice of.

"Every time Matt was called upon to make a play, he came up with a big save. It was a great win. We played a solid game from top to bottom."

The Raiders were scheduled to play on the road against Whitman-Hanson HS on Jan. 30 (Wed.), and the team's next home game is this Saturday (Feb. 2) against Marshfield HS (puck drops at 8:30 p.m.).

The Presidents played a non-league game against Hanover HS on Monday (Jan. 28) and will host Plymouth North HS at the Quincy Youth Arena on Saturday (Feb. 2) at 6:40 p.m.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're eager to take on that new opportunity opening up as January gives way to February. Now all you need to do is resist quitting too early. Do your best to stay with it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Doff a bit of that careful, conservative outlook and let your brave Bovine self take a chance on meeting that new challenge. You could be surprised at how well you do.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While few can match the Goat's fiscal wizardry, you still need to be wary in your dealings. There might be a problem you should know about sooner rather than later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Easy does it when it comes to love and all the other good things in life. Don't try to force them to develop on your schedule. Best to let it happen naturally.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A surprise decision by someone you trust causes some stormy moments. But a frank discussion explains everything, and helps save a cherished relationship.

BORN THIS WEEK: Sometimes you forget to take care of yourself, because you're so busy caring for others. But you wouldn't have it any other way.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Through the years we have always shown sensitivity to the needs and desires of the families we have served... We have felt through the years that the confidence and friendships of the people we have served is the best and only proof available that we at The Deware Funeral Home have met these demands...

Through the years we have believed that how we conduct ourselves WITHIN OUR WALLS in understanding, sympathetic and intellectual guidance, thoughtfulness and unmatched services is our primary concern... Through the years we have consistently believed in the "Top Line of Sensitivity" and not in the "Bottom Line of Dollars!"... Through the years we have always been truthful in answering any and all questions concerning our costs/services/facilities and merchandise. We have always believed that it is our responsibility to provide a range of prices and services that provide exactly what the needs and preferences of the consumer prefer. Over the years our service shows a remarkable consistency of economy. The many, many families of all faiths we have been privileged to serve will confirm this....

"I am just elated at the turnout we had today," she said. "There were 10 more plungers this year than last."

"I would say we are over the $3,000 mark in fund-raising and there is more coming. I know we have surpassed last year's total. Anyone who still wants to make a donation may send it to me or to Interfaith Social Services or to Leo Kelly."

"I thank the citizens of Quincy, the Park Department, the politicians, the Police Department, just everybody for what they bring to this event. Someday this is going to be bigger than the L Street Brownies. We might get so big that we'll have to move to Wollaston Beach."

Laura Stracco, executive director of Interfaith Social Services, a private non-sectarian, non-profit agency, expressed thanks for the much-needed support.

"Our agency had the busiest month in its 60-year history at our food pantry in November," she said. "We served 1,041 individuals with three to five days worth of food and 250 families were provided with a full Thanksgiving dinner."

"All of us may be one tragic phone call from being like many of our clients."

Agency volunteers also run a thrift shop which accepts donations to raise funds and sells just about everything except large household appliances. In recent years, Stracco said, the thrift shop has raised about $28,000 to help with agency expenses.

"The number of elderly who are coming to us for food this year has increased by 36 per cent," she said. "Many of them attribute this to prescription drug costs and rising food and fuel prices. They are all on fixed incomes and trying to figure a way to stretch their Social Security checks."

Stracco said the agency's New Directions Counseling Center "ties all programs together because many of our repeat clients are struggling with other, underlying factors. New Directions helps them figure out and work through issues and make the next step in life toward success."

Donations, made payable to Interfaith Social Services, may be mailed to Quincy Beaches & Coastal Commission, c/o Chickie Abdallah, 48 Silver St. Quincy 02169.

'No Micro-Managing'

17 City Department Heads Sworn In

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch told his administrative team Monday that he will set his administration's agenda, but he expects his department heads to be leaders and to be creative in devising initiatives and solutions.

"We're not going to be micro-managing each department," Koch said, adding he expects to see "creativity" in planning, problem solving and operations.

"I'd rather you make mistakes," Koch said, stating that he expects leadership in each department and that the unacceptable alternative is to do nothing and accomplish nothing.

Koch spoke in City Council chambers Monday morning after City Clerk Joseph Shea administered the oath of office to 17 of the mayor's 20 department heads. All but one will serve a one-year term and must be re-appointed next year.

Koch said the department leaders must now concentrate on their budgets which he said must be trimmed down to essentials since finances will be even more of a challenge this year.

"We anticipate that revenues are not going to be as robust," Koch said later, noting that people are not paying their bills on time and the country's economy is troubled.

"We'll meet them head on," Koch said later, referring to the financial challenges ahead.

"I was surprised," Koch did say in describing his response to the multi-million dollar deficit in the city's water and sewer funds. There had been no warning that the water and sewer enterprise funds were in difficulty. "We'll look into it," Koch said, suggesting it was too soon to be able to assess the damage or the reasons.

As for the tone of his term, Koch told his department heads that all residents must be treated with the utmost respect and that he has an open-door policy for his department heads at all times.

Koch said that City Hall belongs to the people and every telephone caller must be handled with dignity and respect. "We want them treated like royalty."

Of the mayor's 20 department heads, all but one will serve a one-year term and must be re-appointed each year. One appointee is in provisional Civil Service position which could become permanent.

Koch has not yet named a permanent commissioner of the Department of Public Works. Three appointees were sworn in at earlier dates.

They are James Timmins, Solicitor; Rhonda Merrill, Purchasing Agent, Procurement Officer and Thomas Clasby, Jr., Director of Council on Aging.

A number of the appointees are re-appointments and several persons served in previous administrations.

To date, Mayor Koch has made the following new appointments: Warren Sproul, Treasurer, Collector; Frederick Sousa, Operations Manager of Traffic; John Sullivan, Program Manager, DPW; James Conso, Program Manager of Parks; Gary Cuniff, Director of Public Buildings; Kristen Keohane Powers, Executive Director of Parks, Forestry, and Cemetery; James Timmins, Solicitor;

Michael Coffey, Business Manager and Acting Director, Department of Public Works; Brian Carlisle, Supt. Sewer, Water, Drain; Jay Duca, Director of Inspectional Services; Robert Conlon, Plan Examiner, Inspectional Services and Betty Yau, Mayor's Office Asian and Constituent Affairs.

The following administrators were either reappointed to their current position or served in that position in a previous administration. Thomas F. Clasby, Jr., Director of Council on Aging; Chuck Phelan, Jr., Director of Information Technology; Stephen McGrath, Director of Human Resources; John Gillon, Traffic Engineer; Barry Welch, Director of Recreation; Kevin Madden, First Asst. Solicitor; Rhonda Merrill, Purchasing Agent and Procurement Officer; Jay Duca, Director of Inspectional Services; Ann McLaughlin, Director of Libraries

In addition, the mayor appoints administrative staff to at-will positions.

AS PART OF "Operation Safe Crossing," Detective Cindy Walsh with a baby carriage (no baby!) attempts to cross Hancock Street at North Quincy High School just prior to students being released for the day.

QUINCY POLICE Sergeant Dan Flaherty stopped this motorist for failing to yield to pedestrians in the crosswalk at Hancock Street and Cottage Avenue.

'Operation Safe Crossing'

Quincy Police Crack Down On Crosswalk Violations

Quincy Police Chief Robert Crowley announces the Quincy Police Department's "Operation Safe Crossing" went into effect last week with a team of Officers enforcing crosswalk violations in Quincy Square and at North Quincy High School. Officers were posted near the intersection and watched for drivers who failed to yield to pedestrians in the marked crosswalk. A plainclothes female officer pushing a baby carriage assisted in identifying violators who failed to yield to her attempts to cross safely.

During the four-hour period, officers took action against 38 motorists, ranging from fines to verbal warnings.

According to Lieutenant Dan Minton of the Crime Prevention Unit, Chapter 89: Section 11 of the general laws of Massachusetts requires motorists to yield and stop for pedestrians walking in a marked crosswalk. The penalty for this violation is $200.

The Quincy Police Department urges drivers in Quincy to be aware of crosswalk zones and prepare to stop for those attempting to cross the street.

"Operation Safe Crossing" will continue throughout the winter and into spring.

It Sure Humbled Us

(This column was written 30 years ago as Quincy was digging out from the Blizzard of '78. Today, it is a reminder of how Quincy coped with one of the worst storms in New England history.)

It was a storm you would like to forget but will vividly remember for as long as you live.

Awesome. Devastating. Furious. Horrendous. Mean. Terrible. You may have even a stronger one word description.

But as bad as it was with the suffering and the losses it brought -- in lives and damage -- and the inconveniences, it had one nice side effect: it brought out the best in most people.

People opened their hearts and extended helping hands to those in need. Not just neighbor helping neighbor, but stranger helping stranger.

A feeling of togetherness and unity descended upon the area in a way we hadn't seen since World War II. People were united again by catastrophe. They shared a common cause: survival. And they were more than willing to make personal sacrifices to help one another get through the ordeal. Most important: they cared for one another.

Houghs Neck and Germantown were the hardest hit in Quincy. Squantum got pretty well battered, too.

Compared to neighbors in Hull and Scituate, however, Quincy overall was lucky, as far as damage and other losses were concerned.

But Quincy got its fair share of the record near 27 inches of snow. The city was virtually paralyzed during most of the week. Business came to a costly standstill.

Overall, we think the city of Quincy deserves a "well done." New Mayor Arthur Tobin certainly has gotten his baptism under fire. He had been in office just 34 days when he got hit with the two worst snowstorms in our history.

We got a chance to personally observe him during this second storm -- the all-time champ in fury and meanness -- and saw a man calm and in complete control of the situation. He never reached for the panic button.

And so it was, all down the line.

Public Works Commissioner James (Pete) Ricciuti proved an able general as his army of weary workers fought around the clock to win the Big Battle of the Snow.

There were many others who did an outstanding job during the long hard week: Police, firefighters, Civil Defense units, nurses and doctors and hospital employees, snowmobilers, school personnel, and many volunteers in varying shapes and sizes who all pitched in to help Quincy residents in need.

There were many unsung heroes -- and many of their heroics will never be known except to those directly affected.

Of course, it wasn't all 100 percent peaches, cream and let's-all-sing-together. A lot of people came down with cabin fever in their homes. And even in snowfighting command centers where workers were cooped up for days under very trying circumstances, tempers flared now and then.

And there were gripes. About, for example, some people who managed to slip their cars by officials during the travel ban to stock up on food while most people had to trudge to stores on foot and lug small amounts of groceries home in their arms or on sleds.

Someone didn't like the way their streets were plowed. Someone complained about snow being pushed against his fence, and another into his driveway. And there was the story about the guy who harassed one of the plow operators to the point where the latter stopped his truck, got out and flattened him.

And there was another one about the weirdo who telephoned a resident to report that his wife, who was in the hospital, had died. Police brought the grief-stricken man to the hospital, the story goes, where he found his wife very much alive.

That cruel prank, meanwhile, delayed police from taking needed medicine to another resident with high blood pressure.

Most of those and other similar incidents will be forgotten by the time the first robin gets up enough courage to put in an appearance here.

MAYOR ARTHUR TOBIN (left) greets Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III (center) and Joseph Winkle of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, who dropped in by helicopter to survey damage areas after the big storm.

THE SALVATION ARMY and the Red Cross helped hundreds of Quincy residents forced from their homes during the Blizzard of '78. Mrs. Della Aldrich (left) and Mrs. Cyril Winders, both of Sea St. in hard-hit Houghs Neck, received clothing and food from Quincy Salvation Army Captain Charles Weddington. Both women were evacuated from their homes during the storm.

But there is one character we hope will not be forgotten: the looter.

Fortunately, for Quincy, there were only isolated cases of looting although some homes are still empty and could yet be plundered.

The looter, in our book is a creep -- a wart on humanity. He takes advantage of a tragic situation to steal from homes evacuated because of floods or lack of heat. Or steals from stores where windows have been blown in.

We hope anyone arrested for looting and convicted after a fair hearing gets what he should: severe punishment.

We hope judges here in Quincy and elsewhere feel the same way about that. The looter deserves no sympathy.

He is as bad as the thief who steals from the blind, the bully who picks on the invalid and the rapist whose victim is the innocent.

Overall, Quincy came through it well. And most of us may even be better off in the long run for the experience. It sure humbled us.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1911 POSTCARD is a view of Joe Coleman, a legendary figure who lived in Squantum for almost 40 years. Squantum Joe, as he was known, came from the British West Indies late in the 1880s to work on the Boston sewer system project. He helped build the sewer vats on Moon Island just off the end of Squantum. Legend has it that he stayed in Squantum after the project was completed and pretty much lived off the graciousness of people he helped and befriended. Someone thought enough of him to have this postcard published. Whatever he did to deserve this picture being taken he surely never thought the postcard would be printed in a Quincy newspaper almost 100 years later. Quincy's Yesterdays

The Big Digout Of '78

By FRANK McCAULEY

An army of weary workers struggled into the weekend to dig Quincy out from what may be the worst snowfall of the 20th century; one that brought the city to a standstill for at least four days.

The northeast storm backed by winds that gusted to more than 90 miles an hour dumped at least 26 inches of snow, the heaviest since the Boston weather bureau began keeping records in 1870.

The headline of Page One of The Quincy Sun that week appealed: Please, No More!!!

High tides, urged on by the winds, rose at least five feet higher than usual, flooding sections of Houghs Neck and Squantum where several hundred people were evacuated.

"This was something that happens once in a hundred years," said Quincy Police Captain Roy Cavicchi. "I've been on the force 25 years and I have never seen anything like it."

Quincy City Hospital received needed blood supplies as well as drugs and other necessary items by helicopter.

SNOWMOBILERS UNSUNG HEROES

Snowmobilers were out doing their thing rescuing people during this week's big storm. Norman Forde of Wollaston was with one of the two-man teams, which rescued a driver who had been shivering in his car for almost six hours.

In addition to rescuing frostbitten drivers, the snowmobilers continued to patrol the highway to prevent vandalism of abandoned cars.

READERS FORUM

Public Safety Is Paramount

The ongoing soap opera at Quincy Police Headquarters needs to end. I believe it is time for Mayor Tom Koch to bring both sides together and attempt to broker some kind of solution in which all sides can find some common ground to move from.

The Quincy Police Department needs to be focused on public safety, not personality issues. As a police officer since 1985 in Boston for the State Department of Mental Health and someone who called Quincy home from 1984 until this past year, it is time for both Chief Crowley and his command staff, and the patrolmen's union to work together for the betterment of the citizens of Quincy.

The challenge for Mayor Tom Koch is to impress upon all sides that public safety is paramount. Internal clashes impede public safety. Mutual respect between members of the Quincy Police Department isn't an option; it should be a requirement for the job.

Good luck, Mayor Koch, I know you can do it.

Praise For Nursing Facility

I believe Braintree Landing Skilled Nursing and Rehab Center is fairly above other facilities in offering numerous activities with the assistance of physical and occupational therapists.

With their encouragement and skills, over 10 students are learning to work to awake wasted limbs to journey forth on their walkers proud to be standing and feeling younger. The director of the rehabilitation facility is Ron Christopher, OTPL. Occupational therapists are Valerie Kuipers, OT, Stephanie Ennis, OT. Also on staff are Andrea Megra, PT, Stephanie Bono, PT and Speech Therapist Luke Griffith, CCC, SLP.

I have been a resident for three years and there are many former Quincy residents living here with me as we were moved when Crestview Nursing Home closed in 2004.

We're enjoying and getting better with skilled encouraging care and plenty of activities to occupy our time and mind, such as bowling, bingo, and a Super Bowl party.

We miss Quincy, still read the Quincy Sun, but we are realizing our responsibilities for improvement.

Jordan Marsh Blueberry Muffins

Whenever I am shopping at the Plaza, and walk into Macy's my thoughts sometime stray to the second floor when it was Jordan Marsh and served pastries and their famous muffins.

I recently found a recipe for the original Jordan Marsh blueberry muffins which were so delicious and remind me of those days. So even though we can no longer purchase them, we can instead bake them with this great recipe.

JORDAN'S BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 stick margarine

1/2 cup plus two tablespoons sugar
2 eggs
1 cup milk
2 cups fresh blueberries
1/2 teaspoon salt

Cream the margarine and 1/2 cup sugar. Beat in eggs until light. Add the flour, baking powder and salt alternately with the milk. Gently fold in the blueberries.

Put in 12 paper lined muffin cups, and fill to the top. Bake at 350 degree oven for 20 to 30 minutes when center comes out clean. (I use a toothpick) Sprinkle two tablespoons sugar on tops of hot muffins. They are super moist and mouth-watering.

Danish Film 'Adam's Apples'
At Crane Library Feb. 14

The Danish film, "Adam's Apples," will be shown Thursday, Feb. 14 at 7 p.m. at Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

This recently released dark comedy centers on Ivan, an overly optimistic preacher who takes in convicts to help around his remote, rural church. His current charges are a Saudi immigrant who robs gas stations and an alcoholic tennis professional convicted of sexual assault.

Added to this mix is a vicious neo-Nazi prisoner just biding his time before release.

The film magazine Variety described the movie as a "funny, politically incorrect and, somewhere deep down, thoughtful black comedy." It is unrated, but not recommended for persons under 17 without parental permission.

On Thursday, Feb. 28, "The Namesake" will be the featured film. This epic family saga is rated PG 13 and is based on the best-selling novel by Jhumpa Lahiri.

The story revolves around Gogol Ganguli played by Kal Penn who is caught between his Indian roots and his American birthright.

Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library sponsor the screenings. For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Coffee Break Café

is something different to everyone. For some it is the first stop in the morning for their daily fix. For others it is the place where their three year old can sit and color while mom has a moment to catch up with a friend sipping on lattes. Some use the free wireless and do research on their laptop while enjoying café mocha. Others use it as the high school meeting place for a frozen cocoa or an iced coffee. It is a place to listen to some good local music, view local art that kids did in their high school photography class. Some people go to Coffee Break Café three times a day, some only once but there is something for everyone.

Regardless of the why people go to Coffee Break Café, there is always a smile and a friendly hello waiting for you. There's always hot fresh coffee, ground seconds before brewing. Iced coffee is made constantly throughout the day in every flavor, mixed and sugar melted to your liking. Coffee Break Café is the only coffee shop in the area certified to use Malabar Gold espresso and it shows. Mocha's, caramel lattes, or a shot of the smoothest espresso on the planet is a heavenly treat. Coffee Break

Café created its own Hypercaf which through careful blending adds 50% more caffeine naturally. Coffee is purchased from independent micro-roasters in smaller batches to ensure the highest available grades. Milk is purchased from a local farm and is hormone free.

The food is made and delivered daily from local neighboring businesses. There's always something new happening at Coffee Break Café, whether it be story time for the kids, local live music, game night or simply a new cream cheese flavor like black olive feta or buffalo chicken.

Locally owned and operated by Jenn and Donny Ormond since 1996 Coffee Break Café is a small business that is always giving back to the community. Buying local where possible, carrying a selection of organic fair trade products, recycling, and helping out local charities are just some of the values that are important to the Ormonds'. In March Coffee Break Café is partnering up with Cradles to Crayons for child safety month.

Most recently Coffee Break Café made one of its regular customers a millionaire, now that is quite a perk for buying your daily coffee and an occasional scratchie.

Local Alarm Systems

A recent article in the Boston Herald caught my eye. It's the article on the South Boston condo fire. Reading these following sentences from that article prompted this article: "The fire department was here within minutes. The unit's alarm system is hardwired to the fire department..."

The alarm system in this South Boston fire was a class I system, auxilialized directly to the fire department. In this instance, a detection device within the building, a smoke or heat detector would have been activated by the fire, activating the panel within the building to notify the fire department directly and instantaneously.

We in the fire service like these systems due to their immediate notification and reliability, where we maintain some control over their in service status, assuring us that they are "up and running" at all times.

A local system is quite similar except it does not include the feature connecting it directly to a fire department. Without that feature, instantaneous and direct notification is no longer possible while we depend on a tenant of a building to notify us through the phone system. Often times these systems are activated via nuisance causes such as burnt toast; they are then illegally silenced by a tenant, and never placed back in service.

That's our concern. Most often we are not aware of the activation, or the silencing, which typically leaves the system functionless. Functionless, the detection system can no longer detect smoke and fire, and sound an alarm during a more dangerous incident.

Local systems are perfectly legal in smaller apartment buildings such as those with six to 12 units. However, I want to emphasize that they must be routinely maintained by a company certified to do so and never tampered with by residents. We want to be contacted and we will respond to any alarm activation.

We must depend on the owners of these buildings to conform to a system maintenance schedule to assure reliability, while we depend on the buildings tenants for notification of an alarm. These systems are only functional if they are maintained and operational.

No sounding alarm is too insignificant to avoid calling us. That call not only affords us the opportunity to confirm the reasons for the activation, but also assures the system is placed back in service and ready to detect any upcoming hazardous condition as well.

Please take the sounding of an alarm in these systems as seriously as we do and contact us if such as system is activated. To maintain their service status is as important to us as investigating the cause of any alarm.

Thank you.

St. Ann School Ceremony Honors 'Four Chaplains' Story

St. Ann School, Wollaston, recently commemorated Veterans' Day with a ceremony based on "The Four Chaplains" story.

The story honors four chaplains of different faiths who, after medal-of-honor winning bravery, went down on the U.S.A.T. Dorchester during World War II.

Sister Catherine Lee, principal, opened the ceremony with an introduction of guests followed by the singing of "America."

John "Butch" Mahoney, a Marine Corps veteran, retold the story of the four chaplains, who gave their lives for fellow seaman on Feb. 3, 1943. The U.S.A.T. Dorchester, carrying 902 servicemen, merchant seamen, and civilian workers was torpedoed that early morning.

Through the chaos and despair, the four chaplains: Methodist, Jewish, Roman Catholic, and Dutch Reformed, brought hope to those aboard. These brave chaplains gave up their life jackets to four frightened young men.

Four distinguished Quincy clergymen assumed the roles of the four chaplains: Rev. William Harding, U.S. Army Chaplain, Bethany Congregational Church; Rev. John Swanson, U.S. Navy Chaplain, Union Congregational Church; Rev. Arthur Calter, U.S. Army Chaplain, St. Ann Church; and Rabbi David Jacob, Temple Beth El.

The clergy shared their personal experiences and spoke to the faith and unconditioned love displayed by "The Four Chaplains." Students from grades one through eight, staff, parents, and guests were thoroughly moved by this solemn presentation.

Following the service, Sister Catherine, Mahoney, the four clergy, and eighth grade teachers Patricia LaBillois, Barbara McCarty, and John Norton led the eighth grade students across Hancock Street to the Korean War and World War II Memorials. A wreath-laying ceremony was held at each, along with the raising of six new flags at the Korean War Memorial.

As a remembrance, all in attendance received a memorial card, donated by the Keohane Funeral Service, commemorating "The Four Chaplains."

ST. ANN SCHOOL eighth grade students participate in the flag raising and wreath ceremonies at the Korean War and World War II Memorials on Hancock Street. From left are: Michael Gallotto, Jay Maver, Meaghan Clougherty and Olivia Lehane.

RAISING FLAGS at the Korean War Memorial, located adjacent to Veterans Memorial Stadium on Hancock Street, are Korean War veteran John "Butch" Mahoney and St. Ann School student Katie Alsip.

New Police Department Program

Project Lifesaver To Help Lost Alzheimer's Victims

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Quincy Elks Lodge hosted a reception Friday to introduce the Quincy Police Department's Project Lifesaver, a program that electronically tracks lost residents suffering from Alzheimer's Disease.

Lt. Dan Minton of QPD's Crime Prevention Unit described this national program which, until now, has been available to Quincy Police only through the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office or through other cities who already own the required equipment to execute this kind of search.

Lt. Minton thanked major donors who have made this program possible in Quincy: Dan Quirk, the Quincy Credit Union; Eastern Bank; and Quincy Elks Lodge, and he encouraged future donations of support. The hosting Elks also issued a challenge to other lodges in the area to match or exceed their own $1000 donation.

Loyal Knight Ben Wilcoxon presented the check to Mayor Koch, who thanked the Elks Lodge and all the corporate citizens who donated to the program.

"The Elks are always there, no matter what the charity is...we're proud of what the Elks do for the city," Koch said.

"As most people know, Quincy is a city of about 90,000 with a very large, diverse population, including our seniors in the city and this program is so important to families, particularly seniors, who have Alzheimer's Disease."

Police Chief Robert Crowley commended Sheriff Michael Bellotti for being a driving force in bringing this program to Quincy, and praised the efforts of Carol Flynn, E911 dispatcher, for her diligence in obtaining this equipment.

Flynn said, "Now we not only will send officers out to start searching in the area of the home of the missing person, but officers who are trained with this equipment will also come out with the receivers and can get a reading of which direction this person went in."

The expense of training officers to use the Emergency Response Kits is part of the over $5000 cost of each kit, which includes tracking wands and wristbands worn by those with dementia, autism or Alzheimer's Disease.

The battery-operated, waterproof bracelets emit a tracking signal transmitted over radio frequency. Batteries must be replaced monthly at a cost of approximately $25, and additional, or replacement, wristbands can cost as much as $300.

Lt. Minton said, "Now that funds are available for our own equipment and to train our own officers, we can cut down on response time; we hope to have our officers trained by May."

Alzheimer's disease is a brain disorder named for German physician Alois Alzheimer, who first described it in 1906. More than 5 million Americans now have Alzheimer's disease, which destroys brain cells, causing problems with memory, thinking and behavior. A progressive and fatal disease, it is the seventh-leading cause of death in the United States today.

Also at Friday's reception, Paul Conley of the Elks presented a $1000 check to Quincy Community Action Program for the Emergency Food Bank at Brewer's Corner, a facility which provides more than 200,000 pounds of food annually to needy families in Quincy and the South Shore.

Anyone interested in making a donation to support Project Lifesaver, or who knows of someone, who could use the services of this program, may contact Lt. Dan Minton at the Quincy Police Department.

Something Special For Your Valentine!

Fragrance Stirs Emotions For Valentine's Day

Valentine's Day, the most romantic day of the year, remains the day to express heartfelt gratitude for companionship, friendship and love. It also can be an occasion that will create fond memories for years to come.

And believe it or not, the fragrance that you wear on this romantic day can become a significant element of the experience. The reason? The brain's smell center, the olfactory lobe, is closely linked to the area that controls our emotions and memories, the limbic system.

Olfaction, unlike the other senses, goes directly to the emotional rather than the reasoning part of the brain, which means you "feel" a fragrance, rather than "think" it through. Because of this phenomenon, for centuries women have relied on the ability of fragrance to elicit a desired response.

"Fragrance and romance have always gone hand-in-hand. So connected are the two that we've heard many women say that they continue to wear the scent from their wedding day," says Darcy Miller, editor-in-chief of the magazine Martha Stewart Weddings.

Therefore, think carefully when selecting a fragrance to wear this Valentine's Day, because it may be one of your most memorable.

"In its pure form, fragrance is an emotional experience," says Karyn Khoury, senior vice president of Corporate Fragrance Development Worldwide, Estee Lauder Companies. "Not only does

Fall In Love With Platinum

Every year, Valentine's Day is looked at as one of the biggest gift-giving holidays of the year. Additionally, many use the holiday to drop down on one knee and pop the big question. Last year, 250,000 couples became engaged on Valentine's Day—a testament to how important the day is to thousands of love-struck Americans.

If you're looking for a unique, stylish and heirloom-quality accessory to give your special someone this year, you aren't alone. According to jewelry and style expert Michael O'Connor, Platinum jewelry is one of this year's best bets for a Valentine's Day gift.

"Giving a gift of love on Valentine's Day is about emotion and being sure you will be remembered," O'Connor said. "Platinum jewelry is the perfect choice because its purity and rarity underscore the emotional reasons why you're giving the gift, while its durability means that it won't wear down like other metals and will last a lifetime."

The following jewelry ideas, compiled by O'Connor, will help you pick out the hottest jewelry this Valentine's Day:

• Engagement ring: If you're looking to propose to your significant other this Valentine's Day, look beyond the four Cs and seriously consider the setting.

With an engagement diamond purchase, a premium is paid for a quality diamond, and you won't want to diminish that investment with a metal that won't complement the beauty and longevity of the stone. Platinum will hold your diamond more securely, and since it's naturally a white metal, it will maximize the diamond's sparkle. Designs that range from modern styles by Martin Flyer to vintage-inspired looks from Tacori can accommodate all types of diamond cuts.

• Gifts for him: One of the most popular Valentine's Day gifts for men—stylish watches from companies like Frank Muller, Vacheron Constantin and Jacob & Co.—pair masculinity with durability in Platinum looks that are perfect for dressing up or down. If you're looking for a different approach, Platinum cuff links also make a good choice for that businessman with a sense of panache.

• Platinum pendants: From the runway to Hollywood's A-list, it's all about layering this season. Look to layering Platinum pendants in oval, heart and square shapes for a distinct flair this year.

Something Special For Your Valentine!

Fragrance Stirrs Emotions For Valentine's Day

it express intense feelings, but fragrance can evoke them as well. And when a fragrance becomes associated with an event or inspires a positive reaction in another person, our bond to it becomes especially strong."

Estee Lauder, for example, chose to capture the feelings of love in both its classic Beautiful and new Beautiful Love fragrances. By using a different combination and concentration of ingredients, each fragrance represents a different facet of love.

Beautiful celebrates the bride's radiant moment of love with a heady bouquet of white flowers and rose, confident green notes and rich woods. Beautiful Love was designed to celebrate the depth of a couple's shared love. To achieve this goal, the company created a scent that was inspired by the voluptuous white florals in the original Beautiful but in a more understated way.

The fragrance is also infused with a rich, velvety, deeper tonality, juxtaposed with a modern clarity. Beautiful Love uses less-intense green notes and leaves a creamier and more sensuous lasting impression.

Because of fragrance's ability to incite love and passion, it's no wonder that fragrance and Valentine's Day go hand-in-hand.

Lunar Year Begins Today, Festival Set For Feb. 17

"xin nian kuai le!"

Or, as they say in the English-speaking world, "Happy New Year!"

Yes, the Year of the Rat begins today (Thursday), the first year in the 4,000-year-old Chinese zodiac, the most important holiday for Chinese families, a time of reunion and thanksgiving.

The high point of the 15-day festival will be the 20th annual Quincy Lunar New Year celebration Sunday, Feb. 17, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at North Quincy High School.

"The 2008 festival will mark not only the Year of the Rat and the beginning of a new lunar cycle, but the community's 20th year of celebrating our diversity, tradition and unity in Quincy," said John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI).

"We hope to build on the success of our previous festivals to bring together the community to celebrate and increase awareness of Asian cultures and to better serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American community."

The festival in 2007 attracted an audience of more than 4,000 of all ethnic origins, making it one of the most popular and largest celebrations of the Lunar New Year in Massachusetts.

The free, festive programs scheduled for the 2008 celebration include a traditional lion dance, an array of Asian food from local restaurants, a demonstration of Chinese martial arts and the ancient sounds of musical troupes.

Children are invited to enjoy face-painting, games and crafts.

According to myths from the Chinese dreamtime, the humble rat attached its name to the first year of the lunar cycle in a rather devious way.

The Jade Emperor (or the Lord Buddha) decided to hold a birthday party and advised all the animals of the world that the first 12 of them to swim one of the fastest rivers in China to attend the party would be given his own year in the zodiac.

The rat and the cat made a pact to swim the river together. But the cat overslept and, rather than wake him, the rat talked the water buffalo into letting him ride across the stream on his back.

On reaching shore, the rat jumped off and won the race to the party and was given the first year. The water buffalo (or the ox) was given the second. The Year of the Cat? There is none.

"This year is symbolized by the cunning and innovative rat who rode on the back of the ox to reach the Buddha first in the race," said Josie Ng, co-chair of the festival.

"It is an ideal year to explore new possibilities and ways of thinking, as well as hope for an auspicious new beginning to our endeavors in life. We hope everyone will join us in this celebration."

Police Chief, Union Head Dispute Quiets Down

The veil of secrecy that was thrown over the feud between Police Chief Robert Crowley and the patrolmen's union was lifted briefly last week when union chief Bruce Tait was suspended four days without pay.

Then the talking stopped again as Tait's provocative blog remained closed to the public, both sides in the long-running conflict refused to comment and a spokesman for Mayor Tom Koch offered no new developments.

Tait, president of the Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association, received the suspension Jan. 29 for an alleged violation of the department's sicktime policy. Details were not disclosed.

In the past, Tait, a veteran of 14 years on the force, has called Crowley a liar before the City Council and has campaigned to have him replaced as the chief of police.

Crowley in turn has angered the patrolmen by what they deemed to be tampering with their vacation policy, underfunding patrols and setting them up to be punished for perceived rule violations.

Workshop Revival

Winter has settled in across the country, bringing do-it-yourselfers inside to handle smaller tasks or just leave all the projects alone until spring. So, what to do during this long, quiet lull between battering down the hatches and opening them up again? Prepare for the next home-improvement season, of course.

This is a great time to head to the garage, basement or attic and look over your workshop area. What needs to be cleaned up? What tools need to be out and ready for the spring thaw? What can you do to get one step closer to your dream workshop? Take out a notepad and pencil, and start writing down ideas.

Take an inventory of everything in the shop, from the largest power tool to the smallest nail. Then, make a list of steps needed to clean and organize the area. Here's how I get my workshop in shape for the new year.

The first step should be a sort-and-toss session. Gather everything and sort it by general types: fasteners, like nuts and bolts and nails, go in one pile; hand tools are stacked in another; power tools are gathered at one corner of the room; and so on. Once the items are classified, go through each pile and discard old, unused or broken items. If your larger tools are unused but still work — or can be repaired — donate them to a charity that accepts these items.

Now, take a look at your worktable and shop area. Does the current configuration work for you? Is there enough storage for all the items in your inventory? What would you most like to change about it? Shift things around and add storage boxes, shelves or drawers as needed. If you don't have a good-sized sheet of pegboard above or near your worktable, purchase one — it's a great storage area for hand tools and small boxes.

As you place each tool in its storage space, clean it thoroughly to remove rust and debris. Coat the metal parts with an all-purpose oil, and rub a small amount of linseed oil onto wooden handles to protect them from damp, cold air and fluctuations in temperature.

Finally, decide what your first project will be this year — whether it's yard work, outside repairs or new shelves — and prepare the worktable and the necessary tools for it. When the weather finally warms up and the home-improvement bug hits you, you'll be ready to start hammering away as soon as possible.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homegurru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Total Dollar Volume Of Sales In Norfolk County Down 9%

Report On Quarterly Real Estate Activity

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has released a report showing quarterly real estate activity in Norfolk County for the second quarter of fiscal year 2008.

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the second quarter period October, 2007, through December, 2007, was just short of $1.6 billion.

"This represents a 9% increase from the comparable period last year in dollar volume, although the total number of 3533 deeds recorded during the period shows a decline of 17% from the previous year's quarter,"

O'Donnell said.

"The average sales price of deeds over $1,000 (both residential and commercial properties) rose to $756,026, a 30% increase over the second quarter of fiscal year 2007 when the average price was $580,660. This strong increase is most likely the result of the sale of some larger commercial properties in Norfolk County as well as the continuing trend of medium to higher priced properties selling at a better pace than those at the lower end of the market."

Mortgage recording activity declined 34% on a year to year basis with 7873 new mortgages being recorded despite relatively little movement in mortgage rates compared to last year. In contrast, total mortgage value for the quarter declined by only 23% to $6.7 billion evidencing that the slowing real estate market did not necessarily dampen lenders' willingness to recognize the value of Norfolk County real property.

"It is important to note," O'Donnell said, "that this total amount does not necessarily represent an overall increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity."

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Hundreds of thousands of Registry land records back to 1793 are already available for on-line viewing while the Register continues to expand its indexing capacity to include earlier records.

The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101, or on the internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Flowers Can Brighten A Day

(NU) — Do you characterize yourself as a morning person? Probably not, according to mood research conducted by Harvard University and Massachusetts General Hospital, which found that a majority of people are least positive in the morning.

However, participants of the study reported being happier and more energetic after looking at flowers first thing in the morning.

The following flower tips will help brighten your day:

- Play off of the accent colors in your kitchen. Look around and match decorative wall plates, placemats or curtains to pull out key accent colors.

- Make a big "wow" statement with one type of flower. Take off the leaves below the waterline, and place them in every day kitchen containers such as a big jug or teapot for a burst of cheer.

- Be bold with color by choosing two colors at a time, such as yellow and orange.

Central Real Estate Salutes Outstanding Performers

Central Real Estate principles John Boey, Patty Sullivan and Jian Tan recognized the outstanding performance of several agents in 2007 home sales during a recent awards banquet.

While the event was a pleasant celebration, it did have a somber note since it was the first year of recognition without the agency's founder, Vincent Moscardelli, who died last summer after a lengthy illness.

Mr. Moscardelli's two daughters, Susanne Hegarty and Merilee Trenholm, continue to be involved with the 20-year-old agency.

While Central Real Estate is a Quincy-based company, their staff of agents and client inventory is far reaching. Sales have recently been completed to the south on Cape Cod, north in Malden, Woburn and Reading and as far west as Framingham and Southboro.

"We have seen this home selling market before and we feel sure it will turn around in due time," said Sullivan. "We look forward to making 2008 another banner year for Central Real Estate."

Tips For Choosing The Right Kind Of Mortgage

(NU) - Homebuying can be a stressful or uncertain business at times. In today's market, there's much debate about what type of mortgage to get - adjustable-rate or fixed - and when to consider refinancing an adjustable rate mortgage.

Market Street Mortgage, a retail originator of residential mortgage loans, offers these tips:

If you are buying a home now, consider whether you'll be able to handle the possibility of rate increases before choosing an adjustable-rate mortgage. Don't let the question be simply, "What is the cheaper payment to get me into the house?" because it may not lead to the best choice for the future.

Depending on your situation, you could also consider a five year ARM if you know you'll move before it starts adjusting, or if your projected income will also increase.

On the other hand, for stability, select a fixed-rate mortgage to provide a steady principle and interest part of your mortgage payment.

Take the time to compare the two options side by side. Ask yourself how much you are really saving each month by choosing the adjustable-rate mortgage over the fixed. Is it worth the risk of how the rate will adjust in the near future? Or is it worth the cost of refinancing later?

And what if you already have an adjustable-rate mortgage? Review your documents and determine what the initial fixed period is.

For example, a 5/1 ARM is fixed for the first five years and then adjusts every year after that. So, if you plan on remaining in your home once the loan starts to adjust, you should determine whether you'll be able to afford the new monthly payment that will go into effect.

Get in touch with your mortgage consultant before you reach the adjustment time, so you can start tracking rates and reviewing your options.

Talk with a mortgage consultant so they can provide you with an analysis and the right tools to assist in making your decision.

Mold In Homes

(NU) - According to the American Lung Association and the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, one-third to one-half of all structures have conditions in which mold can grow and thrive.

Red Reef Laboratories, Inc., however, has developed a new, unique product, BioClear, which eliminates pathogens, reduces allergens and minimizes cross contamination. It's highly effective but still non-toxic, biodegradable and safe to use in poorly ventilated areas.

Other tips to keep mold at bay in the home:

- Check to be sure your indoor humidity is between 30 and 60 percent.

- Add extra insulation to areas, such as windows, that create condensation. For more information, visit RRLP at www.RedReef.biz.

Clear The Clutter In Your Home

(NU) - As cooler weather forces friends and family indoors, there's not better time to tackle home improvement projects.

The projects below can be completed by using just one tool - the newly available Dremel 75th anniversary Limited-Edition Rotary Tool Kit.

Dremel, specializing in high-speed rotary tool technology, offers the following project tips:

- Organize your closets. One of the easiest ways to make messes disappear from out in the open is to store necessities behind closed doors. To create more storage inside your closets, install shelves.

Coated wire shelving kits can be easily custom-fit to your exact closet dimensions. Begin by measuring the width of your closet space, and mark that measurement directly only the shelf.

Secure the shelf to prevent movement and use the rotary tool with a cut-off wheel to make your cuts. Finish by smoothing the new edge with a drum sander accessory, and then install the shelf.

- Hide exposed wires. Add a touch of class, and safety, to your house by hiding easy-to-trip over audio and video wires behind baseboards.

First, mark the centerline on the back of the baseboard to serve as your guide. Using a flex-shaft attachment on the rotary tool and a carbide-sanding band, sand a recessed area to accommodate the wiring.

Continue grinding the length of the baseboard. If the band clogs, clean it with a wire brush.

Fasten the cords with tape to hold them in position. Drill and nail base above or below the centerline to avoid hitting any wiring.

- Remove scratches from household hardware. Get rid of age-revealing scratches from doorknobs, cabinet handles and faucets by buffing with a felt or emery-impregnated polishing wheel and rotary tool.

For best results, polish slowly using gentle pressure.

For more household clean-up tips, visit www.dremel.com.

Straighten Up

Q. Over the past few years my posture has gotten terrible. My shoulders have started to slump forward and my back is becoming rounded. Are there any exercises I can do to improve my posture?

A. There are exercises you can do to strengthen the muscles of your shoulders and back, but that might not improve your posture. To improve your posture, you have to look at where the problem lies. Muscle strength and balance, structural abnormalities and being conscious of your body alignment are all considered when doing a postural analysis. Finding out which one or more of these needs to be corrected is the first step in getting things "straightened" out.

A major cause of poor posture among many people is bad habits. The muscles of your back and shoulders can be strong, but if you don't control those muscles and hold them in the proper position, it can result in rounded shoulders and a rounded back. Slouching in a chair at work or while driving can develop poor postural habits that then transfer into everyday situations. Being conscious of keeping your spine in proper alignment may take some time and a lot of work. Use the following tips to help improve your posture.

- Keep all of your muscles strong, flexible and in balance. Strong abdominals, lower back, chest, shoulder, back, neck and legs all play a role in developing good posture. If there is a muscle imbalance, you may find it more difficult to hold yourself in proper alignment all day.

- Analyze your posture. Look (or have someone else look at you) in the mirror from the front and the side, as you would normally stand. Look for your head falling forward, rounded shoulders and back, relaxed abdominals, overly arched lower back, hips pushing forward and uneven shoulders. Try to correct any discrepancies by striving to place your feet shoulder-width apart, knees slightly bent, hips in a neutral position, abdominals and lower back supported, shoulders up and back, and your head not leaning forward. Practice holding this position for as long as possible. If it becomes uncomfortable, find a middle ground, but strive to hold this position until it becomes a new habit.

- Discomfort and pain in your back or shoulders from inactivity or injury can prevent you from wanting to straighten those muscles out. If this is the case, seek professional care to alleviate your pain and properly heal your injury. Also, with age and certain bone conditions, the compression of your spine can cause rounding at your shoulders and back. If you feel this may be the issue, consult your physician.

Write Andrea in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Why The Thyroid Is Important During Pregnancy

Expectant Mothers Should Get Their Necks Checked

(NAPS) - Pregnancy can be an exciting time for a woman. Yet it is also the time when a thyroid condition may surface or become more difficult to control.

That's why the American Association of Clinical Endocrinologists (AACE) is encouraging women who are considering pregnancy or are already pregnant to have their thyroid checked.

"Although many thyroid disorders that affect pregnancy can be treated easily, early detection is critical," said AACE President Richard Hellman. The organization is offering a list of the "Things Every Mother Should Know," which can be found at www.thyroidawareness.com.

Here are a few facts that mothers should know:

Why The Thyroid Is Important During Pregnancy: Even before conception, thyroid conditions that have lingered untreated can hinder a woman's ability to become pregnant or can lead to pregnancy complications. Thyroid hormone is necessary for a baby's normal brain development, since, in early pregnancy, babies get thyroid hormone from their mothers.

Who Should Be Tested: Doctors recommend that all women at high risk for thyroid disease or women who are experiencing symptoms should be tested. Anyone with a personal or family history of thyroid disease, type 1 diabetes mellitus or other autoimmune condition should be tested before becoming pregnant.

Hypothyroidism & Pregnancy: In the U.S. most women who develop hypothyroidism (under active thyroid gland) during pregnancy develop a mild version of the disease. Even a mild version can contribute to complications. Fortunately, the condition can be easily treated with thyroid hormone pills.

Hyperthyroidism & Pregnancy: Any women with hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid) can miscarry in the first trimester or suffer a host of serious ailments. Hyperthyroidism, if untreated, can also lead to stillbirth, premature birth or a low birth weight for the baby.

Mollena Fabricant was diagnosed with a thyroid condition known as Hashimoto's thyroiditis in 2003. As the mother of two young boys, with a third child on the way, she is conscientious about monitoring her condition.

"I make sure to visit with my endocrinologist every single month during pregnancy," she said.

Visit www.thyroidawareness.com for additional information.

'KidsPlay' Open House At BodyFit Feb. 13

BodyFit, 37 Billings Rd., Quincy, will hold an open house Wednesday, Feb. 13 from 2:45 to 3:30 p.m. for "KidsPlay."

Parents and children are invited to take part in the open house. Participants will experience the health benefits of play by engaging in games that improve aerobic fitness, muscle strength, endurance, coordination, agility, flexibility and balance.

KidsPlay is led by Emily

Richardson, a graduate from UMass with a B.S. in sports management. She is currently working on her master's degree in physical education at Bridgewater State College.

Richardson has a background in sports and recreation which she will use to create fun and exciting kids classes in a high energy atmosphere that motivates and encourages children to be active for life.

"Kids need to play where there are no winners or losers," Richardson said. "Kids do not need to wait in another line in order to play an animated game with sensory loading noise and lights."

"They need to play where feedback, encouragement and praise are plentiful. All this in disguise of fitness," she added.

In the U.S., about 10 percent of children ages two to five are overweight, as are about 15 percent of those between six and 19 years old, according to the non-profit Nemours Foundation.

The health effects of childhood obesity include increased risk of type 2 diabetes, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, bone and joint problems, depression and low self-esteem.

Richardson said KidsPlay provides fitness to children "the old-fashion way."

"Children will play games that will never be extinct or need upgrading. Freeze dance, tag, relay race, 'Simon Says,' red light-green light. Now that's a workout."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BABY'S FIRST TEETH

There is an old wives' tale that links how early a baby begins to teethe with mental development. The truth of the matter, or course, is that no such relationship has been proven to exist. Teeth normally erupt as early as three months and continue until a child's third birthday. Parents will typically notice that their child's first tooth pushes through the gumline between the ages of four and seven months. The first teeth to appear are usually the two bottom front teeth (central incisors), followed 4-8 weeks later by the four upper front teeth (central and lateral incisors). About one month later, the two teeth flanking the bottom front teeth (lower lateral incisors) make their appearance.

The timing of when your baby's first tooth comes in can vary quite a bit. We offer high quality dentistry for all family members. Call us at 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We are a highly qualified and experienced team of professionals, thoroughly trained, skillful, and sensitive to your individual needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to make each visit a comfortable and positive experience. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

North Bounces W-H, Marshfield For 1st Place

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raider girls basketball team entered familiar territory atop the Atlantic Coast League's North division with consecutive wins over Whitman-Hanson and Marshfield High Schools last week.

The Raiders (13-4 overall, 10-1 in the ACL) grabbed sole possession of first-place in the ACL North with a 62-53 win over W-H (12-3, 8-2) on Jan. 29 and the team continued its torrid winning pace with a 51-40 victory over Marshfield (10-6, 7-4) on Feb. 1.

Against the Rams (Marshfield), North Quincy survived a challenge on the road. The Raiders' lead was only 22-18 at halftime, but the team, behind the play of junior point guard Siobhan Carnell (20 points) and junior center Catherine O'Connell (11 points) took over in the second half, and ran away with their tenth league win of the year and tenth league win in a row.

The victory over Marshfield followed a huge win over Whitman-Hanson.

The Raiders and Panthers shared the ACL North title last season, but North, after starting the 2007-2008 season with three straight losses, including a 62-53 loss on Dec. 18 against W-H (their only league loss of the season), came up huge in their biggest game of the year so far.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The Raiders defeated the Panthers 62-53 at home, and in the process, took sole possession of first place, and qualified for the post season.

"They handed it to us the in the first game, but that was a long time ago," said first-year head coach Michael Jorgenson. "The team that is on the floor now is a different team. We are more together and gelled and it showed. It was a good effort and mentally we were prepared."

North Quincy, behind the all-star play of senior captain Rebecca Goreham (19 points, 10 rebounds) got out to a 49-46 lead after three quarters of play, but the Panthers used a 6-3 scoring run to start the fourth quarter to tie the score at 52-52.

Once Whitman-Hanson evened the score at the start the final quarter, the Raiders used a balanced scoring attack to go on an 8-1 run to push their advantage to 60-53. Senior Mary Kate Stille, and juniors Kathleen Lynch and Jess Howlett all converted their free throws during this stretch (six-for-six from the charity stripe) and Goreham converted a uncontested lay-up to cap off the 8-1 run and seal the victory for the Raiders.

Stille (11 points), O'Connell (13 points) and Goreham (and the rest of the roster) all complemented each other perfectly and, the result was a confidence building victory for North.

"Our confidence has been building," stated Jorgenson. "All thirteen girls are pulling together. I am proud that these girls meet the challenge against a very good team."

North Quincy played Plymouth North in a league game on Tuesday (Feb. 5) and are scheduled to play a non-league game against Wellesley HS today (Feb. 7) at 6:30 p.m. at the NQHS Gym.

The team's last regular season game is Feb. 15 against city rival Quincy High School.

Quincy's Doug Scott Joins 1,000-Point Club

It was a bittersweet night last Friday for Quincy High School junior guard Doug Scott.

Bitter because the Presidents lost their third straight Atlantic Coast League game in a row (79-68 to Plymouth North) to fall to 8-6 overall and 5-5 in league play. But sweet because with his 24 points, Scott became just the second Quincy hoopster this century to reach the 1,000-point plateau and the first since Dan Kelly did so during the 2000 season.

"I was focused on winning. That's all I wanted to win," said Scott after the game. "It is bad not to do it with a win, but I was glad to score his 1,000 point."

Head coach Bob Fisher had this to say about his star guard after he reached 1,000 points.

"He is a special young man and basketball is his life. He is the hardest working kid at practice and he is a captain as a junior."

The Presidents and Scott had all they could handle with Plymouth North (13-2 overall, 8-2 in ACL play and one-half game ahead of North Quincy for first place.) After a quarter of play, the Presidents trailed by ten points, 23-13, and at the halftime break, Quincy was down 38-30.

Plymouth North opened up their largest lead of the game in the fourth quarter at 61-45, but Scott and the Presidents had one more scoring run in them. Four free throws by senior guard Paris Amado (17 points, three off his season-high), and a Scott jumper fueled a late 7-0 scoring run, and with 5:21 left in the game, the Presidents cut the deficit down to 61-52. But Quincy could get no closer as Plymouth North dominated the offensive and defensive boards, which translated to fast break, transition baskets throughout the night.

The loss to Plymouth North keeps Quincy's magic number for securing a spot in the Division II South Sectional tournament at two (wins). The team played last-place Whitman-Hanson High Presidents 69-54 on Jan. 25 at Quincy High School.

The annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament is scheduled for Feb. 18-19 and Quincy will end its regular season with a home game against Sandwich HS on Feb. 21.

NORTH QUINCY RED RAIDERS: After ten consecutive ACL wins, the Raiders stand alone atop the ACL's North Division with a 10-1 league record. GIRLS' TRACK

The Quincy/Norwell girls track team suffered a heart-breaking loss by one-point to Norwell High School last week, but came up with several outstanding performances at the MSTCA Elite Meet this past weekend.

Against Norwell the meet came down to the final two relays, and Norwell took both for a come-from-behind win, 50-49.

Winners for Q/NQ against Norwell were Alyssa Mullen (one-mile), Jess Davis (600-meters & two-mile), Erica Brady (1000-meters), Becca Stanton (high jump) and Erin Collins (shotput).

QYH Squirt B Team Wins District 3 Title

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirt B team, two weeks ago, defeated Weymouth in a shootout (4-3) to advance and represent District 3-Tier III in the Massachusetts State Championship in Marlborough, MA in March.

The Quincy Squirt B's played in and won three games to secure their spot in the state championship.

The clinching game against Weymouth was played at the Pilgrim Ice Arena (Hingham). Quincy's Dan Deery scored both of his team's two regulation goals (assisted by Johnny Campbell and Justin McGaffigan). His second goal tied the game at 2-2 and sent it into overtime.

After neither team won it in the overtime period, McGaffigan scored on Quincy's first shootout attempt. Max Durham's winning as it gave Quincy two goals in five attempts.

Weymouth scored only once in five shootout attempts as Quincy goalie Greg Selbert was outstanding between the pipes.

The team defeated Wellesley (5-3 in a shootout) at Babson College in the game preceding the Weymouth game.

Forward Mac Deegan scored the first goal (assisted by Jo-Jo McArdle) and center Sean Farnham scored the second goal (assisted by Adam McCormick), but it was Johnny Campbell's goal (assisted by Bobby Hines) that tied the score 3-3 and sent the game into overtime.

Neither team could score in the overtime session, and the game went to the shootout.

Max Durham put Quincy up 1-0 with a pretty score and Dan Deery made it 2-0 with a successful attempt.

Greg Selbert played outstanding in the shootout, stopping all five Wellesley shooters to clinch the win.

Quincy had gotten their District 3 run going with a 2-1 over Franklin in December.

Forward Johnny Campbell tied the game at 1-1 and Justin McGaffigan scored the game winner.

Martin Miller played terrific in goal for Quincy to help clinch their first win.

Bill and Shawn Richardson and Bruce Maggi coach the team.

Quincy JV Hockey Defeats North, Posts 2-2-1 Record

The Quincy Presidents jayvee hockey team gained some revenge for the varsity program with a 4-0 blanking of the North Quincy Red Raiders last Wednesday (Jan. 30) at the Quincy Youth Arena.

A large, supporting crowd watched as the two city high school battled throughout the first period looking to gain an advantage in the offensive end. The Presidents had the better of play, putting constant pressure on the Red Raiders' defense with multiple shots on net. But at the end of one period of play, the score was 0-0.

In the second period, Quincy scored in the first two minutes on goal by their top line. Sophomore center Patrick Conley goal (assisted by sophomore TJ Higgins and junior Patrick Young) put Quincy 1-0.

After two periods of play, the Presidents held a slim one-goal lead.

In the third period at the 1:20 mark, junior defenseman Matt Grady (assisted by captain Dave Bowe and sophomore Tim Young) scored on a shot over the shoulder of the Raiders' goalie to give Quincy a 2-0 lead.

A minute and thirty-one seconds later Quincy went up 3-0 on a goal from freshman Nick Scibilio (assisted John McNulty). Grady would score his second goal of the game later in the period on a pass from Matt Troy to account for the final score of 4-0.

Last Tuesday (Feb. 2), the Presidents played a non-league game versus local schoolboy powerhouse Catholic Memorial.

When the puck was dropped, the two teams started fast, playing an up-tempo style, which favored CM. The Knights scored first to go up 1-0, but a goal from TJ Higgins (assisted by Pat Conley and Pat Young) tied the game at 1-1.

Quincy goalie Ryan Remillard's play between the pipes kept the score 1-1 until midway through the second period when CM went up 2-1. Quincy continued to put pressure on the CM net, but another Knights' goal in the third put the game out of reach.

Quincy 2, Blue Hills Regional 2

On Jan. 26, the Presidents played the Warriors to a 2-2 deadlock at Shea Rink.

From the opening face-off, Quincy dominated the game with most of the action being played in the Warriors side of the ice. The Presidents missed on several scoring opportunities and the first period ended with the score 0-0.

Nick Scibilio broke the deadlock with a second period tally to put Quincy up 1-0, but a breakdown in their defensive end allowed Blue Hills to even the score at 1-1 minutes later. Quincy put Rob Lawton in net to start the third period and he played solid, but with 3:30 left to play, Blue Hills won a scramble in front of the Presidents' net to go up 2-1.

With time running down, the Presidents pulled Lawton for the extra skater and with 15 seconds left to play, Pat Young scored the equalizer. Final score, 2-2.

Marshfield 2, Quincy 1

Quincy and Marshfield met on Jan. 23 at the Quincy Youth Arena. In the first minutes of play it was obvious that the game was going to be physical, with big hits being delivered by both teams.

The Rams would score first, but Higgins (assisted by P. Young) tied the game at 1-1 near the end of the first period of play.

In the second period, both teams played well, but the Rams scored to go up 2-1 after two periods. The Presidents had the opportunity to tie the game late (on a 5-on-3 power play), but couldn't get a shot on goal, and the game ended 2-1 Rams.

Quincy 2, Hanover 1

Quincy and Hanover played each other on Jan. 22 at Shea Rink, and the two teams were tied 1-1 after the first period.

The Presidents' Dave Bowe (assisted by Tim Young and Derek Murphy) scored to put his team up 1-0, but Hanover responded moments later. In the second period, Quincy goalie Ryan Remillard stood on his head to keep the score 1-1.

In the third period, Derek Murphy scored the game-winner on an assist from Young and Bowe, and Quincy hung on to win 2-1.

On Miles For Miracles Team To Benefit Children's Hospital

Quincy's Tracy Wilson To Run 112th Boston Marathon

Tracey Wilson, a Quincy resident, will run in the 112th Boston Marathon on April 21 as a member of the Miles for Miracles Team to benefit Children's Hospital of Boston.

Miles for Miracles runners have an extra incentive to push them across the finish line: helping children and families who receive world-class care at Children's.

Wilson has the honor of running for three-year old "Little Bobby."

"Thinking about all 'Bobby' and his family have been through, including chemotherapy, bone marrow transplant ('Bobby's' nine-month old brother was his donor), and countless visits who wouldn't be here today without Children's. This is why I joined the hospital's marathon team, and I committed to raising funds to help save kids' lives through phenomenal research and care."

"My two children, Alana and Adam have been very fortunate in having a relatively healthy childhood; yet when they have had serious ailments, we too, have experienced the wonderful care of Children's Hospital."

Wilson continued to state that "Children's Hospital has provided 'Bobby' and his family with compassionate staff, unparalleled expertise, and so much more. But 'Bobby' is just one patient. There are thousands of kids who wouldn't be here today without Children's. This is why I joined the hospital's marathon team, and I committed to raising funds to help save kids' lives through phenomenal research and care."

Miles for Miracles team members commit to raising funds to benefit the hospital's areas of greatest need: patient care; medical research; recruitment and training; and community health initiatives. Runners meet this goal through sponsorships, personal donations, and pledges from families, friends and colleagues. The program has raised $8.7 million since 1996.

Wilson will host a Comedy Night event at the Greater Quincy Knights of Columbus on Saturday, April 12 at 7 p.m. Greg Murphy, a local comedian/impersonator, is the headliner.

To sponsor and/or purchase tickets to the event, call Wilson at 617-847-6993, and for more information or to donate online, visit www.childrenshospital.org/marathon and type in the runner's name, Tracy Wilson.

Presidents Win Over Plymouth North 41-23

The Quincy Presidents (7-8 overall, 4-6 in the ACL) held Plymouth North High School to only 23 points on route to a big 41-23 victory at Quincy High School's East Gym last Friday night.

The Presidents, with this league win, need to win three of their final four games to advance to the Division II South Sectional post season. Quincy played Monday night against second-place Whitman-Hanson, and are scheduled to play Marshfield HS on Friday night in Quincy (tip-off 6:30 p.m.).

The team concludes its regular season with games against North Quincy (Feb. 15, NQHS Gym) and Hanover HS (Feb. 20, QHS' East Gym).

In the game against Plymouth North, the Presidents used their patented pressure defense to hold Plymouth North to season-low twenty-three points. The strong defense helped balance a sputtering offensive attack by Quincy.

The leading scorers in the win for the Presidents were captains Meagan Tobin (10 points) and Marybeth Torpey (eight points). Sophomore forward Leslie Campbell contributed to the victory with seven points.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Jan. 24, at approximately 1:20 p.m., Community Policing Officers William Mitchell and Dave Coletti were working in plain clothes in Germantown due to the recent surge in apartment break-ins.

Dispatch informed the area car that there was a breaking and entering in progress on Doane Street and dispatched Officer Harry Breen to the call. Dispatch informed all units that two teenage suspects, wearing hooded sweatshirts, fled on Doane Street.

Officer Breen interviewed the caller, who stated that she saw the suspects hanging around the apartments so she kept an eye on them for about an hour. She observed the suspects approach the door to the apartment building and appear to ring the doorbells, then walk away. She said they returned to the same building and went to the front window of one of the apartments, propped up the screen, then one of the suspects climbed inside and opened the front door for the second suspect to gain entry.

The witness called "911" and observed the suspects flee down Doane Street. Officers Mitchell and Coletti saw a male fitting the description in front of 118 Doane St., so they approached him and identified themselves.

After a brief questioning, Officer Breen was notified that a suspect was being detained. The suspect was placed in the back seat of Lieutenant Brian Tobin's cruiser and brought back to the scene of the break for a show up identification.

The suspect was positively identified by the caller, as well as two other witnesses who saw the suspects run out of the apartment. Detective Karyn Barkas of the Special Investigations Unit arrived at the crime scene and noted that there were two holes cut into the screen and the window was unlocked.

The front door was found open, so Officers entered the apartment to search for other suspects to no avail. The tenant/victim arrived and stated that her apartment was in disarray and things were out of place. She specifically stated that when she left her apartment her laptop computer was under the couch and when she returned it was on top of the table right next to the front door.

The suspect, an 18-year-old Quincy resident was charged with "Breaking and Entering in the Daytime with the Intent to Commit a Felony" and transported to the station for booking. After being booked and given Miranda Rights (right to remain silent, etc.) Detectives Ralph Willard and Michael O'Brien asked the suspect if he would consent to an interrogation. When he consented, the suspect was brought to the interview room where he was advised that the conversation would be video-recorded. The suspect initially told detectives that he was at his friend's house (John) just before being stopped by the police.

The suspect told the detectives he took the bus to Germantown to visit his friend John but he couldn't provide his friend's last name, address or telephone number. When asked to show the detectives where John lived, the suspect said he didn't think he could do that and that his friend John wouldn't be home.

The suspect then said that he never saw John. This was in conflict with what the suspect initially stated and weakened his defense. The suspect denied being involved in the incident on Doane Street, claiming it must have been another party that looked like him.

The defendant could not provide a reasonable explanation for what he was doing in the area. Detectives then went to the crime scene to collect fingerprints to match up with the suspect. Nice Work!

GPS ALERT: Attention to residents in the area of East Squantum Street and surrounding areas. There have been numerous breaks into cars to steal GPS's left in plain sight. As always, remove any valuables, such as iPods, jewelry, briefcases or anything that might perk the interest of a criminal looking into car after car. Many of the breaks are into cars either left unlocked or by smashing a window.

HOME DEPOT AT WILLARD STREET: Vans and trucks of contractors left unoccupied as they shop have been broken into for tools and equipment. Try to park closer to the doors or leave someone with your vehicle. Police Officers regularly patrol the area as a deterrent.

PAST BREAK-INS: Springfield St., South Bayfield Road, Newport Avenue, Colonial Drive, Centre Street.

The Empress Josephine, wife of Napoleon I, attempted to grow every known variety of rose in her garden at Malmaison, near Paris. So widely esteemed was her rose collection that the English, at war with the French, allowed plants for Josephine to cross blockades and permitted her head gardener to travel freely across the Channel. France became a leading grower and exporter of roses.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might feel bolder as each new success falls into place. But caution is still advised through the end of the week. Until then, a step-by-step approach is best.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That cooperation you request could come at too high a price. Since few can beat the Bovine at being clever and resourceful, why not see what you can do on your own?

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor a quieter time spent getting closer to the people who are especially important to you. There's always much more to learn and appreciate about each other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The concerned Crab will act to resolve workplace misunderstandings before they get out of hand and cause more-serious problems. Co-workers rally to support your efforts.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) What the Big Cat might see as a disturbing act of disloyalty might just be a failure of communication on both sides. Take time for mediation rather than confrontation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be more patient with those who seem unwilling to accept your version of what's right. The fact is, there's a lot more to learn on all sides of this issue.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It should be easier to assess the facts you'll need to make an important decision. But don't commit if you still have doubts. There could be more you need to know.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your excitement level remains high as you continue working on that new project. Expect some setbacks. But on the whole, all will move pretty much on schedule.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It might be wise to be more prudent with expenses right now. But your financial situation should soon clear up, and you could be back shopping, happily as ever.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might prefer sticking with your current schedule. But some newly emerging information could persuade you to consider a change. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to reject a suggested change. But it could be wise to go with the flow, at least for a while. You can always return to your first plan if you like.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're bolstered by both the practical and poetic sides of your nature as you maneuver through some unsettled emotional situations. Things ease up by week's end.

BORN THIS WEEK: People reach out to your generosity and wisdom, and consider you a treasured and trusted friend.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

If you were asked, "What quality distinguishes a great man from a little man pretending to be great?" - how would you answer? ... There are many reasonable answers to this question ... Truthfulness, honesty, thoughtfulness are but a few.

"The instinct for revenge" also distinguishes the great men from the little men ... It is the unflinching mark of the little man that he spends his hours day-dreaming and plotting how to "get even" for real and fancied injuries ... Men of great stature and personality know the futility of spending time in this way.

Abe Lincoln was just a man ... completely free from bitter malice and the urge to do his political adversaries "in." Contrary to all political practice, he put his political enemies in the cabinet - Edwin Stanton, William Seward, Salmon Chase, who had called Lincoln a "clown" and a "gorilla." He cared not what they thought of him, so long as they could do a good job in public service ...

We are always most appreciative of any comments you might have on the articles presented here ...

Preservation Committee To Set Year 2 Spending

The Community Preservation Committee will hold a public hearing on Year 2 disbursement of community preservation funds Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 7 p.m. in the City Council chamber at City Hall.

Quincy received $2.2 million from a surcharge on the tax rate and state matching funds in Year 1 under the Community Preservation Act that was approved by 56 percent of voters in November, 2006.

The public will have an opportunity at the Feb. 13 meeting to suggest ways in which the Year 2 money should be spent on affordable housing, open space and historic preservation.

They can also pick up an application for funding to be returned to the Planning Department not later than March 28 at 4 p.m. Applications also will be available at the Planning Department until March 28.

The meeting will open with an overview of the workings of the Community Preservation Act and an explanation of how the money from Year 1 was spent. Thirteen projects were full or partially funded.

Disbursements included $100,000 for administrative costs, $220,000 for neighborhood housing, $300,000 for historic preservation, $92,000 for recreation and most of the rest for three open space sites.

Alicia Gardner, former city councillor and now Director of Support Services, Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, was elected Democratic State Committeewoman. She succeeds Bernice Mader who did not seek re-election.

Atty. Christine Cedrone, former member of the Quincy School Committee, was re-elected Republican State Committeewoman.

Dominic Paulo of Quincy Shore Drive challenged Matthew Sisk of Braintree for the Republican State Committeeman seat and topped him in Quincy. Final votes in the district were unavailable at press time.

making a motion to nominate a candidate, confirmed by a second of the motion.

The first candidate to receive a majority vote of the nine councillors and six School Committee members (in this case eight) will be the designee of the convention.

If no candidate receives a majority in the first vote, the candidate receiving the fewest votes will be eliminated from further consideration and the voting will continue.

Roberts Rules of Order will be followed throughout the proceedings.

In the past, vacancies on the School Committee have been filled by choosing the first runnerup in the last election as happened in 2002 when Elaine Dwyer was picked to succeed William Phelan, when he became mayor.

At least three candidates have indicated an interest in filling the vacancy created by Timmins, who resigned with two years to go in his four year term that is up in 2009.

Nick Puleo, 24, a senate budget analyst who finished fourth in last November's election; Karl Roos, 40, a pharmaceutical salesman; and Robert Haley, the town treasurer of Hanover.

Next Step Is Split From City Overseers

Quincy College's New Campus In Full Swing At 150 Newport Ave.

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy College opened its new campus in North Quincy this school year just in time for its 50th anniversary this spring.

Now, college classes are in full swing for a second semester at Newport Hall at 150 Newport Ave. Some 2000 students of the college's nearly 4000 enrollment are using the new facility. During a recent tour of Newport Hall, College President Sue Harris, faculty members, and college students spoke in glowing terms of their new space.

Under the terms of the five-year lease, Quincy College pays an annual $1.2 million plus approximately $65,000 in utility charges. The college has an additional three-year option.

"Tuition will pay for the rent," said Harris, adding, "The City pays nothing for operating Quincy College. None of our costs come from the taxpayers."

Visitors and students enter the building through a high-rise atrium planted with greens and ficus and tulips that will bloom in the next months. All say their new home is a welcome change despite occasional nostalgia for Quincy Center.

As president, Harris conducted the lengthy and, oftentimes difficult, search for new space for classes. The college had no choice but to move, according to Harris as the regional college accreditation's committee found that their original space in six different buildings, "did not meet accreditation standards."

During the search, the college was rejected by one of the major office building owners in Quincy Center and other appropriate space, large enough and suitable for classes, was not available.

Total Price Tag Now Over $100M Councillors Critical Of $1.3M Excess Costs For New QHS

Construction costs for the new Quincy High School are running $1.3 million over budget due to sewer and storm drain problems and a fuel oil tank clean up, according to the contractor and project manager who reported Monday to the City council.

The new estimates will bring the total cost over $100 million, according to the update provided Monday to the council.

Both Jim Anderson of Tishman Construction Corp. and Jim Driscoll of Gilbane Construction Co., told city councillors that the problems were not foreseen in the original bidding.

However, councillors repeatedly challenged the city's responsibility for the new costs, suggesting that contractors should have known about the sewer problems in advance.

The original budget provided $98,712,000 for the total construction cost while the latest cost is $100,098,643.

Contractors cited a $1.8 million cleanup of old underground fuel oil tanks that had not been considered during the bidding process and the $658,812 cost for the replacement of sewer and storm drains along Woodward Ave.

There may be more financial problems in the future, according to Anderson who said that two bids, one for the electrical work and one for masons are being challenged.

"We still do have two other protest bids," said Anderson who reported that the issue will be reviewed in the state attorney general's office today. The result of the

Puleo Wins School Committee Seat By 10-4-1 Convention Vote

Nick Puleo won the vacant School Committee seat Monday by a majority vote of the Joint Convention of the City Council and School Committee.

Puleo topped the three-way contest with a 10-4-1 vote.

Immediately after the vote, Puleo was sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea. He will fill the seat vacated by James Timmins who resigned last month after being named city solicitor by Mayor Thomas Koch.

The mayor who serves as chairman of the School Committee and voted for Puleo congratulated him.

"I look forward to working with Nick on the school committee," said Koch, adding, "He proved

Koch Tunes In To Concerns Of Public Housing Residents

Mayor Tom Koch has begun revisiting some of his old campaign stops to listen to the concerns of people living in public housing. This time he visits as chief executive of the city.

The mayor hosted a coffee hour at the Quincy Housing Authority's senior complex at 80 Clay St., Wollaston, a location he visited three times during his campaign for the city's highest office.

He listened to a wide range of issues, some large, some minor, including the loss of hot water for a substantial period last year. He was accompanied QHA

Board Member Christine Cedrone.

"Although the Quincy Housing Authority is an independent agency, these are still residents of our city," said Koch. "They need to know somebody is listening and that is exactly what the city intends to do."

Koch said he plans similar coffee hours at other QHA complexes, inviting other commissioners as well as state and federal housing officials to come along with him.

"I am looking forward to working with authority commissioners and the state and federal governments to address the concerns that many Housing Authority residents have expressed to me over the past several months," he said.

Tourism Director Says:

Quincy Could Be Magnet For Major Movie Locations

MARK CAREY

Bringing the stars to Quincy will also bring big money to the city treasury and to private businesses, according to Tourism Director Mark Carey who will organize a Quincy Film Bureau as part of Discover Quincy's new outreach.

Carey told city councilors that Quincy could become a major destination for Hollywood film producers with the proper organization and a one-stop shop for potential film producers.

Massachusetts has become the "East Coast Hollywood," said Carey, predicting that Quincy can cash in on the trend.

"We've had four major films," said Carey who noted that producers spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for each project.

"We couldn't be a more ideal location," said Carey citing Quincy's history, oceanfront and flavor that have already attracted producers. "They came here by osmosis."

In recent months, Quincy has hosted producers filming such stars as Cameron Diaz, Nicholas Cage, Kevin Spacey and Kate Bosworth. Tom Hanks was here for an HBO mini-series on the Adams family.

Not only will more tourists be drawn to the city, but also money will flow into both the public and private sectors, according to Carey.

Carey cited the budgets of the movies, which included segments in Quincy. "The Departed" had a budget of $90 million; "Gone, Baby Gone," a budget of $19 million and "The Box," a budget of $30 million. The budget is unknown for the fourth film called "21."

"Every time, a city service is used by these movie companies, it is money that was never budgeted" that boosts the city treasury, said Carey who noted that private businesses, also, benefit in a "massive" way.

As for attracting tourists, Carey said that when a film is a success, "people want to visit those sites (depicted) in the movie."

In the near future, HBO will release a seven-part mini-series on the Adams family produced by Tom Hanks. The series is expected to increase the number of tourists visiting the Adams historical sites.

"I hope you people are prepared for what's going to happen to this city," said Carey predicting a new onslaught of tourists from all over the country and all over the world.

Under Carey's plan, the Quincy Film Bureau will offer easy access and help for productions companies and actively seek new projects. Initially, the Bureau will provide photos for potential locations, and connect businesses to the appropriate producers.

Among the other benefits, Carey said the Bureau will coordinate traffic, police, park and public works issues affected by each production.

Without organization, there can be problems with film companies disrupting city neighborhoods as Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly pointed out.

Kelly said traffic on Sea Street in Houghs Neck was tied up for 45 minutes when Carmen Diaz was filming "The Box."

Once the film bureau is involved, that should not happen, according to Carey who said that coordinating such filming would be the job of the film bureau.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said he understood "the traffic concerns of Mr. Kelly." However, he added that, anytime, "you want to bring Tom Hanks or Cameron Diaz to Ward 5, we'll be happy to welcome them."

Carey's presented segments of a $65,000 promotional videotape to the City Council which then approved a $125,000 appropriation for Quincy 2000 for 2007. The funds are raised through the city's hotel/motel tax.

The appropriation brings Quincy 2000's total budget this year to $342,500, an increase of $115,000 over last year's $227,500. All but $65,000 of that sum is raised through grants from the state, private groups, fund-raisers or advertisers.

Additional funding may be coming available through state agencies, according to Carey.

Quincy Democrats elected 192 ward committee members in last week's presidential primaries.

There were no ward committee candidates on the Republican ballot, opening the gates to write-in votes.

But City Clerk Joseph Shea said that no Republicans were elected because no one received the required minimum five write-in votes.

The Democratic committee members elected were:

Quincy Joins Challenge For Renewable Energy

The city of Quincy has joined 15 other Massachusetts communities in accepting the Community Solar Challenge.

To meet the Challenge, 150 households in Quincy must choose to support local, renewable energy by signing up for National Grid's New England GreenStart program by April 30.

If successful, the city will earn a two-kilowatt solar panel on a city building or school.

The Challenge will kick off Wednesday, Feb. 20, at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., with a showing of Jeff Barries' award-winning documentary "Kilowatt Ours."

The documentary examines the environmental and social consequences of America's voracious appetite for coal-generated electricity and suggests attainable and affordable solutions.

The showing is sponsored by the Quincy Environmental Network, Mass Energy and Clean Water Action.

Following the film, Larry Chretien, executive director of Mass Energy Consumers Alliance, will discuss the New England GreenStart program and answer any questions.

Quincy resident can sign up for renewable energy at the event by bringing a copy of their electric bill or by visiting massenergy.com/options.html.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 17, 1801, after one tie vote in the Electoral College and 35 indecisive ballot votes in the House of Representatives, Vice President Thomas Jefferson is elected the third president of the United States. The confusing election exposed major problems in the presidential electoral process.

• On Feb. 14, 1842, fans of Charles Dickens organize the Boz Ball, an elite party for the celebrated writer. (Dickens' earliest works had been published under the pseudonym Boz.) Only members of New York's aristocracy were invited, and tickets were priced at the then-outrageous sum of $10.

No Romance For Modern Valentine Creator

If it hadn't been for a spinster who lived her later years here in Quincy, Valentine's Day might be just plain Feb. 14, another cold, ho-hum day in the middle of winter.

Esther A. Howland, who apparently never found her own true love, was the mother of the American valentine of today.

Because of her, Feb. 14 is now the day to be sure to tell that someone special "I love you" with a valentine, candy, flowers, or jewelry, etc.

Esther lived most of her life in Worcester, graduated from Mount Holyoke College in 1849.

That year, she came across a number of valentines sent from England to her father, who owned a Worcester stationery and bookstore.

Esther, as the story goes, didn't think much of them and decided she could create better ones. She came up with some samples and before long was soon on her way to a $100,000 a year business which in turn sparked the nation-wide industry we know today.

Esther lived in Worcester until 1886 after both her mother and father had died. She had given up her valentine business in an act of love-to care for her bedridden father.

She came to Quincy to live with her brother, Charles, at 9 Adams St. And died there March 15, 1904 at the age of 75.

She never married, apparently never finding her own valentine in life.

But she did live to see the nation-wide industry that was spawned by her creations back in 1849.

And she must have smiled whenever she thought of the instructor at Mount Holyoke College who back around the time she was creating her valentines, was warning his students against "sending any of those foolish notes called valentines."

How did Feb. 14 get to be Valentine's Day?

According to legend, it goes back to the year 270 and a man named Valentinus, believed to be a Roman priest who helped Christian martyrs persecuted under Emperor Claudius II. A crime punishable by death.

Valentinus, the story goes, was arrested and brought before the Emperor and tried to convert him to Christianity.

Claudius was so impressed by Valentinus; he tried to save his life by converting him to the Roman gods. Valentinus refused and was condemned to be beaten, stoned and beheaded.

According to the legend, while awaiting execution, Valentinus became friends with the blind daughter of his jailer and restored her sight.

On the eve of his execution, he supposedly wrote her a farewell note and signed it: "From your Valentine."

The next day, he was beheaded. The date: Feb. 14. But let me close this on a lighter note, especially for you men:

Roses are red,
Violets are blue
If you forget her today,
I pity you.

In our recent "One More Time" column we noted one of the things we'd like to see again was "Little Johnny" Swanson coming into The Sun office to pay his paper route bill.

Little Johnny, of course, grew up to become Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church, and sends along a musing response to the item:

INSULTING Valentines in rhyme were popular in the mid-19th century before Esther Howland put love and romance into them. The rhyme at the bottom of this valentine reads:

Your portrait here you see, my dear,
'Twill make you rather vain, I fear;
For though in some respects quite true,
In others it really flatters you.

(Valentine courtesy Quincy Historical Society)

"Having just hit the big five-O, I was happy to be referred to as 'little Johnny' Swanson in your recent Sunbeams column.

REV.
SWANSON

"Having recently celebrated the 15th anniversary of my pastorate at Union Congregational Church, Wollaston, I can now safely assume that I am a better minister than I was paperboy.

"You gave me my first job as a paperboy and my mother and sister often helped me deliver my papers, or better put, adamantly insisted that

Thursday's Sun was supposed to be delivered on the Wednesday before, maybe the Thursday of, but never the Saturday following, which was my natural inclination.

"With Mom and Sis' adamancy regarding delivery and your kind and gentle encouragement in paying my bill to The Sun (you did have a way with youth regarding responsibility: 'John, if you don't pay your bills you go to jail.')

"This matched my Mother's, 'Jackie! Deliver your papers! My paper route in West Quincy somehow survived.

"I kept my route for two years, then gave it to Lillian Callahan of Hopedale Street. Lillian was The Sun's first papergirl and she was much better at it than I ever was. She more than quadrupled the size of the route and kept it for a couple of years.

"Thanks for the memories, Henry.

"And yes, I did pay my last Sun bill."

Congratulations John on your 50th and 15th. And you'll always be one of our favorite paperboys.

You're sure about that last bill?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1928 postcard showing what was known then as the Fratus Building on the corner of Billings Road and Hancock Street in Norfolk Downs. The Fratus family, who had an automobile business next door on Hancock Street where they sold Paiges and later Pontiacs, owned it. Built originally as a one-story building this picture was taken shortly after the second floor was added. On the upper corner was the office of the well-known dentist Dr. Walter Phipps. On the ground level Albion R. MacKay, who had been a clerk at the Tubular Rivet and Stud Company, opened this store in 1916 selling newspapers and stationery. He also published and sold many of the postcards that have appeared in this column over the years. In 1937, he converted the store into the Norfolk Pharmacy, but, after becoming ill, he sold out in 1940 and it then became known as the Naborhood Pharmacy. Today, this corner is home to the Wah Cheung Hing, Co., an Asian-owned eclectic variety and package store. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Yesterdays

St. Valentine's Day Blizzard Showed No Love

By FRANK McCAULEY

Digging themselves and their property out of the St. Valentine's Day Blizzard, one of the worst snowstorms of a generation, the people of Quincy have a vague idea—a peacetime picture-of conditions which the embattled Finns and Russians are facing under the cold shadow of the Arctic Circle.

It will take two days and from $20,000 to $25,000 of municipal money to dig the city out from under the foot thick white shroud and restore Quincy life to normalcy, Mayor Thomas S. Burgin estimated.

The entire resources of the city were hurled, bright and early, into the task of digging Quincy out from one of the worst snowfall in several decades. The depths of the snow was increased in places by a northeast gale that piled up great drifts which reached the depth of 10 and 12 feet in some cases.

Four small summer cottages owned by George Lord, 836 Sea St., and located at the beginning of Babcock Street, where it joins Sea Street, were demolished by the grinding ice churned up by the battering gale.

Hundreds of motorists were forced to abandon their cars on the snow-choked roads. Quincy Patrolmen John Flaherty, Charles Ferrazzi, James Ford and Chester Inman, manning an ambulance, took an East Weymouth man who collapsed on a bus, to Quincy City Hospital.

A contingent of Quincy firefighters led by Captain Thomas Gorman put out a fire at the home of Patrick Gilcoine, 60 Parker St.

Cahill's Limerick Contest Encourages Youngsters To Save Money

State Treasurer Tim Cahill is out to encourage residents of Massachusetts to save their money — those schoolkids in the third to sixth grades anyway.

Cahill's Financial Education Department is conducting a limerick contest as part of the Savings Makes Sense program with a first, second and third place winner from each grade.

Prizes are $500, $200 and $100 savings bonds respectively.

A limerick is a form of poetry that has five lines. Lines one, two and five have eight or nine syllables and rhyme with each other. Lines three and four have five or six syllables and also rhyme with each other.

The Treasurer's Office suggests as an example:

There once was a very good rule

A plan about saving in school

Kids saved in the bank

Had Cahill to thank

And everyone thought they were cool

Submissions should be made to:

My most heartfelt congratulations to Bob and Gloria Noble for being named The Quincy Sun's Citizens of the Year 2007. Between Quincy Christmas Festival and First Night, they both have served a combined 80 years. They are only in their 80s and going strong.

In the divided families in the whole country it is wonderful to see a husband and wife together accomplishing more in 55 years as Quincy residents than most of us could do in a lifetime.

I would like to thank

Carol Harding, for in nominating me she honored me and provided a high point in my life.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Jimmy's Eggless Meatloaf

Our son Jimmy, who is a doctor in New York, recently made a "house call" to see his dad who had been hospitalized to he could see for himself how he was.

So in anticipation of his arrival and the knowledge that all of his siblings would want to see him, I began my preparations for the food, which is so important!

After making homemade chicken soup, apple pie, and preparing my chicken entree, there was still tomato sauce to be made. After all, what is a meal without a pasta dish?

Knowing how he loves to cook, I decided to have him make the sauce. I already had made turkey meatballs which were in the freezer. He was thrilled and we were too, because he has made his delicious sauce for us before.

While he was getting ready to make the sauce, he told me how he recently was making a meatloaf, but didn't have any eggs. So he looked on the internet and found a recipe without the eggs. He said he plans to use this recipe often. It only has a few ingredients and so easy to prepare.

He used a pound and half of a mixture of beef, pork and veal.

EGGLESS MEATLOAF

1 1/2 pounds ground meat

1 tablespoon ketchup

1 cap full of Gravy Master

1 tablespoon mayonnaise

1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs

Mix all together until blended and place in a slightly greased baking pan (or loaf pan) and bake in a 350 degree oven uncovered for 35 minutes or more if needed depending on the type of baking dish.

Author To Discuss 'The Boston Italians' At Historical Society Feb. 21

Author Stephen Puleo will discuss his best-selling book, "The Boston Italians," Thursday, Feb. 21, at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society in the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St.

Focusing on Boston's North End, the book takes the reader through the first sizable Italian immigrations in the late 1800s through the achievements of Italian-Americans in the 20th century.

It explores their struggle to overcome poverty and prejudice, the emergence of an Italian-American identity during the Depression and World War II and introduces their historical leaders.

The author recounts the process of discovering unrecorded and half-forgotten history in his research as well as his own experience growing up in the North End as the son of immigrants.

Puleo is also the author of "Dark Tide," the story of the great Boston molasses flood; and "Due to Enemy Action," about the torpedoing of a Navy training ship in the waning days of World War II.

There is no charge for admission.

John Quincy Adams To Greet First Church Parishioners

John Quincy Adams, in the person of actor/historian Jim Cooke, will greet those attending services at United First Parish Church Sunday, Feb. 17, at 10:30 a.m. in acknowledgment of Presidents Day (Feb. 18).

J. Q. Adams, the sixth president of the United States, as well as his father, John, the second president, was a communicant of the church, which he called "the Stone Temple."

JIM COOKE as JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

The two presidents and their wives, Abigail and Louisa Catherine, are buried in the crypt of the church.

Cooke said he would cheerfully greet parishioners despite Adams' remark: "I am a man of reserved, cold, austere and forbidding manners. I have not the pliability to reform it."

Bonaparte, The Magician To Perform at Christ Church

Bonaparte, the Magician, will perform Presidents' Day, Monday, Feb. 18 at 11 a.m. at Christ Church, 12 Quincy Ave., Quincy Center. The event is free and open to the public.

This popular children's magician has won praise from children's librarians, scouting leaders, the staff of Children's Museum, Boston as well as scout leaders, and officers of such corporations as State Street Bank.

There is no charge but organizers will need an estimate on the number of those planning to attend. To register, call 617-773-031.

The church is at the intersection of School St., Elm St., Hancock St., and Quincy Ave.

Free Fun For All At Coffee Break Cafe

There's free fun for all at the Coffee Break Cafes (CBC).

Every Tuesday is game night from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. at three locations.

In addition, there are two story-times scheduled for the young ones in February. And there'll be an open Mic night every Wednesday and live music every other Monday and on some weekends.

On Tuesday "Game Nights," patrons enjoy good old-fashioned fun with board games, cards, or puzzles. Electronics are out, but there are plenty of games like Monopoly, Scrabble, and, of course, Battleship. Patrons and customers can, also, bring in their own games.

The Tuesday night "Game Nights" are held at three CBC locations—at 12 Old Colony Ave., Wollaston, at 77 Parkingway, Quincy Center, and 131 Pearl St., Braintree.

Staffer Jennifer Ormond reports that everyone is having so much fun that the staff has been playing Battleship with customers on Thursday mornings for a free cup of coffee. In those games, each customer gets to guess to sink a battleship. If they sink it, they get their order free.

Big Joe tells the stories to the young ones during the story hours scheduled twice a month. Big Joe uses puppets, and sings songs for kids while the parents or caregivers can relax with a cup of coffee.

February story hours will be held Tuesday, Feb. 5 at 10:30 a.m. at CBC Quincy Center, 77 Parkingway. These story times are scheduled Tuesday, Feb. 28 at 10:30 a.m. at CBC Braintree, 131 Pearl St.

Every Wednesday night, the microphone is open to singers, musicians, writers, and poets at 77 Parkingway from 6-8 p.m. Sometimes, dancers come and show off their talent.

There's also live music every other Monday and sometimes on weekends at Coffee Break Cafes. Everything's always free and always fun.

For an up-to-date schedule, visit www.myspace.com/coffeebreakcafe.

QMC Honors Employee Service Milestones

Quincy Medical Center recently hosted an Employee Service Awards ceremony to honor the commitment and service of its longstanding employees.

In total, 236 Quincy Medical Center employees were recognized for reaching and surpassing service milestones of five, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, 40, 45 years of employment.

Quincy resident Hugo Salvatore, was the ceremony's "elder statesman", receiving his pin for 45 years of service in the medical center's maintenance and engineering department.

"The fact that we have so many long-time employees is a true testament to the commitment and dedication our employees possess," said Gary Gibbons, MD, president and CEO. "This carries through in their work each day—whether they are at the bedside or behind a desk, whether they are drawing blood or working hard to keep the units clean—their contributions are valued and their work matters, to all of us and to our patients."

Thank you to all of our award recipients for their long standing service and their tremendous contributions to the health and education of our community."

NQHS Renaissance Dance Company Presents 'Strictly Dance'

The show is lively. It's hip hop and it's thrilling.

That's how Erica Limoncelli describes "Strictly Dance," presented Wednesday evening (Feb. 13) at 7 p.m. at North Quincy High School (NQHS). The tickets cost $7 for general admission and $5 for students.

The show features the eight dancers studying dance with Director Limoncelli in the Renaissance Dance Program at NQHS. The stars are all teenagers, mostly from Quincy, and they've practiced 10, 20 and 30 hours a week.

Not only do the Renaissance dancers perform in the program, but the young cast also includes the NQHS Dance Team, the jsXtension dance company, and the Rainbow Tribe of Boston.

"They will definitely excite the audience," said Limoncelli, Director of the Renaissance Dance at NQHS, after Monday's successful dress rehearsal.

On the program are such numbers as "Canned Heat," "First Cool Hive," "Gyrate," and "Me Against the Music."

Three Students Awarded Paul Harold Scholarships

Three college students from Quincy have been awarded Paul D. Harold Scholarships to continue their studies in government at colleges where they have recently completed the fall semesters of their freshmen years.

The students are Jordan Blair, a 2007 graduate of Quincy High School attending Massasoit Community College; Bridget Hawko, a 2007 graduate of Quincy High School attending Quincy College; and Christopher Boyd, a 2007 graduate of North Quincy High School attending Providence College.

The scholarships were created to help students defray the cost of school in hopes that the recipients will follow the lead of Paul Harold in becoming a community leader.

Harold, who died in August, 2002, was a Quincy city councillor, state senator and county register of deeds who was frequently called on by the State Department to visit foreign countries and explain the American system of government.

Scholarship applications for the year 2008 will be available in March.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Feb. 2, at approximately 3:15 a.m., Officers Sean Glennon and Patrick Folan were dispatched to Quincy on a report of a fight in progress.

Upon arrival, the female caller invited the officers in. She stated that her 25-year-old son was upstairs and that he was "out of control, tearing the place apart." She said that he tried to kill her by strangulation.

Officer Glennon learned the son/suspect was upstairs, but he was with his girlfriend. It was determined there were no weapons in the room, but there was a concern because the suspect was a veteran of the Marine Corps who served three tours of duty in Iraq and he suffered from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD).

The officers entered the bedroom where the suspect and his girlfriend were. The suspect was in an agitated state, breathing heavy, rapidly pacing around the room and uttering threatening tirades at the officers, such as "You Quincy cops are &&#%#@, get the &&#@ out of here, I've killed people!"

His girlfriend was sitting on a bed in the rear of the room, seemingly oblivious to the commotion going on around her. The room itself was in complete disarray with a broken fish tank leaking water and several fist-sized holes in the walls.

Officer Glennon was familiar with the suspect and attempted numerous times to calm him and to reassure him that they wanted him to get psychological help. The suspect then walked into a corner and his paranoia grew quickly. He said to the officers, "Look at you two coming in here to get me with your green coats." The officers noted in their reports that they were both wearing the traditional police uniform and did not have any clothing colored green on. The suspect then grabbed a pointed metal pen, extended it away from his body and thrust it out in the direction of both officers.

He then yelled, "I've killed plenty of people bigger than you, I'll @*&#% stab you both!" The officers, fearing for their safety as well as the girlfriend, the mother and the suspect, aimed their mace canisters and ordered the suspect to drop the pen or he would be sprayed. The suspect immediately complied by placing it down on the desk, then calmed briefly.

The suspect was instructed to sit on the bed and he complied. Again, the officers told the suspect that they were there to help him through his situation. When Officer Bob Sweetland arrived, Officer Folan went downstairs to interview the caller so they could determine what occurred prior to their arrival.

Since the suspect was calm, he was allowed to get dressed, but once he finished putting his shirt on, he again became highly agitated. He began ranting about his military service in Iraq and his experiences of killing in combat. He then stood up from the bed and grabbed a collapsed folding chair on the floor. He raised the chair and began to wheel around in the direction of the officers, attempting to strike them.

Officer Glennon waited between chair rotations and then grabbed the suspect in a bear hug, forcing the chair to drop to the floor. The suspect struggled violently as the Officers attempted to handcuff him. The suspect kicked Officer Folan in the upper thigh and struck Officers Glennon and Sweetland with his flailing arms.

The officers were able to push the suspect on to the couch, and then fell on top of him as they put the handcuffs on. Even though the suspect was no longer a threat to the officers, he stated angrily that he wanted to kill himself.

Sergeant Joseph Lencki arrived on scene and initially wanted the suspect taken to the hospital for psychological evaluation, but due to the violent and disruptive behavior, the suspect was transported by cruiser to the station. Fallon Ambulance E.M.T.s medically cleared the suspect, who was now cooperative and then booked in the usual manner by Sergeant Gerry Connolly.

Due to the violent nature of the call, initially there was little time to fully understand the situation from

At North Quincy High School

Lunar New Year Festival Saturday

Once again, the more and more familiar sounds of a Chinese Lion Dance will echo through North Quincy High School, opening the 20th annual celebration of the Lunar New Year by Quincy's Asian population.

The festival will be held Sunday, Feb. 17, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., a time to sample Asian food, listen to Asian storytellers and enjoy entertainers from Chinese, Korean, Vietnamese and other traditions.

Last year's festival attracted more than 4,000 people and a like number are expected to help celebrate the Year of the Rat, the first of the 12 years in the 4,000-year-old Chinese zodiac.

Vendor sections in the high school cafeteria and the gym may feature "nian gao," the traditional steamed rice cakes; "jiao zi," a steamed dumpling; and small dumpling balls called "tang yuan."

Five diverse Asian restaurants will supply the foods, including South Garden (Chinese), BaLe Fields Corner (Vietnamese), Siam House (Thai), Fuji 1546 (Japanese) and Turo Turo (Filipino).

Entertainment will be continuous on a performance stage set up in the high school gym.

The Lion Dance, the traditional opener for all Chinese celebrations and festivities, will be performed at 11 a.m. by students from the Shaolin Hung Gar Martial Arts Academy of Boston.

There is also an aerobics-like performance by the Boston Yuan Chi Dance Association; classical and folk dances from India by Eastern Rhythms; and folk dancing by the Dance Philippines Performing Arts Co.

There will be a kids' area where the youngsters can enjoy games and activities such as face-painting and crafts, perhaps a chance to make traditional tissue flowers using tissue, crepe paper, wire and a pair of scissors.

Seniors will also have an area of their own.

For more information on the celebration, call the sponsoring Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., (QARI) at 617-472-2200 or visit qari.info.

FOOT NOTES

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

WHEN SHOULD YOU CHOOSE BUNION SURGERY?

Bunions are painful bumps made up of bone and tissue that develop on the foot as a response to pressure on certain joints and bones of the foot. The first line of treatment often includes different shoes, orthotics, and anti-inflammatory drugs. When these treatments do not work, people often consider bunion surgery. Approximately 90% of people who have the surgery are happy with the results. If you find it difficult to walk more than a short distance, even in athletic shoes, you may be a candidate for bunion surgery. Chronic inflammation of the big toe, or a big toe that is starting to look misshapen or cannot be straightened, are also indications that bunion surgery may be a good choice. If surgery is the recommended course of action to deal with your particular foot problem, you'll be glad to know that today's techniques make the process easier and faster, and recovery is quite a bit more comfortable than even just a few years ago. If you are the victim of bunions, hereditary concerns, toe problems, sports injury, or disease, consider professional podiatric help. At QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER, we have three basic goals: to relieve pain, restore function, and improve appearance. Please call 781-986-3668 for an appointment. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221.

P.S: There are different kinds of bunion surgery.

Councillors Critical Of $1.3M Excess Costs For New QHS protest could also affect the project's bottom line.

On the brighter side, Driscoll said the school should be fully operational by the fall of 2010.

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, also, praised the project's success in constructing the new school while Quincy High School is in session.

"You're actually building a school around a school," Said Davis

Several councils criticized the explanation on the new charges for the sewer work and the lack of publicity on the oil leaks.

"It stretches the imagination that no one foresaw the possibility (of problems) from a 100-year old sewer pipe..." said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

"You don't put a brand-new building on a 100-year old system," said Raymondi

Councillor Joseph Finn and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin told Anderson they want to see the actual tapes of the sewer system used during the bidding process.

Finn noted that these videos of the system are being used for numerous purposes. "It's critical (to determine) whether this technology is really capable of detecting this kind of problem."

"I'd love to see the tape," said Coughlin, suggesting that the city might engage in some type of cost recovery from either consultants who missed the old pipes or contractor.

"That seems irresponsible," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who questioned why the council was just learning new figures.

"We need to see something a little more detailed," McNamee said, asking for more frequent updates.

Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro asked why the contractors did not publicize the problems with the old oil tanks under the building.

According to the report, several thousand gallons of oil seeped into the grounds from unused tanks discovered during construction.

"Risk or no risk. It's about disclosure," said Gutro, noting that the contractors had an "obligation to talk to the neighbors."

The total fuel tank clean was listed at $1.8 million and the sewer and water line construction at $658,812.

Jim Fatseas, chief of staff for Mayor Thomas Koch said that city officials have considered using sewer rehabilitation funds to cover the sewer and water line reconstruction.

However, several councillors suggested they might not approve such a move.

Councillor John Keenan said using those funds is "just taking money out of another pocket. I would conclude we're not on budget."

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick said that, under the present scheduled, taxpayers will begin paying the bulk of the city's costs in 2011 and 2012.

At this time, the state's School Building Administration funding is covering most of the costs. The state will pay $72,205,739 or 90% of the approved costs of the school construction.

At this time, Fitzpatrick said the state has been paying the construction bills with approximately a 20-day turnaround.

The state will max out its contribution in 2010. At that time, Fitzpatrick said the city should be eligible for a low interest loan of $15 million.

Once those funds are spent, the costs will be on the real estate tax bills.

Quincy College's New Campus In Full Swing

Once the Newport Avenue site became the college's choice, Harris personally visited each of the nine city councillors at their homes and sought their approval of the five-year lease.

On Aug. 13, the council unanimously approved the lease and the then mayor, William Phelan, signed on later.

Quincy College will maintain its campus at Saville Hall in Quincy Square where three new science laboratories estimated to cost $1 million are in the design stage, according to Harris.

However, a majority of the college's students will study at Newport Hall.

During the recent tour, faculty, administrators and students all described Newport Hall as a success, using such terms as bright and airy and efficient. They repeatedly cited their new space, such as the added space for learning labs, classrooms, library facilities and administrative offices.

"It's a pleasure to come to work," said Paula M. Smith, Executive Dean of Enrollment Services and Registrar, whose office was filled, at the time, with dozens of students signing on for second semester courses.

Smith described the "efficient set-up for us," and the "extra space" specifically designed for college use.

"It's more accommodating, more comfortable for students to enjoy their learning," said Dr. Ken Bindsell, Dean of Liberal Arts.

"We like that (the students) have a really great learning environment," said Bindsell, adding, "The different offices are in the same building. Here, communication is improved."

"Everything here is new and working," said Phil Berardi who shares a more spacious computer lab. Berardi who started teaching at the college in 1965 is a fixture now after 42 years.

Christine Bassett, administrative secretary, expressed some nostalgia for the college's old home, but said the staff and students are "getting used to this really quickly."

Newport Hall occupies most of the first floor and the entire second floor of the four-story building at 150 Newport Ave. for a total of 49,000 square feet.

Late last summer when Harris and Peter Tsaffaras, chairman of the Board of Governors, sought City Council approval of the five-year million-dollar lease, the building was incomplete. There were no walls, no partitions, no doors.

By the time the college moved on Sept. 11, renovations were nearly complete, according to Harris who said that Normandy Partners, Inc., and their employees have done everything that the college has asked and completed the projects in time.

Harris proudly describes the 25 classrooms, which are used for five laboratories, 20 lecture halls, as well as a library and Hunt Study area in the new facility. Students and faculty have access to the building's cafeteria operated by the owners. The upper floors are leased to a consulting firm.

"The T is right out back," said Harris who also described the shuttle which operates every half hour from the Quincy Square campus to Newport Avenue. At this time, parking is restricted at Newport Hall, but students have access to the T parking lot and alternative areas. All parking is limited.

"Leave the car home and take the T," was one parking attendant's advice. Harris concurred.

The most important thing

NEWPORT HALL at 150 Newport Ave. is now part of the Quincy College campus.

Quincy Sun Photos/Laura Griffin is the quality education Quincy College is offering its students, according to Harris who described top-notch courses in all departments, "Senior colleges accept our credits."

In addition, the students find a cosmopolitan atmosphere at the college where exchange students comprise over 11% of the student body.

When chatting with students in the Newport Hall atrium, it's not hard to find a student from Italy, Nepal, Thailand or Spain, Turkey or Albania.

A good number of the students are studying part-time and holding down jobs while they pursue their degrees, according to Harris.

There are others like 30-year old Alfred Frimpong who has been working full-time in hospitals for over a decade. Now, he is a full-time student pursuing advancement in the medical field.

Despite, the college's financial independence, Quincy College remains a department of the City of Quincy and that's a problem for the college.

The tie between city and college must be cut, according to the recent accreditation report which gives college officials a maximum 10-year window for the break.

For the college, the split will be a major relief. Harris described the red tape involved in having City Hall oversight where every aspect of the college is "interwoven with the city."

"Every single bill we pay, whether it's for payroll or for a chair..." must be cleared through City Hall, according to Harris who said the mayor, the auditor and the treasurer must approve the smallest expenditure.

While officials and staff in City Hall work hard to ease the process, it can be difficult, according to Harris who added, "They're supposed to be running a city."

As part of the city oversight, City Council and the mayor approved the lease for the Newport Avenue property just weeks before the first semester opening.

After their discussion of the lease, city councillors voted unanimously to approve a resolution directing the college to work actively to return to Quincy Center at the expiration of their lease.

At the time, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly described how the college's move would adversely impact the center's business district.

City councillors, the mayor and the college's Board of Governors now have eight years to find space in Quincy Center. The current lease at Newport Hall will run for five years with an option for three additional years.

Puleo Wins School Committee Seat on Ways and Means, was runner-up in November's School Committee election. Vying for one of three committee spots. He placed fourth with 7,296 votes on November 6.

On Monday, Puleo won first place in the field of three. Karl Roos, 40, a budget analyst and community leader, was second with four votes, all from School Committee members.

The third candidate, Robert Haley, Hanover Town Treasurer, received one vote from Ward 1 candidate Leo Kelly.

City Councillors and School Committee members outlined their support of their candidates with several councillors praising Puleo for his campaign and his 7,296 votes.

Councillor Joseph Finn and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin spoke of the importance of an actual vote by the people.

Finn suggested it is time for a change in the city's charter so that the runner-up in such elections is automatically first in line for an opening.

Koch said the joint convention operated smoothly this year, "The members of the city council and school committee and the candidates all deserve great credit for how the convention was conducted. It was a respectful and orderly process, and it was testament to everyone who participated."

Puleo described his reasons for running in his opening statement. "I chose to run because I believe our schools are a community issue in which we all have a stake."

Puleo noted that he had campaigned for the position and that he'd been tested by the electorate.

"I believe that the success of our schools is dependent on sound financial management and an understanding of current state and local fiscal issues," Puleo described his experience as an analyst... "overseeing $3.2 billion, all of which directly impacts children and families."

"I ran because I believe it's time for new, creative solutions in education, time to bring our schools in the 21st century. It's time to invest in technology and to increase programming for music and the arts."

Roos described his 18 years as a budget analyst as well as his education which includes a master's degree in Finance from Bentley college.

"I am involved in the schools," said Roos who described his work with the Wollaston School PTO, Cub Scouts and T-Ball.

Roos said that his work in pharmaceutical sales taught him, "how to listen, how to hear and how to respect what people are saying and how to identify problems and how to solve them."

Haley outlined the millions of dollars that he has saved the city through volunteering his efforts and ideas, such as his work on the Quincy Retirement Board and his proposal for special legislation bonding the Quincy Medical Center payment of $4.5 million.

"The mayor said that, without this proposal, he had have had to recommend closing a fire station or a school or laying off public safety staff...." Haley said, referring to former Mayor William Phelan.

All the city councillors except Kelly voted for Puleo. School Committee Chairwoman Jo-Ann Bragg voted for Puleo. Vice Chairman David McCarthy and members Elaine Dwyer, Anne Mahoney, Kevin Mulvey voted for Roos.

There are several other items that will probably, eventually, find their way into your toolkit as the need arises. For example, your first "big" purchase may be a power drill and bit set. Chisels and metal/wood files may soon follow. And of course, should you decide to paint a room, you'll pick up a whole assortment of paintbrushes and related gear. But the above list should get you through those "Shoot, I need to take care of this quickly" moments that every homeowner has.

When upgrading your toolkit, consider each purchase carefully. Will you use it more than once? Is there a better way to do the job? Do you need additional items in order to get the most out of the tool? Once the decision is made, purchase the best tool you can afford.

Home Buying Hints

Lease Options: How They Help Buyers And Sellers

(NAPS) — In the current real estate market, the door has been closed to homebuyers who need 100 percent financing or don't have a large down payment. This means about half of potential buyers no longer qualify for a home loan. It also means that sellers have fewer qualified buyers for their homes.

One thing that is helping both home sellers and homebuyers in this difficult market is the lease option. Using the lease option strategy could help people to buy or sell their home in this difficult market.

What is a Lease Option?

A combination of contracts that gives a tenant/buyer the choice to purchase a property at an agreed upon price within a specified time frame.

Benefits to Buyers

- Occupy a property with very little capital.

- Use the lease option term to improve credit scores.
- Move into the home they desire without traditional financing.
- Helps lenders make more favorable loans.

Benefits to Sellers

- Sell their home without drastically lowering their sales price.
- Attract more buyers even in a slow seller's market.
- Collect a higher than average rent for their property.

- Get their mortgage or most of their mortgage paid during the lease option term.
- Avoid foreclosure, save their credit and their equity.

If you own a home and want to sell, or if you are looking to purchase a home but are having a hard time getting financing, it might be a good idea to learn how lease options work.

Revive Your Home With Inexpensive Fixes, No Hammer Required

By TANYA HEMME

(NU) — Whether you're updating your home for your own enjoyment or to attract potential buyers, the thought of home improvement can send some people running for their hammers and others running from them.

Before you get a hammer involved, or any other serious home-improvement tool for that matter, think about making small changes. You may be surprised how just a few inexpensive, and quick, home fixes can improve the mood and value of your home.

Here are several home-improvement tasks that you can complete in less than a day and on a limited budget.

- Color: A gallon of fresh, new paint will do wonders for any room. Neutral, earth-tone colors such as leafy greens, sky blues and cream-colored whites will all add a clean, serene touch. Additionally, a fresh coat of paint helps solve another home dilemma — stubborn room odors.

- Scent: Speaking of odors, air fresheners are an inexpensive way to revive any space and make it welcoming to both your family and potential home buyers. There are many air fresheners on the market, and one that I like is Renuzit TriScents. The electric, scented oil freshener has three harmonious fragrances that transition throughout the day. Each time the fragrances change, your home is subtly renewed with a new scent. For more information, visit www.triscents.com.

- Textures: Make your home feel good! Try updating area rugs, blinds or throw pillows to include natural fibers that add texture and flair to your home. Bamboo mats or faux painting techniques can make your home more appealing and make you feel good, too.

- Accessories: Clutter doesn't add wonder to your home, especially if you're looking to sell. So, what can you decorate with then? Try utilizing water features throughout your home. Many eye-catching fountains come in a variety of affordable sizes and will add the soothing sights and sounds of moving water to any area.

Easy, Efficient Ways To Heat A Home

(NAPS) — Fireplaces rank among the top three features desired by new homebuyers, according to the National Association of Home Builders.

Today's consumers not only want ambiance, but also want to capture the heat. Older fireplaces provide the ambiance of a roaring fire, but send most of their heat up the chimney.

Manufacturers have responded with attractive fireplaces, stoves and other options that warm living areas of the home while saving money on heating bills. Each year, hearth manufacturers offer more products in sizes, styles and colors to match any home decor, with features to enhance overall enjoyment.

In addition, many hearth products can be safely — and affordably — installed in an existing room without the need for major remodeling. Whether updating an existing fireplace or adding a new one, there's a variety of options to fit virtually any budget. These include:

- Fireplaces — Factory-built systems are surprisingly inexpensive to purchase and install. They use a safe, lightweight chimney (or no chimney at all) and can be easily installed in almost any room.

- Stoves — The most versatile hearth product, free-standing stoves can be made from cast iron, steel or stone and come in a wide selection of sizes and styles finished in porcelain, enamel or paint. Today's stoves are very efficient, produce minimal ash, burn longer and use less fuel.

• Fireplace inserts — These units install existing fireplaces to improve efficiency and environmental impact by reducing smoke up the chimney.

- Log sets — If you have an existing fireplace but dislike hauling in the logs and scooping out the ash, a gas or electric log set puts an instant fire at your fingertips.

Mortgage Insurance Tax Reduction Extended Through 2010

(NAPS) - In important news for homebuyers, the tax deduction for private mortgage insurance is now good through the 2010 tax year. The extension of the tax deduction makes mortgage insurance a more attractive choice for buyers interested in entering the housing market or refinancing an existing mortgage.

News About the Mortgage Insurance Tax Deduction

The original deduction approved in 2006 applied only to homes purchased and premiums paid in 2007. The extension passed by Congress extends the deduction to include homes purchased before the end of 2010.

Mortgage insurance premiums are 100 percent tax deductible for families and individuals earning $100,000 or less when they purchase a home between Jan. 1, 2007 and Dec. 31, 2010. Families earning up to $109,000 can take advantage of a partial deduction.

"This legislation has the potential to help thousands of low-and-moderate-income Americans secure affordable mortgages that keep them in their homes and keep their communities strong," said Steve Smith, Chief Executive of The PMI Group, Inc. "Insured loans are much more attractive in today's market because credit is difficult to access."

The Benefits of Mortgage Insurance

The mortgage insurance tax deduction gives buyers an excellent reason to consider purchasing or refinancing their home with private mortgage insurance, but it is not the main benefit of a policy.

"The medium home price in the United States today is over $200,000, which means borrowers would need to save more than $40,000 in order to make a traditional down payment of 20 percent," said David Katkov, President and Chief Operating Officer of PMI Mortgage Insurance Co.

"In order to make homeownership safe and sustainable, it is vitally important that people have access to safe, affordable, long-term mortgage financing," said Conrad Egan, president and CEO of the National Housing Conference. "One of the major benefits of mortgage insurance is that it allows borrowers to build equity in a home by securing a predictable, fixed-rate mortgage with a down payment of as little as 3 to 5 percent."

The Mortgage Insurance Companies of America, a national trade group, has estimated that the deduction can save the average family $200-$400 annually.

(*PMI cannot provide tax advice. Consult with a tax adviser concerning the applicability of this new deduction under the Internal Revenue Code and the laws of any other taxing jurisdiction.)

SPORTS

Local Teams Heading Towards Post-Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The long, cold winter high school sports season is winding down, and a number of the local high school sports programs are making their final late-season pushes towards possible regular season titles and post-season appearances.

The North Quincy Red Raider basketball programs are both in the thick of the Atlantic Coast League's North Division title races.

The boys team is currently 11-7 overall and 8-4 in the ACL. The Raiders, behind the all-star play of senior Marcellus Lee (20.8 points per game), are one game behind Plymouth North HS (14-3, 9-3) in second-place. The team played a non-league game against Randolph HS on Tuesday (Feb. 12) and conclude their regular season with a home game against Quincy HS this Friday (Feb. 15, 7 p.m.). The team has already qualified for the South Sectional post-season.

The Lady Raiders currently control their own ACL North Division title destiny. North Quincy is sitting in first-place with an overall record of 12-6 and a league record of 11-1 (the team has reeled off eleven straight ACL wins). The Raiders, who claimed a share of the ACL North title last year with Whitman-Hanson HS, have a one-game lead over W-H (15-4, 10-2) heading into their final regular season game against Quincy HS on Friday (5 p.m. tip-off). The Raiders should be a high seed when the post-season pairing are announced in the next week.

The Quincy Presidents basketball programs already have qualified one of their teams (boys) for post-season play, and the other (girls') needs to win their final two games to make the tournament.

The boys' team is sitting in third-place in the ACL North Division with an 11-6 overall record and a 7-5 league record. The Presidents are led by the league's leading scorer, Doug Scott (23.4 points per game), and with two games remaining (Feb. 15 vs. NQ and Feb. 20 vs. Sandwich), Quincy has a chance to earn a first-round home playoff game.

The Lady Presidents (8-10 overall, 4-8 in the ACL) need to win their final two games to earn a spot in the South Sectionals. Quincy plays on the road against NQ this Friday and will finish their season with a non-league game on Feb. 20 against Hanover HS.

On the ice, both Quincy and North Quincy are making strong moves towards the post-season.

North Quincy (8-4-4 overall, 6-2-3 in the ACL) played Monday night against Plymouth North HS, and was scheduled to play Quincy last night (Feb. 13). The team ends its regular season with games against Brockton and Blue Hills Regional High Schools. The Red Raiders are led by goalie Matt Brundige (10 games, 1.94 GAA), forward Brandon Gilmore (25-11-36) and forward Scott Richardson (12-13-25) and should be a mid-level seed when the pairing are announced.

Quincy (8-8-1, 5-6-1) played North Quincy (Feb. 13) and will face-off with Blue Hills Regional and Sandwich HS on Feb. 15 and Feb. 16 to end their regular season. The Presidents, behind the play of goalie Jeff Giordani (17 games, 2.61 GAA) and forward Ted Walsh (10-13-23) should qualify for a second consecutive appearance in the Division II South Sectionals.

The NQ/Q co-ed track team finishes up their season in the MIAA Division I Championship this weekend (Feb. 17). The team will be competing in the MIAA All-State Championships on Feb. 22 and concludes the year at the New England Championships on Feb. 29.

The NQ and Quincy wrestling teams will both be competing in the All-States this weekend (Feb. 23) and at the New England Championships on March 1-2.

EMILY MILONE (seated), a senior at North Quincy High School, recently signed her letter of intent to play Division I soccer at Mercer University (Georgia) next fall. Milone, who finished her high school career as the Red Raiders' all-time assists leader (46) and all-time points leader (76 points, she also scored 35 goals) is the first North Quincy varsity girls soccer player to sign a letter of intent to play Division I soccer in the school's history. With her at the signing, from the left, were NQ head coach Paul Bregoli, NQHS Principal Earl Metzler II, and her parents, Susan and John Milone.

Join CBL's North Division Of Amateur, Collegiate And Former Pro Players

Quincy Mariners To Make Cranberry League Debut

By SEAN BRENNAN

Baseball fans in the City of Quincy will have another local team to support and root for this summer with a recent addition to the local baseball landscape.

The newly formed Quincy Mariners will begin their first season in the ultra-competitive Cranberry Baseball League starting on May 25th. The Mariners join the league as the 12th local franchise, with Quincy being added to the CBL's North Division along with teams from Braintree, Canton, Norwell, Rockland and Weymouth. The CBL's South Division includes teams from Cape Cod, Easton, Middleboro, Norton, South Shore and Wrentham.

The CBL, since its inception in 1960, has provided a venue for the area's best amateur, collegiate and former professional players, coaches and umpires in Southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The CBL is a "wooden bat" league, a member of the American Amateur Baseball Congress (AABC) and competes annually in the Stan Musial playoffs.

The Mariners, along with the other eleven teams, are scheduled to play 27 games between May 25 and July 2. All games will be played on Sunday (double-headers), Tuesday, Thursday and every other Wednesday. The CBL All-Star game will be played on July 6 (site TBA) and league playoffs will begin with the Division Series (best of three) on July 8-10.

The North Division winner will play the South Division winner for the CBL Championship on July 12-14.

Mr. Lenny Seitz will lead the newly formed Quincy franchise. Seitz coached the CBL's 2007 Norwell Dirt Dogs team and is the athletic officer for the Quincy Legion baseball team. He was instrumental in getting a team into Quincy for the 2008 season.

"This team is a great addition to the baseball scene here in Quincy," stated Seitz last week at The Sun. "It is going to be a positive for any baseball player who is too old to continue to play Legion ball and wants to continue to play baseball in Quincy. We are planning on fielding a 25-man roster, with the majority of the team hopefully coming from Quincy."

"This is a chance for those players who have graduated from playing for Quincy or Morrisette Legion or are playing collegiate ball to get right back into it. We are hoping that when we have tryouts, that the majority of players will be from the city."

Tryouts for the Mariners are tentatively scheduled for sometime in the beginning of May. All prospective players must be out of their Legion eligibility and/or over the age of 19. The cost to participate in the CBL is $250, which covers all of the main baseball expenses.

"We are excited to bring a Cranberry League team to Quincy," added Seitz. "The organization would like to thank Mr. Mark Jaehning (former Park Commissioner) for all his invaluable assistance in helping us get the charter for the team back in December. We would also like to thank the Park & Recreation Board for voting us in to Quincy and giving us use of many of the wonderful facilities throughout the city."

The Mariners will have fifteen home games on tap. Games will be played at historic Adams Field (when the field has open dates), Kincaide Field and O'Rourke Field, if necessary.

"The Mariners will play games at Adams when it is free and will also play games at other local fields. They know that there is a pecking order for field availability, but the addition will be good for the city," said Kristen Powers, Executive Director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery.

Quincy has already hired Mr. Dan Sweeney to join the team as a player/coach. Sweeney bolted onto the local baseball scene last summer as the coach of Quincy Legion. His team advanced to the second round of the American Legion playoffs, and returns all but one player this summer from last year's team. And he is excited about the possibility to continue playing competitively with the Mariners.

"I am very excited about the new Cranberry League team coming to Quincy," he said. "I will be joining the team as a player/coach and look forward to the season beginning."

"We cannot go wrong with bringing Dan onboard," said Seitz. "He is an important piece to the puzzle and with his experience coaching at the Legion level, he will be vital to the Mariners' success."

The Mariners also have put a feeler out to Mr. Matt Sherman, pitching coach at Eastern Nazarene College (Quincy), to gage his interest in joining the coaching staff, but at the moment his responsibilities to the school and his job as associate scout for the Milwaukee Brewers (MLB) take precedence.

"Matt was a manager with me on the Norwell Dirt Dogs and would be a great addition to our coaching staff, but at the moment he is unavailable," said Seitz. "But we will field a solid staff when all is said and done and we will work to strengthen the franchise moving forward."

The addition of the Quincy Mariners' franchise is overdue in Quincy, according to Mr. Joe Paolucci, President of the Cranberry League.

"This team is so long-

THE QUINCY MARINERS will be joining the Cranberry Baseball League this summer as the league's newest franchise. overdue," Paolucci said last week at Adams Field. "Geographically, Quincy is the ideal location for a CBL team. The talent pool in the area is phenomenal, and I am positive that this will be a great franchise for the CBL. We have not had a Quincy team since the Quincy Sheriffs disbanded years back."

"With Quincy joining the league, we have shifted divisions and our all-star format. It should make for some competitive rivalries."

The CBL is considered one of the best baseball leagues in the country, and it's past performance backs that claim up.

In sixteen of the last nineteen years, a CBL team has won the state championship in the American Amateur Baseball Congress (Stan Musial) Tournament, and in eleven of the last fourteen years the Stan Musial New England champions have come out of the CBL.

"This is a team that we want to have a long-standing relationship with the city of Quincy," said Seitz. "Any businesses that would like to sponsor the team, can, and any sponsorship would be appreciated."

Any prospective players or interested businesses can contact Seitz at 617-347-3171 for information about the Quincy Mariners.

Tobin-Torpey Dynamic Duo Powers Quincy Girls Hoop

The Quincy Presidents (8-10, 4-8) girls' basketball team may need a miracle over their final two regular season games to advance to the Division II South Sectional playoffs-the team needs to win both-but without its two senior captains, Quincy probably wouldn't be this close.

Meagan Tobin and Marybeth Torpey have been mainstays in the Presidents' backcourt for the last three years, and both equally excel on the hardwood and in the classroom.

Tobin, the third leading scorer in the Atlantic Coast League's North Division (17.8 points per game, and third all-time in scoring for QHS-880 points), is known for her deadly outside shooting and smooth moves off the dribble, while Torpey is known for her terrific defensive ability and her keen eye when it comes to distributing the basketball (she passed Sarah Shea '04 as the all-time assists leader this year).

But their best successes as student-athletes may come from their academic achievements.

Tobin, a three-year starter and two-year captain is a three-time ACL all-star and a three-year member of the QHS varsity volleyball team, but she also is an extraordinary student. Tobin is ranked in the top-10 in her class and is a member of the Quincy High School National Honor Society as well as the Peer Educators. After graduation, Tobin plans on going to a four-year college to study nursing and play basketball.

Torpey is also a three-year starter and two-year captain. She has been recognized three times as a league all-star for her play from the point guard position. Torpey also earned all-league and all-state status for the 2007 volleyball season (she is also the starting shortstop on the QHS softball team), but her credentials extend to the classroom as well.

She is the current Student Council treasurer and is a member of the QHS National Honor Society. Like Tobin, Torpey is planning on attending a four-year college and hopes to continue to play basketball.

Having two experienced seniors leading his team has been a blessing for QHS head coach Jeff Bretsch, but he knows that his captains are the types that don't come around often.

MEAGAN TOBIN AND MARYBETH TORPEY, both two-year captains on the QHS girls' basketball team, have enjoyed success together on the volleyball and basketball courts, as well as in the classroom during their high school careers.

"Both of them are terrific and successful kids. Both are four-year varsity players and both are examples of how hard work pays off day in performances in the classroom that make them stand out. You couldn't ask for two better girls to lead any team."

Tobin and Torpey should be familiar with each other on the court and classroom, as they both went to Central Middle School together before enrolling at Quincy High School and both have played together on the volleyball court throughout their high school careers.

"Meagan always practices and plays hard," Torpey said recently about her teammate. "She is always trying to motivate the team. She just tries to get the team focused. I just try to get her the ball as much as possible because she is a great shooter."

"Marybeth is our best all-around player," said Tobin. "Without her we couldn't even set up plays. We couldn't do anything out there without her. I look for her whenever we need a big defensive play or any big play. She is great."

The two have such a cohesive relationship that many times they know what the other is doing before they do it.

"We rely on each other a lot, and we have been through a lot together these past four years," added Torpey. "In volleyball we have the same intensity as on the basketball court and I think that helps us when we need something done out there. I just look for Meagan."

"And I just look for her," stated Tobin.

The Presidents will need both Tobin and Torpey to be at their best this Friday night against North Quincy (Quincy lost 58-54 on Jan. 25) if Quincy has any shot at a post-season spot in 2008.

But by having Tobin and Torpey in the same backcourt, the Presidents have all the leadership and experience they need to get to where they want to be-the post-season.

"She's the best," said Tobin. "No, you're the best," said Torpey.

Their personal debate about which one of them is the better basketball player will have to be decided at a later time, but the debate about which one is the better student-athlete, has been answered.

They're on equal ground.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

February marks the birthdays of two of the world's great figures: George Washington, who gave us our nation; and Abraham Lincoln, who preserved it for posterity.

Let us remember that they captured the imagination of the world by their characters, their principles, their philosophies and profound achievements. Their names are forever linked with man's eternal struggle for freedom.

As we pay homage to these great Americans - Washington and Lincoln - let us remember that they more than any others embodied and exhibited our distinctive civilization. We honor them for their virtues that made them great. We honor them for their unswerving loyalty and patriotism. Both represented the cause of freedom. It is with deep respect and admiration for their leadership that we pay tribute to them in this month that marks their birthdays.

One does not recall that any nation in history produced two men 87 years apart, who indubitably determined the nation's destiny. America was indeed very lucky to have produced two such towering men in the compass of a century...

the caller's perspective. After securing the scene, they learned from the caller/mother that her son had a history of anger management issues and his discharge from the Marine Corps made the episodes more violent and more frequent. She said that her son had struggled emotionally since coming home from the military, but was receiving help from the V.A. Hospital and on prescription medications - unsure if he was actually taking the medicine.

The mother stated her son and his girlfriend had been drinking through the night and at about 12:30 a.m., she heard arguing and loud bangs upstairs. She said this went on for about a half hour, so she went upstairs to intervene and witnessed her son yelling and grabbing his girlfriend. The girlfriend said that wanted to leave and was awaiting a ride.

The suspect grew agitated and refused to let his girlfriend leave, so his mother tried to lead the girlfriend to safety and out of the room. The suspect turned his rage to his mother by grabbing her arm tightly and screaming at her. He then threw her onto the couch and began choking her with his hands, screaming, "I'm going to kill her!"

She said she began to lose consciousness but he finally released his grip. The suspect released her, then made his way back over to his girlfriend and began screaming at her again. The mother was able to flee downstairs where she called "911."

Officers observed a bruise to the inner side of the mother's upper left arm consistent with being tightly squeezed by a thumb. Under the mother's turtleneck sweater she was wearing, officers observed her neck to be red and irritated.

The mother complained of being sore but declined the offer of medical attention. Officers interviewed the girlfriend, who denied that she was physically harmed during the incident, or at anytime in the past. Her comments were very unconvincing to the officers. They explained to her that her boyfriend was sick and needed help.

Officer Glenn observed her right eye to have bruising below the eye and in the upper corner as well, but she denied being struck, stating the marks were from a pimple, which didn't make sense. The officers again tried to impress upon the girlfriend the importance of being truthful but she refused to cooperate.

Both the mother and the girlfriend were offered an emergency protective order, but amazingly, both declined. The mother did agree to work with the Victim Witness Advocates and any VA group that may be willing to aid her in her attempt to help her son. Officer Glenn filed a domestic violence report in addition to the arrest report.

Due to the violence associated with this call, high bail was requested to protect the victims. For evidentiary purposes, the pen that was involved in the assault on the Officers was taken as evidence.

Digital pictures were taken of the chair involved in the assault, too. Pictures of the scene were also taken as well as the mother's injuries. Four (4) knives were taken from the son's room for safe keeping at the request of the mother.

Nice Work!

The suspect, a 25 year old Quincy resident, was charged with the following offenses: Assault with Intent to Murder 1 count (mother) Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon to wit Shod Foot (Officer Folan Victim) Assault & Battery on a Police Officer 2 Counts (Officers Glenn and Sweetland victims) Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon to wit Pen 2 Counts (Officers Glenn and Folan victims) Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon to wit Folding Chair 2 Counts (Officers Glenn and Sweetland victims) In this case, the Officers used great restraint in trying to calm the suspect down. They were aware of the circumstances that led to the suspect's behavior and were able to subdue him without harm, and then start on the path to getting him help.

Mrs. Barker died Feb. 5 after a brief illness at Brigham and Women's Hospital, Boston.

She was born to the late Bethan and Gordon Urann, in Malden.

Mrs. Barker graduated from North Quincy High School, and later earned her medical assistant's degree from Bryman Institute in Brighton.

She married Warren

Barker, and they lived in Quincy, raising three daughters together until 1975.

Mrs. Barker worked as a ward clerk for the William B. Rice Eventide Home until she retired in 2000. She cared for the residents she worked for as much as the people she worked with.

As a grandmother, she was passionate about the seven grandsons her daughters gave her. She loved her family, the dogs that gave her joy, Marston's Mills and Maine.

She is survived by three daughters: Carolyn Barker-

Carson of Quincy, and Maryellen Watts and Pamela Duffy, both of Scituate; and seven grandchildren.

She is also survived by two devoted sisters: Carol McCarthy of Quincy and Priscilla Urann of Braintree; and three nephews.

A visiting hour is scheduled Saturday from 9 to 10 a.m. at the Thomas Funeral Home, 326 Granite Ave., Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to The Quincy Animal Shelter, P.O. Box 88, Quincy, MA 02269.

City Council Would Remain Two Years

Davis Proposes 4-Year Term For Mayor

Council President Jay Davis proposed to the City Council Tuesday night that the Quincy mayor's two-year term be extended to four years to provide stability and enable the city government to make long term plans.

The change in the city's charter would require the approval of the State Legislature as well as the voters of Quincy in the 2009 election.

"Quincy now has a budget of more than $250 million and the job of managing that budget, overseeing department heads and implementing policy changes needs long term consistency," he said.

"Since I have been elected to the City Council a number of municipalities, including Braintree and Weymouth, have changed to a city form of government.

"In those instances, the charter commissions have proposed a four-year term for the mayor."

Davis noted that, for more than a year, Quincy went without a traffic engineer, mostly because qualified professionals could not be guaranteed long term employment by a mayor whose term was up in two years.

Wollaston Native New DPW Commissioner

Larry Prendeville of Marshfield, a Wollaston native with more than 20 years of management experience with one of the nation's largest construction firms, has been named Public Works commissioner of Quincy.

The 46-year-old Prendeville, whose first project with Modern Continental Construction was the extension of Burgin Parkway in the 1980s, will officially take the helm of the DPW next month.

He is the last of the major appointments in the administration of Mayor Tom Koch, who took office seven weeks ago.

"Larry brings tremendous experience and expertise in areas that are crucial to public works, such as road construction, bridge repair and infrastructure needs," said Koch.

"I am proud to have him on the team."

Koch called Prendeville's appointment a key piece in an overall restructuring aimed at making the DPW more efficient, effective and responsive to the needs of the public.

One of his major priorities, said the mayor, will be keeping a close eye on private contractors doing work with the city.

"Our taxpayers spend a lot of money on private contractors, whether it is for snow removal, street repairs or other work," said Koch.

"Our team is going to make sure contractors know that the job isn't finished until it's done right."

"Larry has the perfect background for that role. He's a hard worker, has a deep knowledge base and he has a passion for his hometown."

Koch said Michael Coffey, who has been acting commissioner, will become business manager of the DPW when Prendeville takes over. Together, they will bring more than 50 years of private sector experience to the DPW.

"Mike has done an incredible job to date, earning the trust of the guys at the department, working out new efficiencies and really digging into ways we can get the most out of taxpayer money in that department."

"I have high expectations of the DPW with this leadership team and I expect the public will see the results."

Prendeville, who lives in Marshfield with his wife Carol, and three sons, was born and raised in Wollaston, where many members of his family still live.

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Increasing real estate taxes are just the latest blow for the directors of two of the city's non-profit senior housing facilities which are also facing crushing bills for heat, water and sewer.

The city has placed a lien against Fenno House, a non-profit senior citizen housing complex, while at 1000 Southern Artery, the director plans to increase the monthly rents by $50, bringing the total monthly rent increase over the past five years to $125 for most of the 640 tenants.

Tenants in both facilities are senior citizens and many are on fixed incomes with minimal annual increases and, for the most part, without Section 8 housing vouchers.

Both directors believe that increased real estate valuations are just adding more burdens to their residents and are hoping for tax relief.

In an effort to address such problems, City Councillors Joseph Finn and Daniel Raymondi of Ward 4 called for hearings on the real estate tax valuations for the non-profit senior housing facilities in Quincy.

Raymondi said that a date will be set this week for a joint meeting of the Council's Senior Citizen and Housing Committee.

One solution could be tax relief as it exists in Brookline, Cambridge and Newton and the dozens of cities and towns in the state which do not tax non-profit senior housing facilities.

Tax increases are a Catch 22 for the non-profit directors whose rent increases then justify increases in the real estate valuations which, in turn, mean higher taxes, according to Rev. Dr. Adolph Wismar, Jr., president of the non-profit Wollaston Lutheran Church Apartments, Inc. and pastor of Wollaston Lutheran Church.

"The residents bear the full brunt of the increase," said Pastor Wismar of Fenno House on Hancock Street, Wollaston, which has 105 studio units and 45 one-bedroom apartments.

"We're assessed at $15.8 million and yet we're on rent control," said Wismar noting the city levies full taxes on the total valuation. He explained that Fenno House was built under the 1974 federal government's 236 program which provided a fixed subsidy of $180,000 a year for the senior citizen project.

At the time, the subsidy was generous, according to Wismar, but now those funds are used for taxes so the Fenno House water and sewer bill has not been paid and the agency is charged 14% interest and is under a lien.

If that's not enough of a dilemma, Fenno House can not increase the rents to market value under the original 236 program.

"Our residents in Fenno House don't get the (Section 8) subsidy," said Pastor Wismar, noting that, under such vouchers, tenants only pay one third of their income. Instead, the rents for Fenno House studio apartments are, roughly, $600 for a studio unit.

Other senior housing facilities in the city are not affected by the tax increase. Tenants with Section 8 housing vouchers only pay one third of their income and the federal government picks up the balance.

At 1000 Southern Artery, Executive Director Paul Baharian said, "I'm struggling moneywise."

The three buildings at 1000 Southern Artery were built between 1966 and 1974 and are operated by the non-profit Quincy Point Congregational Church Homes, Inc.

"It's gotten to the point where it's just too much," said Baharian who said he wants to see the real estate taxes hold steady instead of increasing.

At 1000 Southern Artery, 35% of the residents do qualify for the Section 8 housing voucher while the remainder pays full rent and all increases.

Wollaston Lutheran also built and operates two other senior housing facilities which do qualify for subsidies.

According to Pastor Wismar, the only other senior housing facility built under the federal 236 program was 91 Clay Street which no longer faces the real estate tax problem.

Ordinance Would Scientifically Measure Decibel Count

McNamee Seeks Crackdown On City Noise Polluters

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee wants to crack down on noise polluters who are damaging the quality of life in the city, particularly for residents of the Marina Bay area and those near the Neponset River.

"You just can't come in and make noise without regard for people's lives," said McNamee whose proposal would cover the entire city and cite any offender projecting high noise levels from nightclubs, to renovation to construction projects.

For that reason, McNamee has introduced a proposed city ordinance that would limit the noise levels allowed anywhere in the city.

If enacted, the noise ordinance would make Quincy a pioneer in the state in protecting residents from noise.

Other cities and towns, as well as Quincy, have noise limits but use subjective terms, such as "plainly audible," rather than an actual decibel count specified in the proposal.

The ordinance would use scientific measures of noise to determine the exact decibel count (dBA) for each offender.

Under McNamee's plan,

BRIAN MCNAMEE

the maximum decibel counts for residential areas would be 65 dBA in the daytime and 55, nighttime while businesses would be limited to 67 dBA in the daytime and 62 at night.

He said that some businessmen have told him that the allowable noise levels are too low but he said he's open to suggestions and revisions.

At this time, McNamee said he gets repeated complaints regarding the music from Marina Bay nightclubs and the reconstruction of the Neponset Bridge.

"There have been complaints from just about everybody," said McNamee, citing the music from the nightclubs at Marina Bay which not only affects Marina Bay residents but also, floats across Quincy Shore Drive to bother residents off East Squantum Street.

"They don't ask much," McNamee said of his Marina Bay constituents. He noted that their streets are private and they pay for plowing and few have children in the city schools.

McNamee also cited the Neponset Bridge reconstruction project that is affecting condominium owners on Commander Shea Blvd and Quincy Shore Drive, as well.

Construction noise from jackhammers or similar machinery can be reduced,

Four-Month Investigation Led To After Hours Raid

A tip received last October that something odd was going on in the wee hours of the morning at 665 Hancock St., Wollaston, led to an early Saturday morning bust for after-hours liquor sales, drugs and gambling.

The building at the corner of Hancock and Beale Streets also houses the controversial American Chinese Association (formerly the Chinese United Association) and is owned by the association president's family.

Police Lt. Peter Turowski, who led 12 officers on the 2 a.m. raid, said Monday complaints had yet to be issued against all of the 14 persons who were present in the rooms adjacent to the association offices.

"We're working on the paperwork," he said. "We're still investigating."

Turowski said police were informed last October that late night gambling was going on in the building and it was quietly staked out for the past four months.

Police found people arriving at the darkened building shortly before 12 midnight, entering by way of a fire escape to the second floor and paying a cover charge of $25 to go in.

Inside, two rooms were set up as bars that remained open until 6 a.m. in which the raiders confiscated a quantity of beer and hard liquor as well as Ecstasy and marijuana.

Gambling paraphernalia such as cards, poker chips and mah jongg tiles were found in other rooms where evidence indicated Texas Hold 'Em tournaments were played.

Eventually, three of those present may be charged with drug possession and four with running an illegal gambling operation. None of them was identified by police.

The raid came on the eve of the Chinese Lunar New Year celebration which took place Sunday a few blocks away in North Quincy High School.

In the past year and a half, the building was the site of protests, mostly by war veterans, against flying the flag of the People's Republic of China along-side the American flag by the Chinese United Association.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Feb. 20, 1725, a posse of New Hampshire volunteers comes across a band of encamped Native Americans and takes 10 "scalps" in the first significant appropriation of this Native American practice. The posse received a bounty of 100 pounds per scalp from the Colonial authorities in Boston.

• On Feb. 22, 1732, George Washington is born in Westmoreland County, Va. Part of his success in the Revolutionary War was due to his shrewd use of an "ungentlemanly," but effective, tactic of "guerrilla" warfare, in which stealthy "hit-and-run" attacks foiled British armies.

• On Feb. 24, 1786, Wilhelm Karl Grimm, the younger of the two Brothers Grimm, is born in Hanau, Germany. The brothers' collection of oral folktales includes "Hansel and Gretel," "Snow White," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Sleeping Beauty," "Rapunzel" and "Rumpelstiltskin."

• On Feb. 18, 1885, Mark Twain publishes his famous — and famously controversial — novel "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn."

Twain (the pen name of Samuel Clemens) first introduced Huck Finn as the best friend of Tom Sawyer, hero of his novel "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" (1876).

• On Feb. 19, 1914, Pittsburgh movie theaters are required to establish a seating section for unaccompanied women. Some women attending movies alone had complained of harassment.

On Feb. 23, 1940, folk singer Woody Guthrie writes one of his best-known songs, "This Land Is Your Land." Guthrie died in 1967, having lived long enough to see the tune become a rallying song for the civil-rights movement.

• On Feb. 21, 1994, CIA operative Aldrich Ames is arrested for selling secrets to the Soviet Union. At least 10 men were killed after Ames revealed their identities, and more were sent to Russian gulags. Both Ames and his wife were later convicted. Ames was sentenced to life in prison, while his wife, as part of a plea-bargain agreement, received a five-year sentence.

Democrats 192, Republicans 0

Local Republicans, it appears, could use some political Turf Builder on their grass roots.

A wheel-barrel full. Or a truckload or two. The Ward Committee results in the recent Presidential Primaries make you wonder if the Republican Party is in danger of going out of business in Quincy.

Democrats elected 192 Ward Committee members. Republicans: 0.

There were no candidates for 180 Ward Committee seats on the Republican ballots.

There was room, though, to elect that 180 on write-in votes.

But, notes City Clerk Joseph Shea:

"There were about 70 write-in names in the six wards but none of them received the required minimum five votes."

So, none were elected.

"I don't believe this has ever happened before," says Shea. "And, as far as I am concerned, it means there now is no Quincy Republican City Committee."

On the advice of Secretary of State William Galvin, Shea sent a letter to the Republican State Committee informing them no Republican Ward Committee members were elected here.

Of the 180 Republican seats not filled, 35 each were in Wards 1, 2, 3, 6 and 20 each in Wards 4 and 5.

There was a warning in 2004 that the GOP grass roots were wilting.

In the Presidential Primaries that year only 17 Republican Ward Committee candidates were on the ballot.

Ward Committees are the grass-roots foundation of their party. The Democrats foundation looks pretty solid. The Republicans' apparently has deep cracks.

Today Quincy Democrats hold 23 partisan and non-partisan elective offices: state senator, three state representatives, mayor, nine city council, six school committee, county commissioner, sheriff, register of probate.

Plus Congressman William Delahunt and state Treasurer Tim Cahill.

The last Republican to hold municipal office was Frank McCauley whose political career spanned 32 years as mayor (four terms), school committeeman, ward councillor, councillor at-large.

Surrounded by Democrats, he sometimes felt like a political Lone Ranger.

McCauley, who retired in 2005 as city council president also, served 32 years as a Ward 1 Republican Committee member.

The fact that no candidates appeared on the ballot for the 180 GOP ward seats this year and on write-in candidate could not get the required minimum five votes, troubles him.

"It really is a sad sign," he says. "Nobody seems interested anymore. No young people are coming forward as Republican candidates."

As for winning elections today, he laments:

"You really have to be a Democrat to win. The state is very liberal and dominated by Democrats. A Republican hasn't much of a chance. It's easier to be a Democrat."

"And that's too bad, because you don't have a good two-party system for balance. It isn't good for the people."

The only Quincy Republican holding any elective office today is Atty. Christine Cedrone Logan, former school committee member, who was re-elected Republican State Committeewoman in the Plymouth-Norfolk District.

The only other Quincy Republican on the Presidential Primary ballot was Dominic Paulo who challenged incumbent Matthew Sisk of Braintree for the Republican State Committeeman seat. Paulo topped Sisk in Quincy with a vote of 2,915 to 1,226 but Sisk prevailed district-wide.

The political scene today in Quincy is a complete turnaround from the 1930s and 1940s when Republicans ruled the region as Democrats do now.

Back then, Republicans held virtually every state, municipal and county elective office. Today, the Democrats have the keys to all those offices.

The joke then was that there were so few Democrats in Quincy they could hold a rally in a telephone booth. A little exaggerated, but take a look at 1936 and 1946 for examples.

Quincy had 18,144 Republicans and 7,700 Democrats in 1936. In 1946, Republicans were still numerically in control, 15,527 to 6,741.

Today, it's a far different story. Registered Democrats total 24,713 to 5,875 Republicans, a more than 4-to-1 margin.

There's another big player on the scene now: the unenrolled (independent). They now number 23,875 — just 838 behind the Democrats.

They may soon be the political force, if they aren't already. That doesn't necessarily pose a big threat to Democrats. Unenrolled tend to vote Democratic.

But Republicans look like an endangered species. If there is no Republican City Committee where will future Republican candidates come from? And if young Republicans do decide to run, they'll be pretty much on their own.

Republicans need to woo some of that unenrolled vote. Or reorganize with a shot of Geritol and a transfusion of young political blood.

Here's hoping they do. We need two active political parties. Not just one.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 postcard view of the old First Presbyterian Church that was on the corner of Quincy and Water Streets in South Quincy. This church served its congregation for over 75 years until they moved to a new Georgian colonial building on Franklin Street in 1962. At that time, they changed their name to the First United Presbyterian Church. They then sold this building to the Granite Nazarene Church who used it until 1979 when they abandoned it and moved to South Weymouth. After a fire in 1982, this building was demolished. The site is now home to a multi-unit housing facility owned by the Quincy Housing Authority. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

His Memories of The Blizzard of '78

Regarding the Sunbeams column on the Blizzard of '78:

I was Supt. of Maintenance for the QHA for five weeks, before the blizzard started.

A few men and I stayed for four days. I hired equipment from the O'Connell Bros. and was able to keep the streets in Germantown clear and help tenants get out.

Food was brought in by my wife, who cooked for all and helped one of our neighbors who received a permit from the City to travel.

In lieu of overtime, I received four days off instead. In addition, we were responsible for Pagnano Towers, O'Brien Towers, Tobin Towers and Martenses St. We finally requested back hoes from the U.S. Army. There was much snow that it had to be dumped at the beach area in the Riverside section.

Kudos To The Team At Hancock Park

On Feb. 14, our family was invited to a Valentine's dinner for my mother and other residents at Hancock Park in Quincy. What an evening!

Their team created an environment that was beautiful and set the mood for a very special evening. There was a singer/guitar player that took special requests; the best staff of Lillian, Jackie and Lulu served us and we had a wonderful meal prepared by Chef Bob.

Families had the opportunity to be together on a special evening with their family member with Alzheimer's. I couldn't have asked for more.

We thank the team at Hancock Park for their dedication and commitment to all the families on 4 West. You certainly give 100% and it shows.

City Concerned Over Nixon's Budget Cuts

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy received $1.8 million from the Federal government in 1972, and Jeffrey Davidson, director of the Department of Planning, Programming and Development, says that he is "hopeful" that a similar sum will be forthcoming in 1973 despite budget cuts by President Nixon.

But right now everything is pretty much up in the air.

Davidson said there will be dramatic changes ahead for Quincy in obtaining federal funds as result of policy changes proposed in Washington. Quincy will, in all probability, lose projects such as the Quincy Point Improvement Program.

PROPOSE NAMING NEW SCHOOL IN MEMORY OF DR. CHARLES DJERF

The naming of the new Lincoln-Hancock School in memory of Dr. Charles Djerf loomed as a strong possibility.

"It couldn't be a more fitting memorial to a man who dedicated his life to Quincy's school children and to public service," School Committeeman Daniel G. Raymond told The Quincy Sun.

"Dr. Djerf grew up in that area. He treated, if not delivered, many, many babies there. He served for many years with distinction as a member of the school committee. A good part of his life was devoted to helping children."

Other names suggested included former school committee member and county treasurer Raymond C. Warrington, former mayor Charles A. Ross and President John F. Kennedy. (Editor's note: None of the above won the support of the school committee members. The school was named the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.)

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Braccioni (stuffed steak) In Tomato Sauce

Braccioni is a stuffed piece of flank steak or thin slices of top or bottom of the round. It is a delicious addition to tomato sauce in lieu of meatballs or sausages.

They can either be made out of a large slice of meat, or small pieces. Both have to be tied with string before cooking. Once the stuffing is made, the rest is pretty easy. They can be stuffed with just about anything from ham, cheese, salami and cheese, or today's stuffing.

STUFFED BRACCIOLI

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 garlic clove (chopped)
1 teaspoon basil
salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons or so of grated Romano or parmesan cheese
2 cups seasoned bread crumbs
1/2 cup of either tomato sauce, or chicken or beef stock

In a frying pan, saute the olive oil and the garlic. Add the bread crumbs, the tomato sauce or stock, salt and pepper, basil. Cook until blended.

Make sure the steak that you use is about 1/2 inch thick at least. Before you spread the stuffing on the steak, sprinkle with the grated cheese. Then place the stuffing on the meat leaving about an inch away from the edges. Then roll the meat just like you would a jelly roll and then tie with a piece of string.

Saute the braccioni in a frying pan with a couple of tablespoons of olive oil. Sear both sides, and then place it in the pan of tomato sauce. Cook for a couple of hours. When you are about to serve, make sure the string is off, and then cut into one inch slices. If you decide to make individual ones, you just have to remove the string and serve as is.

They can be made ahead of time and refrigerated until it's time to cook.

Post-Holocaust Recovery Explored In Play At ENC

The Communication Arts Department at Eastern Nazarene College will present three performances of "A Shayna Maidel," a play about the importance of family and faith during turbulent times.

The play will be performed in the Edith Cove Fine Arts Center on Thursday through Saturday, Feb. 28 and 29 and March 1, at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 for general admission.

"A Shayna Maidel," by Barbara Lebow, is the haunting story of a young Jewish woman who survives a Nazi concentration camp and joins the remnants of her family in New York.

The plot is not about the cruelty of the Holocaust but instead about the family restoring what is left of their lives after the war.

"Family is stronger than the greatest evil and atrocity that fallen humanity can devise," said Michael Ballard, the director who is an associate arts professor at ENC.

"The story we will tell is finally about hope; about life conquering death; about a family rising, with God's help, from the ashes of near annihilation to step into their future, bravely clinging to one another's hands."

"So much has been written about the Holocaust that I would never presume to do that," said Lebow, the playwright. "What I am interested in is the emotional response to the event, the feelings it engendered."

"How some of us who did not experience it are repelled and fascinated, guilty and concerned—and still wondering."

The production team will include ENC adjunct professor Corey Gilliam as light designer, Ballard as scene designer, and sophomore Joy Steinwedell as stage manager.

For more information, call the box office at 617-745-3715 or visit www.ENC.edu.

Two New Eagle Scouts Congratulated By Koch

Mayor Thomas Koch congratulated Quincy's latest Eagle Scouts, Josh Wallace and Matt Shaw of Troop 6 after their recent induction ceremony at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Troop 6 Scoutmaster Robert Gordon described the major effort required to attain the goal of Eagle Scout. The young men must earn 21 merit badges and complete a service project before their 18th birthday.

"They are two of the best kids we've had," Gordon said of the new Eagle Scouts. Gordon, an Eagle Scout himself, has been Troop 6 Scoutmaster for six years. Assistant Scoutmaster is Joseph Giggey.

Josh said he'd decided to aim for the highest honor "back when I was a Cub Scout when I lived in Merrymount." He wanted to emulate a family friend, Josh Knowlton, who had achieved Eagle Scout status.

For his project, Josh, a freshman at Eastern Nazarene College, chose a makeover of the youth room at Fort Square Church on Pleasant Street.

"That's my home church," Josh said, noting that he works with junior high and high school youth group members. Josh, the son of Kevin and Pam Wallace, has a sister, Lindsay.

Josh found donors for new carpeting and paint and enlisted the volunteer services of his neighbor, Kevin Kearney, a professional carpenter. By the project's end, the youth room was transformed from a cluttered, dingy space to bright center complete with a pool table.

Matt's project was equally challenging. He raised $3000 for wood, supplies and equipment before building a handicap ramp at the Gordon Conference Room at Houghs Neck Congregational Church.

Matt, the son of Kathy and David Shaw, has a sister Samantha. He is a student at St. Anselm's College, Manchester, NH.

QMC, Manet Health Team Up To Help Insured Connect With Coverage

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) and Manet Community Health Center (MCHC) recently teamed up with the Commonwealth Health Insurance Connector Authority to provide South Shore residents with information about the state's new health care reform law and help enroll those in need of health insurance in affordable plans.

Staff from both organizations were available at "Connect to Health" events located at QMC and at Kam Man Market in Quincy. In addition, representatives from Neighborhood Health Plan, Boston Medical Center Health Network, SHINE, and African Community Health Initiatives were available to answer questions and offer information to attendees.

"I am pleased that Quincy Medical Center, along with Manet Community Health Center, was able to work with the Commonwealth Connector to host this event," said Gary W. Gibbons, QMC president and CEO. "As two of this community's major healthcare resources, we know how important it is to help residents obtain affordable health coverage."

According to the state's new health reform law, Massachusetts adults are now required to have health insurance. Adults who do not have health insurance this year face penalties as high as $912. The penalties will accrue monthly and be assessed as part of the state tax filing process.

The "Connect to Health" enrollment event, was also co-sponsored by the Southeastern Massachusetts legislative delegation, including Congressman Bill Delahunt and Senators Robert L. Hedlund, Brian A. Joyce, Michael W. Morrissey, James E. Timilty, and Marian Walsh. Representatives Bruce J. Ayers, William C. Galvin, Louis L. Kafka, Ronald Mariano, Paul McMurtry, James M. Murphy, John H. Rodgers, Richard J. Ross, Walter F. Timilty, A. Stephen Tobin.

"We've made remarkable progress in a very short period of time, but there is still much work to do," said Health Connector Executive Director Jon Kingsdale. "We're extremely grateful to the Southeastern Massachusetts delegation for helping us bring this critical opportunity directly to the people of the region."

Those who were unable to attend the event but are interested in signing up for one of the new insurance plans are invited to contact Quincy Medical Center at 617-773-6100 or Manet Community Health Center at 617-376-3000.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community.

At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, and emergency medicine. Physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of care.

MORE FOR YOU HERE AT HOME

Lydon Funeral Chapel

We are rich in history here at Lydon Chapel for Funerals. The Building at Lydon Chapel was built in the 18th century for a young lady by her father. It was given to her with love as a wedding present. Since then it has been a birthing house. Young ladies would come to Lydon Chapel to give birth to the future of this great city of Quincy. At one visiting hours 15 years ago I was honored to have met one of the ladies that were born at Lydon Chapel. She proudly entered the Chapel stating "I was born here". Following this, the chapel harbored many seniors for their last years of life when it was a nursing home. The same chapels that we have today were wards like at Quincy Hospital. Following these beautiful years Lydon's Funeral Chapel became Russell Funeral Home and to this day we have been serving families in a compassionate and caring manner "One family at a time". Since the 18th century many people have traveled the circle of life inside of Lydon's Funeral Chapel doors.

Thru the decades of service Lydon Chapel for Funerals has continued to care for the Quincy community and the surrounding areas with compassion and respect. Because we service one family at a time we can put all of our time into your requests. We can add the special touches to the services of your loved one because you have placed your trust with me to care for your loved one. Here at Lydon Chapel we feel that this is more of a ministry. There has never been one funeral that has ever been the same. Like a flower no two are the same so I find in the funeral process. Everyone is unique and each person has different faiths and beliefs.

It is our counseling that helps families thru these decisions so that the survivors can feel that they have respected their loved ones wishes which will enable them to move on in their lives.

Michelle Lydon is the 2nd generation owner of Lydon Chapel since 2006. Michelle and her husband Charles Phelan are active in the community. Together they have refurbished Collins Rest-A-While Playground, BeechwoodKnoll Playground and the Sailors Home Cemetery in Wollaston. Michelle is currently the treasurer of the Quincy Democratic City Committee and Chuck is the President. Michelle is also 2nd vice president in the Quincy Lions Club. "I look forward to many years as a Funeral Director as well as a volunteer in our beautiful city of Quincy" quotes Michelle. Michelle is also a Justice of the Peace and has performed over 450 weddings around MA. As a service to the families I serve at the Funeral Chapel I am honored to be part of a happy time in my family's lives.

Four-Day Parish Mission Starts Feb. 28 At St. John's

St. John the Baptist Parish will hold a four-day parish mission, from Monday, Feb. 25 to Thursday, Feb. 28.

The mission services, conducted by the Oblates of the Virgin Mary, will begin each evening at 7 p.m. The purpose of the mission is for an overall parish spiritual renewal and to provide an opportunity for inactive Catholics to return to the sacramental life of the Church.

Fr. David Niegorski and Fr. Peter Grover, Oblates priests, will conduct the mission. The Oblates of the Virgin Mary are stationed in Milton and they are an order dedicated to the evangelizing work of the Church.

Traditional parish missions are an exceptional time in the life of a Catholic parish, devoted to the special preaching of the Good News of our Lord, Jesus Christ. St. John the Baptist Parish Mission will include: Eucharistic adoration; scripture-based preaching; confession and a general opportunity to deepen one's spiritual life. The Daughters of St. Paul will be at the first two evenings of the mission to make available books and religious articles.

People of all faiths and those of no church affiliation are welcomed. In the words of Pope John Paul II, "The traditional missions are irreplaceable for a periodic and vigorous renewal of the Christian life."

Dwelling Replacement Tops Con Com Agenda

The Conservation Commission was scheduled last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. to take up a notice of intent by Gregory Seymourian to demolish one single-family dwelling and replace it with another at 154 Rice Rd., Wollaston.

The area is considered a barrier beach; land subject to coastal storm flowage; and 100-foot buffer zone of bordering vegetated wetlands.

Other items on the agenda included:

Notice of intent by Caron O'Neil to demolish and reconstruct a dwelling and damaged seawall with placement of stone on property located at 18 Nut Island Ave., Houghs Neck.

Notice of intent by Thomas Galigna for subdivision of a residential lot and construction of two single family dwellings at 22 Gannett Rd., Adams Shore.

The following items have been continued to the March 5 meeting:

Reconsideration of notice of intent by Aidan Feeney to build a single family residence at 11 Gertrude Ave., Germantown, on land subject to coastal storm flowage within 190-foot buffer zone of a saltmarsh.

Notice of intent by Terrence Hillery for construction of an addition to a dwelling at 129 Bayside Rd., Squantum, on land subject to coastal storm flowage within the 100-foot buffer zone of a coastal bank and beach.

Continued to the March 19 is a notice of intent by Donald P. Buckley for the legalization of the construction of a pier, including compliance with all applicable wetlands regulations, at 144 Shore Ave., Merrymount.

"Successful government needs to be able to plan long-term," said Davis. "Sometime during the 1970s a decision was made to cap oil tanks on the site of the new Quincy High School.

"The short term cost most likely made the idea of removing the oil from the tanks less likely. That decision resulted in the taxpayers paying $1.8 million to clean up the site today."

Davis said he has spoken to a number of mayors and they told him they believe that in today's world there are more requirements put upon municipalities by the state and federal governments.

"Not only is the task of running the city a full-time job, the learning curve for the mayor and department heads also takes time," he said.

"The mayor should serve for four years just like the president, the governor and the School Committee."

Under Davis' proposal, the terms for city councillors would remain at two years.

"I look forward to having this issue studied by the City Council with the input of the public, current and former elected officials and representatives from the state and other communities," he said.

Exceptional service.

Strong advocacy.

Dedication to clients.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Feb. 7, at approximately 1:50 p.p., Officer David Levine was dispatched to the CVS store in Wollaston Center to investigate a possible shoplifting.

Upon arrival, Officer Levine informed dispatch that he believed the suspects were in a vehicle in the parking lot and he was going to be out with the vehicle. Officer Kevin DiMattio radioed that he was on his way to back up Officer Levine.

As Officer DiMattio neared, he heard Officer Levine's radio call for help. Officer DiMattio arrived and observed Officer Levine, his face covered in blood, with his gun drawn ordering the two suspects in the vehicle not to move. Officer DiMattio learned that the suspect who assaulted Officer Levine ran towards the MBTA parking area.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer John Menz, who was working a detail at Beale Street and Newport Avenue, heard the call for help from Officer Levine, so he jumped into his own vehicle and drove to the parking lot, where he observed the suspect who had assaulted Officer Levine running.

Officer Menz chased the suspect across Beale Street and into the Wollaston MBTA parking lot. Officer DiMattio also gave chase and the Officers surrounded the suspect between parked cars. Officer Menz made a move to grab the suspect and was able to bring him to the ground, but the suspect continued to resist.

Officer DiMattio sprayed the suspect with mace, but he continued to resist arrest. While on his stomach, the suspect stiffened up his body and kept his left arm underneath his body. After getting his left wrist in handcuffs, he again stiffened up his right arm making it difficult to get the handcuffs on.

While affecting the arrest, Officer DiMattio noticed that the suspect already had a pair of handcuffs - both attached to his right wrist. It was apparent the handcuffs belonged to Officer Levine and the suspect had broken free before being arrested. After the suspect was placed in custody, Officer DiMattio discovered that both of his hands were covered in blood, believed to be from either Officer Levine or the suspect, or both.

Additional Officers arrived to assist.

Officer Menz injured his ankle during the scuffle, so ambulances were dispatched to the two scenes to treat the Officer and the prisoner as well as Officer Levine. Back at the car stop, additional Officers took over for Officer Levine, who was transported to the hospital with a laceration to the forehead. The passengers in the car, one male and one female, were held until the story could unfold.

Officer DiMattio interviewed the assistant manager of CVS and learned the suspect that had been chased entered the store an hour earlier trying to return merchandise (one package of Schick Intuition Plus razor blades @ $10.49 and one tube of Dramamine @ $5.29) with an old receipt.

The assistant manager recognized this as a common scam among shoplifters, who get the merchandise from the store shelf and try to return it with a discarded receipt showing the same merchandise. The suspect was told he needed to show his CVS rewards card to get reimbursed. This card was needed to match the card number on the receipt.

When the suspect was unable to provide his card, he was informed he could not make the return. The suspect then left the store (Beale Street side) and the alarm sensors went off. Both items in the suspect's possession (razor blades & Dramamine) were apparently stolen from the store because this alarm did not go off when the suspect first entered the store.

Officer Harry Breen interviewed two witnesses and learned from a store employee that the suspect fled the store and jumped into a vehicle. As the vehicle drove off through the parking lot, a patrol car (Officer Levine) pulled over the suspect vehicle. The second witness said he watched as Officer Levine got the suspect out of the vehicle, patted him down for weapons and then placed one handcuff on him.

Before Officer Levine could secure the other cuff, the suspect began fighting with Officer Levine. The witness saw Officer Levine fall to the ground, where the suspect repeatedly kicked him. The witness ran to Officer

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

The S.A.F.E Program

I cannot over emphasize the importance of this Department's safety educator while I'll make an attempt to do so here.

Back in 1995, I wrote a grant subsidizing the position of a fire department public educator. Prior to receiving the grant, a couple of us in the fire prevention bureau made attempts at giving presentations as time allowed. There was a scattering of efforts considering the time constraints. We typically offered a program to the City's second graders during Fire Prevention Week each year (the first week in October) and sporadic efforts at senior safety and evacuation drills.

Since then our S.A.F.E. (Student Awareness of Fire Education) officer fills the irreplaceable need for proactive fire safety education to many of Quincy's population. Meanwhile, what few realize, the State's Comprehensive Fire Safety Code mandates some of these efforts.

Programs are now offered to school age children through the elementary school level. As needed, preschoolers are eligible for a presentation upon request. I truly believe that this program affords an intangible benefit for them later in life.

The annual reinforcement of the principals behind fire safety upon these children is priceless and should manifest in a more safety conscience young adult. Thousands of students presently receive this benefit while our hope is that few will have to experience the devastation of fire in their lifetimes.

Presentations are offered to seniors in both public and private housing. The educator is available to facilitate the mandated nursing home staff efforts and Medical Center efforts in evacuation training. This same S.A.F.E. officer assists with evacuation drills in dormitories and office buildings. Juvenile fire setters are filtered through various programs to curb and correct this threatening behavior. The S.A.F.E. officer has worked with various media outlets, like Channel 7, developing and filming fire safety programs. He conducts specialty program training such as fire extinguisher use as well.

This educator is an essential, intrinsic piece in our proactive attempts at maintaining the most fire safe community possible. His efforts complete my desire to afford this community every possible proactive attempt at informing residents of methods to avoid fire in their homes and work places, while passing along essential information about detection and evacuation should a fire occur.

Our program then not only facilitates our immediate prevention needs, but also in the long run, enhances the fire safety consciousness of our future young adults. Fire education makes our efforts whole and complete for those we serve. I am grateful we offer it. (The present Quincy S.A.F.E. officer is Lt. Price. Call 617-376-1018.)

Sober Club Organizational Meeting To Be Held Feb. 26

Wayne Devine recently won support for his sober club plans from both Senator John Kerry and Mayor Thomas Koch.

Now he's ready to organize a Board of Directors and an advisory board and will hold a first meeting.

Devine announced that an organizational meeting for the Presidents' Sober Club will be held Tuesday, Feb. 26 at 2:30 p.m. in the Community Room of Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Persons interested in serving on the club's Board of Directors or the Advisory Board and all interested persons are invited to attend.

Devine said that an attorney will be on hand to provide information and advice on the proposal, on the duties of a director and the advisory committee.

Before raising funds for the club, Devine must file for a 501C designation by the state. He said he is currently compiling the information for the stack of state forms.

Devine has been working on the Presidents' Sober Club proposal for over a year and has gathered support not only from Kerry and Koch, but, also last year from Governor Deval Patrick.

"These programs have proven quite effective in other state communities in fostering more stable environments in areas with significant substance abuse problems," Kerry wrote earlier this month.

Kerry also promised to spread the word in the philanthropic community once Devine's program is finalized.

Under his plan, Devine would offer a club where visitors could dance, sing and socialize without alcohol, drugs or smoke in their way. He, also, envisions themed dances, along with pool, pin-pong, air hockey and domino tournaments.

Devine believes the club would also feature speakers on smoking cessation, healthy diets as well as anonymous meetings on substance abuse.

He also hopes to involve young people in building the club and decorating the public areas. After such volunteer efforts, the youngsters might be "inspired to pursue careers in human services," Devine believes.

In the 1990's, a similar non-alcoholic entertainment club operated in Quincy. With substance abuse at an all-time high, Devine believes it's time to open a club again and expand the idea.

'Strictly Dance' A Big Hit At North Quincy High School

Dozens of young dancers delighted the 350 audience members at North Quincy High School Auditorium last week, drawing standing ovations for the show, "Strictly Dance."

"Strictly Dance" featured numbers by the NQHS' Renaissance Dance Team, the Rainbow Tribe, the NQHS Hip Hop team, jsXtension, Germantown Neighborhood Center, and the Renaissance Dance Alumni.

"It was amazing," Erica Limoncelli, Director of NQHS's Renaissance Dance Team, said, describing the packed house, the program's success and the response of the audience. She said she's still fielding calls congratulating the dancers this week.

according to McNamee who said sound reduction is achieved by materials muffling or blocking sound and from requiring quieter equipment.

The contractors "would have to come up with a noise abatement plan," as required in other cities and states under McNamee's proposal which is modeled on legislation already in effect for the state of New Jersey.

"This is a complicated, comprehensive proposal," said McNamee who outlined the mechanics of noise measurements through decibel counts, as well as his recommendations for enforcement, a standing committee, an annual report, and a constant opportunity for revision.

McNamee wants feedback from the city's legal department, the health department and business leaders before the measure is assigned to a committee for a public hearing.

According to the proposal, a noise disturbance would cover such problems as any noise that is detrimental to the health, comfort or safety of any individual, or would prevent people from enjoying their property or conducting business.

At all times, noise levels would measure the decibel count by scientific equipment. The ordinance would be enforced through the Department of Inspectional Services.

According to McNamee, one key element is the appointment of a Noise Control Advisory Board which would file an annual report.

The board would consist of seven members appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the City Council. After the initial appointments, the appointees would serve three-year terms with no more than three appointments in any one year.

Conway Commercial Sells Quincy Landmark

Conway Commercial, a division of Jack Conway & Company recently brokered the sale of the former Quincy Trust building to CJMPK, LLC and Leo Keka, who will move his restaurant Albas, across the street to the new site in the spring.

The 10,000 square foot building, located at 1486 Hancock St., sold for $1.4 million. Keka is in the process of totally renovating the building including the roof-top deck.

Paul Durgin, vice president of Conway Commercial, represented the owner of the building, the Chin family, and procured the buyer. Assisting in the transaction was Joseph Chan of Conway-Quincy.

QUINCY TRUST BUILDING as it stood in the 1930s. Conway Commercial recently brokered the sale of the property, which will be the site of the restaurant Albas by the spring.

"It's a Quincy landmark," said Durgin. "It's exciting to see what the new owner is doing, and the finished product should be a great asset to the community."

Built in 1918 for $40,000, this classic granite building was originally constructed and occupied by the Quincy Trust Company. The bank left the property in the 1980s, and over the years, it has been home to various retail and restaurant operations.

Midwinter House Checkup

Midwinter is a good time to do a house checkup — especially this winter, when many parts of the country are experiencing surprisingly cold weather and high fuel bills. Here are some things to look for:

- Check gutters and downspouts to make sure water isn't being diverted toward the foundation.

- Check the attic with a flashlight for wet spots on rafters and roofing plywood. On the outside of the house, use binoculars to check from a distance for any missing shingles, especially around chimneys and vents.

- Consider putting down extra insulation in the attic. Check for drafts around the attic access hatch.

- Check for air leakage around windows. If you feel a cold draft, there's still enough winter left to make it cost effective to hang insulated drapes or put up the clear plastic you shrink with a hairdryer.

- Walk around the house barefoot and check for cold drafts at floor level. Exterior doors, under windows and wall plugs, and in front of fireplaces are common places for air leaks.

- If your laundry-room floor is cold, chances are the exterior flap on the dryer vent is to blame. Depending on the type, sometimes the spring breaks or sticks and the flap doesn't close, letting cold air come into the house through the dryer.

- Check the interior perimeter of the basement for water leaks. Look for white residue on a concrete floor as a sign of a previous leak. If the basement is damp, invest in a dehumidifier.

- If you have an unheated basement and have been lucky not to have frozen pipes, consider whether it's worthwhile to insulate the pipes now or to install heat tape.

- Drain and insulate outside faucets if you haven't done it yet.

- Change the furnace filter, if you haven't done it yet this winter.

- Check the flooring at the front and back door. If you live in a snow area, look for salt and sand residue that can destroy the surface, especially of wood.

- Buy an inexpensive hygrometer and check the humidity levels inside the house. Too low, and your wood furniture and flooring can suffer. Too high, and mold could develop.

By making a few fixes now, not only will you be warmer for the rest of the winter, but you'll save on your heating bills.

Tips To Keep Your Kitchen Tidy

(NU)—If you are like most women, you hate to clean the kitchen. A recent national survey found that nearly 40 percent of American women dread cleaning their kitchens more than other areas of their homes.

That's why the experts at Merry Maids offer these tips to help you get started:

- Make the fridge look fabulous. Before placing containers in the refrigerator, always wipe their exterior, and cover securely to avoid spills and reduce odor.

Dispose of items that have not been eaten or have expired, every week. Once a month, remove all items and wash the shelves, bins and walls of the refrigerator with warm, soapy water, and dry thoroughly.

For exterior cleaning, all-purpose cleaners are safe for most surfaces in the kitchen, including stainless steel appliance exteriors.

- Scrub the sink so it shines. For stainless steel or ceramic sinks, rinse the sink after each use, and wipe with a clean, dry cloth. Drying the sink will prevent mineral deposits from building up on the surface.

Each week, scour the sink using a non-abrasive cleaner, such as an all-purpose cleanser, or glass and surface cleaner. Do not use steel wool; wire brushes or abrasive sponges. Use a stainless steel cleaner or a small amount of olive oil when looking to add a shine to a stainless steel sink.

- Remember your disposal and microwave. To freshen your disposal, fill it with ice cubes and slices of lime and lemon. Then, run cold water, while the disposal is on, for about 30 seconds. The ice will sharpen and clean the blades, and the citrus will release a fresh scent. If you have dried-on food in the microwave, fill a two-cup glass measuring cup with one cup of water and the juice from one lemon. Microwave for about 30 seconds, or until the water boils. This should create steam in the microwave that will loosen dried-on foods, so you can wipe the microwave clean. The lemon juice will provide a fresh scent.

Neighborhood Housing Services First-Time Homebuyer Workshop

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, located at 422 Washington St., Quincy, is offering a first-time homebuyer workshop.

The workshop, sponsored by Dedham Institution for Savings, is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 26 from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday, March 1 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The workshop will be held at Dedham Institution for Savings, 55 Elm St., Dedham.

Attendance at both sessions is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate.

The seminar is open to all Massachusetts residents regardless of income.

Participants will have the opportunity to speak with a lender to discuss many mortgage options.

Also covered at the workshop will be the legal aspects of buying a home, importance of home and lead inspections. The workshop is a prerequisite for first-time homebuyer mortgage and grant programs. There is a $15 fee per person.

Wii Workout

Q. My husband and I recently bought a Nintendo Wii for our children to encourage them to become more active. They enjoy dancing and would always beg us to stop in the video arcade to play this one dance game. We thought it would be a great idea to get the same dance game for the Wii system. Our children love it and want to play it for hours! Due to the weather, our children are forced to stay inside most of the winter, which causes them to get lazy and lethargic. Although they are moving and sweating and jumping around playing this video game, is this an acceptable form of exercise, or would they need to be more active?

A. Many people are finding the Nintendo Wii video game system to be more than just another computer game. Due to its interactive nature of moving not just your fingers, but in many cases your whole body, it can be a useful tool to help encourage children AND adults to get off the couch and get moving.

The Nintendo Wii and similar game systems have taken the concept of playing video games and added a more lifelike, being-part-of-the-game element through the use of hand control, and in the case of the dance game you bought for your children, the use of hand and foot control. This causes players to keep moving, but also requires hand/eye/foot coordination by mimicking what is on the video screen.

I have to admit to having a Nintendo Wii myself and playing one of the dance games designed for the system. I have to say ... IT IS CHALLENGING and can definitely be considered a workout. It also is fun, which can keep the attention of children and adults and distract them from feeling they are "exercising."

There are other games for the Wii system that can keep you moving as well. Wii Sports has tennis, boxing, bowling, golf and baseball games, all of which require you to move as if you were actually playing in the game. Other games for other sports and activities are also available, even games that are specially designed to promote workouts and exercise.

As with any type of exercise, a balanced workout is important for overall fitness and would ideally include at least five days a week of cardiovascular exercise and a few other days a week of strength and flexibility training. We also cannot forget about proper nutrition and healthy lifestyle habits.

The Nintendo Wii system can be a great and fun way to help keep your whole family moving. Until the weather improves, keep encouraging your children to dance their way to staying fit.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Health Hints

Tips To Help Reduce Joint Discomfort

(NAPS) — Chances are you or someone you know has occasional joint discomfort. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, one in five U.S. adults experiences some form of joint discomfort on a daily basis.

Many people with joint discomfort are unaware of the measures available to maintain joint health, according to Derallee Scanlon, R.D. Scanlon offers the following tips to keep joints comfortable:

Stay Active: Moderate, low-impact exercise is important to improve joint comfort and mobility. If freezing temperatures and icy conditions have put a damper on your usual outdoor fitness routine, consider joining a fitness class or finding an indoor track to walk or run on. Aim for 30 minutes of exercise three to five times per week.

Eat a Balanced Diet: Eat a diet rich in fruits, vegetables, whole grains and lean proteins to help you feel your best. Also try to consume foods that contain omega-3 fatty acids, such as salmon, walnuts and flaxseeds, which have positive effects on joint health. Avoid foods high in sugars and saturated fats.

Take a Multivitamin: A multivitamin provides a good base of essential vitamins and nutrients. Nature Made is currently the only major brand of multivitamins that contains 1,000 IU of vitamin D, the amount recommended by most health experts for bone, muscle and overall health. It comes in Nature Made Multi for Her 50+ or Multi for Him 50+.

Stay Hydrated: To keep joints lubricated and comfortable, consume at least 64 ounces of water daily. Alternatives include drinking green tea, low-fat milk and low-sugar juices.

Consume Calcium: According to data from the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES), eight out of 10 Americans do not meet their body's need for calcium. Consuming adequate amounts of milk, yogurt, cheese and other calcium-rich foods, as part of a healthful diet, is important to build strong bones and help prevent osteoporosis, especially in teen and young adult women. You may also want to consider taking a calcium supplement.

Consider a Glucosamine-Based Supplement: Recently, the Centers for Disease Control estimated that by 2030, the number of U.S. adults with arthritis will increase substantially from 46 million to nearly 67 million. TripleFlex is a glucosamine-based product that safely works with the body naturally to provide comfort, mobility and flexibility to joints. For faster relief, it comes in Rapid Relief formula with white willow bark that can deliver joint comfort in as little as one week.

Visit www.NatureMade.com for more information on joint health.

Food For Thought

Eight Nutrients You Need As You Age

(NAPS) — Many seniors are taking charge of their health by choosing the right Medicare plan to meet their personal health needs. But that's not the only way to take charge of your health. Many seniors are doing so by eating foods their body needs as they age.

The following is some food for thought:

According to the American Dietetic Association, as you get older, your body doesn't need as many calories. That's because it uses energy at a slower rate. Calorie needs may vary from person to person.

What is true for everyone is that he or she needs to make those calories count because all of us need nutrients. According to the experts at Health Net, the following eight essential nutrients can help you stay healthy.

Protein

Older adults need at least five ounces, or two servings of protein a day. You can get that protein from meat or dairy-milk, cheese and also yogurt supply protein. Try other protein sources, such as eggs, beans and peanut butter.

Vitamin D

Vitamin D helps deposit calcium in bones and keeps bones strong. The body makes vitamin D after sunlight hits the skin. Twenty to 30 minutes of sun exposure two to three times per week is plenty. Most milk and cereals are fortified with vitamin D.

Calcium

It's never too late to consume more calcium. If you are over age 50, you should get at least 1,200 milligrams of calcium each day. Milk, cheese and yogurt are the best sources of calcium. Dark green, leafy vegetables, calcium-fortified fruit juices and cereal also has a lot of calcium.

Vitamin A

Dark green, leafy and yellow and orange vegetables (such as cantaloupe, carrots, and yellow squash) all help eyes adjust to dim light and protect skin tissues.

Vitamin C

One common problem with aging is iron deficiency. It can lead to anemia. Eating vitamin C in iron-rich foods helps your body absorb iron. Choose iron-enriched cereals, beans, whole grains, lean meat and poultry. Eat vitamin C-rich fruit (such as oranges, guava or papaya) or fruit juice at meals.

Folate

It helps red blood cells develop to carry oxygen through the blood. Good sources are kidney beans, spinach, strawberries, green peas, broccoli and romaine lettuce. It's also in fortified breads.

Vitamin B12

Too little vitamin B12 can also lead to anemia. Eat meat, poultry, fish, eggs and dairy foods for this vitamin.

Water

Older adults need at least eight (8-ounce) cups of fluids per day—especially water. Remember that juice, milk and soup offer other nutrients as well.

Don't overdo it, say the experts at Health Net. Getting too much of some vitamins can hurt you. Certain vitamins can build up and become toxic. Also, some vitamins interact with medications or affect how medications work. Before you take any supplement—even vitamins—consult with your doctor.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT ORAL CANCER

Were you aware that oral cancer is the sixth most common cancer in men, the fourteenth most common cancer in women, and that the fatality rate of oral cancer is higher than that for cervical cancer, Hodgkin's disease, and skin cancer? These facts point out the importance of having the dentist perform regular oral-cancer screenings. While there are several types of oral cancer, about 90% are squamous cell cancers, which usually appear as crusted or scaly patches on the skin, with a red, inflamed base, a growing tumor, or a non-healing ulcer. With this in mind, have all lumps on your lips, inside your cheeks, or anywhere else inside your mouth checked by the dentist as soon as possible.

Doctors cannot always explain why one person develops oral cancer and another does not. However, we do know that this disease is not contagious. You cannot "catch" oral cancer from another person. Because your smile plays such an important role in your life — laughing, speaking, smiling, and kissing — our goal is to make sure it enhances rather than detracts from your self-confidence. Let us help you create a great looking smile. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we offer full-service dentistry and the newest cosmetic procedures. Presidents' Post-Season Campaign Over Red Raiders Defeat Quincy, Win ACL North Division Crown

By SEAN BRENNAN

Basketball games are in themselves, stories. Four chapters, four quarters. A beginning, a middle and an end.

Last Friday afternoon at North Quincy High School, the North Quincy Red Raiders and the Quincy Presidents wrote the final chapter in their 2007-2008 edition, and for North it marked a new beginning, and for Quincy, it marked the end.

The Raiders (13-6 overall, 12-1 in the ACL) defeated the Presidents 69-55 in front of a packed house for their 12th straight Atlantic Coast League victory. But more importantly, North Quincy, with the win, won the Atlantic Coast League North Division title outright.

The Raiders shared the ACL North crown last season with Whitman-Hanson HS, but this season, North edged the Panthers (16-4, 11-2) by one game in the win-loss column to claim the title as their own.

For Quincy (8-11, 4-9), the loss to North officially closed the door on a second straight trip to the Division II South Sectional post season tournament. With their eleventh loss, the Presidents will be on the outside looking in when the tournament begins in earnest next week.

The Presidents had needed to win their final two regular season games against North and Hanover HS to reach the ten-win mark needed for inclusion in post season play. Last year, Quincy slid into the post season as the #20 seed and proceeded to beat Silver Lake HS 46-41 in the preliminary round before falling to Hingham HS 55-41 in the first round.

The Red Raiders will learn its post season fate this Friday (Feb. 22) when the MIAA announces its seeding for the Division I South Sectional tournament. North Quincy is assured of a first round home game and the team should be a high seed when the pairings are announced.

Last year, the Raiders entered the tournament as co-champions of the ACL North Division with a 16-5 record, but were upset by Duxbury HS 62-50 in first round action.

The game itself was dominated in stretches by the home team, but Quincy, as it has done all winter long, battled back on numerous occasions to make a game out of it.

The Raiders stormed out of the gates on Senior Night and took a commanding 18-11 lead midway through the second quarter. By controlling and breaking the pressure defense that the Presidents like to employ, the Raiders' offense used its size in the paint to get offensive rebounds that

But Quincy did not go down without a fight in the first half. After falling behind by seven points (18-11), the Presidents used a 9-2 scoring run to tie the game at 20-20 (the only time that Quincy was even with North all game) just before the halftime break.

However with a division title on the line, the Raiders responded to Quincy's scoring run with an 11-1 run of their own in the third quarter. Junior forwards Jess Howlett (six points) and Siobhan Carnell (five points) accounted for all eleven points in the run and by the start of the fourth quarter North held a 46-39 lead.

The Raiders' seven-point lead expanded to ten after North opened the final eight minutes of play with another back-breaking 7-4 scoring run.

Quincy rallied from ten points down to get to within six points at 53-47 with 5:13 left in regulation, but the Raiders responded again with a 9-4 run to go up 62-51 with two minutes left in a game.

"Quincy shot the ball well and they kept coming at us, but there was leadership on our side of the court," said NQ head coach Michael Jorgenson. "The girls regained composure but it felt like a one-point game the whole way."

"We've been chasing it (division title) for a while and it came down to this game. It was good to arrive here and have it happen on Senior Night."

The Presidents received some standout performances from senior guard Meagan Tobin (24 points, 15 in the second half) and sophomore forward Leslie Campbell (19 points, 15 in the second half), but it was the team's inability to make its free throws that became its downfall.

The Presidents were aggressive on offense and were awarded. The team went to the free throw line thirty-five times, but made just fourteen shots (14-for-35 from the line). And those twenty-one points they left on the court ended up costing them in the end.

"We played a good defense game, but we missed too many free throws," said Quincy head coach Jeff Bretsch. "When you shoot 14-for-35 you don't win too many ball games."

Quincy seniors Marybeth Torpey (eight points) and Kathryn Carella (seven rebounds) both played well in their final high school game.

On top of the stellar play from Carnell and Howlett, North Quincy received solid play from seniors Rebecca Goreham (18 points, 15 rebounds), Kasey O'Connell (six points), Mary Kate Stille (six points) and Rachel Goreham (four points).

Rebecca Goreham (14.5 points per game) and Quincy's Meagan Tobin (18.1 ppg.) both finished the season ranked among the top four scorers in the ACL North Division.

The Presidents have seven student/athletes playing in their final high school game. They were Tobin, Torpey, Carella, Julie Kisielius, Elizabeth Bock, Krystin Newsom and Kerri Ryan.

Raiders, Presidents To Meet On Ice Again?

The possibility of another Quincy-North Quincy hockey showdown in the boys' Division II South Sectionals could be near.

Both high schools have qualified for the post season tournament, with Quincy just getting in by the skin of their teeth.

Last season, North Quincy and Quincy met for the first time in their respective post-season histories in the first round of the Division II South Sectional tournament. The Red Raiders defeated the Presidents 2-1 in a thrilling overtime game at the Quincy Youth Arena.

North Quincy would later lose in the South Sectional quarterfinals to Franklin High School 4-2.

The Presidents (9-9-2 overall, 6-6-1 in the ACL, third-place in the ACL North Division), who began last week needing three points over the final three regular season games to earn a spot, picked up two important points with an emotional 4-2 win over the Raiders on Feb. 13. They followed up that win by playing Blue Hills Regional (14-1-3 overall) to a 3-3 tie last Friday night at the Quincy Youth Arena to earn the final point needed for post season inclusion.

Quincy dropped its final regular season game of the year to Sandwich HS (14-2-3, 11-1-3 in ACL play), 4-2 last Saturday (Feb. 16).

In the non-league game against Blue Hills Regional, the Presidents got two goals from senior Mike Lebel. The 3-3 deadlock qualified Quincy for a third consecutive trip to the Division II South Sectionals. The Presidents had extra motivation against the Red Raiders. Not only was their post season life depending on a positive outcome, but Quincy was looking to avenge an earlier 3-0 loss to North Quincy on Jan. 25.

Quincy started the game off on fire. Junior forward Mark Gilbody (three goals, hat trick) scored twice in the opening period to give the Presidents an early 2-0 advantage.

Trailing 2-0 after a period of play, North Quincy's Brendan Glynn cut the deficit in half (2-1) with a second period tally, but Quincy's Kevin Keith responded with a goal to up the Presidents' lead to 3-1 heading into the final period of play.

Quincy maintained its two-goal advantage throughout most of the third period until NQ's Scott Richardson (13 goals, 13 assists, 26 points this season) scored with 46 seconds remaining. With the score 3-2 and the Raiders playing with an extra skater, Gilbody finished off his hat trick with an empty net goal at the 19-second mark and Quincy held on for the 4-2 victory.

Senior forward Ted Walsh and Keith assisted on two of Gilbody's goals.

"This was huge. No. 1 for the rivalry, and No. 2 because of the desperation in needing points," said Quincy assistant coach Ted Walsh. "It was essential to get two from North Quincy and the kids stepped up to the challenge."

North Quincy (9-6-4, 7-3-3, second-place in the ACL North Division) had qualified for the post-season two weeks ago. After the team's 4-2 loss to Quincy, the Red Raiders dropped a 1-0 non-league decision to Brockton High School on Feb. 16.

The team is scheduled to play against Blue Hills Regional HS today (Thurs., Feb. 21).

Both North Quincy and Quincy should be a dangerous match up for potential opponents when the tournament seeding are announced at the end of the week.

North Quincy boasts the Atlantic Coast League North Division's best statistical goaltender in Matt Brundige. Brundige, in thirteen games between the pipes, has recorded a stellar 1.95 Goals Against Average (GAA).

The Raiders also have two of the top-five scorers in the ACL North Division. Brandon Gilmore (25 goals, 13 assists, 38 points) is the number one scoring leader, and Richardson is number three.

The Raiders also have the experience when it comes to post season play and what to expect, as was evident last year. After knocking off Quincy, the #9 seeded Raiders took #1 Franklin HS to the brink before bowing out 4-2 in the quarters.

The Presidents also have the goaltending to make a deep run in the tournament. Jeff Giordani trails just Brundige as the ACL North's best goalie.

Giordani, in twenty games, has a remarkable 2.70 GAA. His play this season could bode well for Quincy as it begins its post season schedule.

The Presidents also have senior forward Ted Walsh leading the way offensively. Walsh finished the year as the second leading scorer in the ACL North with 13-15-28 totals.

If the hockey gods have any sense, Quincy and North Quincy will again meet in the tournament for a second straight year in a winner-take-all scenario.

North Quincy Sweeps Series Against Quincy With 64-60 Win Red Raiders, Presidents Headed For Post-Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders held court last Friday night in their rematch against city rivals Quincy High School.

North Quincy outlasted the Presidents in the fourth quarter and hung on for a 64-60 win, the team's second victory over Quincy this season (NQ won 69-54 on Jan. 25). With the win, the Raiders upped its record to 13-7 overall and 9-4 in Atlantic Coast League action.

North finished the regular season one game behind Plymouth North High School (16-3, 10-3) in the race for first place in the ACL's North Division.

The Presidents finished the regular season in third place in the ACL North Division. Quincy (11-7, 7-6) plays Sandwich High School in a non-league game on Feb. 21 to wrap up their 2007-08 schedule.

Both North Quincy and Quincy were slated to participate in the annual Vin Moscardelli Tournament on Monday and Tuesday (Feb. 18-19) of school vacation week.

The Raiders and Presidents will both be playing in next week's post-season tournament. North Quincy, after missing the tournament last winter, should be a high seed when the Division I South Sectional pairings are announced this

Friday and Quincy will be making a second consecutive appearance in the Division II South Sectionals. (Quincy lost to Catholic Memorial, 75-66, in last year's South Sectional semi-finals.)

In the game last Friday night at North Quincy High School, the Raiders and Presidents played each like their post-season lives depended on the outcome.

The first half of played out like a game of chess. Each team locked down on defense and each team did its best to limit any fast break, transition baskets, a game strategy that both North Quincy and Quincy like to employ when they are on the court.

The Presidents behind the guard play of junior Doug Scott (31 points) and senior Paris Amado (16 pts.) took an early lead and held onto it as the teams entered the halftime break. Scott and Company held their slim lead into the third quarter, and with five minutes to play in the quarter, Quincy led 38-34, and North Quincy looked to be in trouble.

The Raiders' leading scorer and rebounding machine, senior center Marcellus Lee (20.5 points per game average), picked up his fourth foul, forcing NQ head coach Kevin Barrett to go to a smaller lineup. And his team responded with the help of the smallest player on the court.

North Quincy senior point guard Phuoc Nguyen (captain), who played sparingly in North's 69-54 win over Quincy on Jan. 25, and had scored only six points through the first three quarters of play this time around, blew up.

Nguyen sparked a scoring run for the Raiders to begin the fourth quarter. He accounted for his team's first six points in the quarter and his running floater in the lane with two Quincy defenders all over him, tied the score at 47-47 with five minutes to play. The smallest player on the court came up large when it counted most.

"He put his fist up, which is our high screen-and-roll, and you saw what happened," said Barrett after the game. "He took over."

With Nguyen supplying the offense to get North Quincy back in the game, Barrett reinserted Lee immediately after the game was knotted up at 47-47. And the all-star senior responded with big rebound after big rebound the rest of the way.

After a Quincy called a timeout to settle down play and to attempt to quiet the raucous home crowd, Lee made his presence known. Lee collected a missed shot by North and he was fouled on the put-back. He made one-of-two free throws and the Raiders took a lead for the first time since the first quarter. A lead that would expand over the final three minutes of regulation.

Quincy's Scott (who leads all scorers in the ACL North Division with 23.9 ppg.) used his explosive ball skills late in the game to get to the charity stripe four times. After making his fourth straight free throw with 1:52 remaining, the Presidents were down 55-54 and were in good shape to pull off the road win.

But Quincy had no answer for Lee.

Lee (19 points) pulled down two huge offensive rebounds (off misses by Nguyen) on two of North's final three offensive possessions, and those rebounds helped the Raiders go up 61-57 with forty-seconds left in the game.

Quincy senior Martin Bowes converted two free throws at the 30 second mark to pull his team to within 61-59, but Nguyen put the nail in the coffin with two free throws of his own as the final seconds ticked off the clock.

Playing well for North Quincy were seniors Alex Tragellis, Sean Clifford, Jordan Thompson and senior captain Matt O'Neil. Junior Tim Stille (filling in for Lee while he was on the bench in foul trouble) played his best game of the year. Stille logged productive minutes off the bench and came up with a handful of rebounds on both ends of the court.

The Presidents received solid play from Scott, Amado, Bowes and senior forwards Kenny Francis and Andy Bouciucut both played well.

North Quincy and Quincy will learn their fates concerning post-season seeding, potential home dates and future opponents this Friday (Feb. 22) when the MIAA announces its 2007-2008 tournament pairings.

Good luck to both schools.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

We have said before that we are proud to be a locally owned and family run Funeral Home. We would like to share with you some of our beliefs...

We believe that our first duty to the families in our community is to serve our friends with a professional, yet caring and personal attitude. Dignity, understanding, honesty and value are our traditions.

We believe that each service should be offered in accordance with each family's individual point of view. And this means not imposing ideas, but accepting the family's wishes and offering advice when it is requested.

We believe it is our duty to provide our services within a range of prices that every family can afford.

We believe what we do is important to every family and how we do it is important to us... Every detail of a funeral service is important to us.

To Those We Serve We Pledge: confidential business and professional relationships; co-operation with customs of all religions and creeds; observance of all respect due the deceased; the highest standards of competence and dignity in the conduct of all services; truthful representation of all services and merchandising.

Mrs. MacLeod was a homemaker and she and husband, the late Donald MacLeod, settled in Quincy to raise their family.

Levine's assistance and aided him in attempting to subdue the suspect but he managed to get away from them and ran off in the direction of the Wollaston MBTA parking lot. Another witness, who was in her parked car, said that she heard yelling and then saw the suspect punch the Officer numerous times, causing the Officer to fall to the ground.

Once the facts of the incident were put together, the other two suspects were removed from the vehicle, which was owned by the suspect already in handcuffs.

Inside the vehicle, Officer DiMattio found several CVS receipts in a wallet tucked underneath the driver's side visor. The stolen merchandise was in plain view on the front passenger seat. Officer DiMattio spoke with Officer D. Levine and he relayed the following: He was in the parking lot of the CVS in his marked police vehicle when he was alerted by a CVS store employee that a white male had just stolen merchandise from the store. The employee pointed at the suspect who had just entered a motor vehicle in the lot and was seated in the rear passenger seat.

As the vehicle pulled away, Officer Levine stopped the vehicle. Officer Levine instructed the driver to shut the vehicle off. The vehicle had no key in the ignition but it was running until the front passenger reached over and somehow shut the vehicle off. Officer Levine instructed the rear passenger to step from the vehicle and then began to place him into custody for the shoplifting offense. As Officer Levine attempted to handcuff the suspect, he pivoted suddenly and all Officer Levine could remember was being struck in the face causing him to fall to his knees.

The suspect was charged with ASSAULT & BATTERY ON A POLICE OFFICER, ASSAULT & BATTERY BY MEANS OF A DANGEROUS WEAPON (TO WIT A SHOD FOOT) RESISTING ARREST, 2 COUNTS OF CAUSING PHYSICAL INJURY TO A POLICE OFFICER (Officer Levine and Officer Menz) and SHOPLIFTING.

Based upon all information available, Officer DiMattio charged the front seat passenger (suspect #2) with SHOPLIFTING - 4th Offense - as a joint venture. A check of suspect #2's record showed that he has twelve (12) prior convictions for shoplifting.

He was convicted of 3rd offense Shoplifting in Quincy District Court in April 2002. The driver (suspect #3) was charged with SHOPLIFTING as a joint venture and she had five outstanding arrest warrants.

In addition, suspects #1 and #2 both have open criminal cases pending in Quincy District Court. Both the stolen merchandise and suspect #1's sneakers were taken as evidence. Officer Donnelly took digital pictures of the injuries to both Officers' Levine and Menz.

At the station, suspect #1 was placed in a cell, where he was closely observed. He was punching the walls and plexi-glass windows. It was determined that he had pending charges for assaulting a Corrections Officer by head-butting him, resulting in the loss of teeth.

The reason he was out of jail was because a Judge reduced the bail conditions. Suspect #1 had 43 adult arraignments and 28 juvenile arraignments. Suspect #2 has 12 shoplifting guilty findings and 131 arraignments. Suspect #3, the female driver, had default warrants and was wanted on a violation of probation.

Officer Levine received nine stitches to the forehead area and Officer Menz was treated for an ankle injury. Nice Work! The Quincy Police Department would also like to recognize the witnesses who came forward with information, and especially the witness who came to the aid of Officer Levine when he went to the ground!

They Would Change The White House If 4-Year Olds Could Be President

President Bush couldn't make but "Mr. Bill, the Congressman, who works in Washington, D.C., and helps the President do good work for the whole country," did.

That would be Bill Delahunt, Quincy's man of the House, who visited the kids at Beechwood Community Life Center on Washington's Birthday

(Feb. 22) to check on their month-long study of the presidents.

He was pleasantly surprised to learn that the 4-year-olds could identify Presidents Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and both Adamases, father and son, from their pictures.

"But they didn't seem to know President Bush," he noted.

The congressman also admired the replicas of the White House made by the 4-year-olds and their answers to the question: If I were President and lived in the White House, I would have ...

"... lots of toys and beautiful shoes," said Rean Bego. "I may not get to be President, but I am an

60-Foot Buffer No Longer Required High School Plan Change To Cut Cost $1.5 Million

Mayor Tom Koch has succeeded in trimming at least another $1.5 million from the $126 million cost of the new Quincy High School.

Katherine Craven, the executive director of the State School Building Authority, agreed last week that a 60-foot buffer zone between the old building and the new one is no longer required as part of the project.

The mandate, made several years ago, would have required major demolition work to the current school building, work estimated to cost between $1.5 and $1.7 million.

"This agreement is a great symbol of trust and cooperation, especially on the part of Executive Director Craven and Treasurer (Tim) Cahill," said Mayor Koch. "I cannot thank them enough.

"They have now placed a great deal of faith in the city's ability to get this project done on time and on budget, a goal I know we can achieve if we continue to work together."

Dropping the buffer zone requirement will be a key cost-saving measure for the Councillors Complain Of Trash Pick-Up Problems

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City councillors Monday described missed trash pickups, smashed barrels, late pickups, and the mixing of recyclable trash with regular trash during a public hearing by the Public Works Committee and a meeting with officials of Allied Waste Industries, Inc.

Council President Jay Davis and Councillors Doug

Gutro and Kevin Coughlin described deteriorating service in their wards, 4, 5 and 3 respectively.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he's had no complaints with Allied's collection in his ward.

In requesting the meeting, Davis said "problems with trash pick up have been occurring on a regular basis in Ward 4 and other wards of the city."

Davis, also, described problems at Intervale Street where the Allied Waste trucks are garaged nights and weekends after pickups. He said the company is required to keep the area clean and clean dirty trucks to eliminate odors and they have done so in the past.

"That neighborhood deals

45,000 City Census Forms In The Mail

City 2008 census forms are in the mail on their way to 45,000 Quincy households announces City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The census will determine the city's population, which Shea says the last count set it at 90,450.

"I think we will reach 91,000," he says.

In addition to determining the 2008 population, information requested on the forms establish an up-to-date street and resident listing, helps calculate the city's federal aid, registered voting list, and forecast future school enrollment.

Shea asks that the census forms be filled out and returned as soon as possible to his office. The city pays for the return postage.

Morrissey Urges Residents Consider Efficiency Services

Sen. Michael Morrissey is encouraging constituents to look for energy efficiency and energy cost-saving measures to contact Energy Bucks to see what kinds of programs they might qualify for.

"Energy efficiency improvements are a great way for families to find relief from rising energy costs by reducing their overall energy consumption," he said.

Energy Bucks is an integrated campaign that creates "one stop shopping" for energy assistance services, enabling residents to better understand and apply for fuel assistance programs, utility discount rates and energy efficient services.

Energy Bucks is sponsored by Massachusetts gas and electric utilities in collaboration with the Massachusetts Association of Community Action Programs (MASSCAP) and the Low Income Energy Affordability Network (LEAN).

According to LEAN more than 800,000 Massachusetts households are eligible for some level of energy assistance, but less than 40 per cent participate.

"Even those who already receive fuel assistance may qualify for a utility discount rate or energy efficiency service," said Morrissey.

Energy efficiency services are available to families at little or no cost depending on income and can include new insulation, repair or replacement of their heating systems and energy efficient light bulbs.

Typically, a family of four can qualify for heating assistance and weatherization if their income is less than $3,441 a month and for energy efficiency services if their income is less than $4,337 a month.

Energy efficiency measures can save a family up to 30 per cent on their energy costs.

To find out if you qualify for assistance, visit www.energybucks.com or call 1-866-LESS-COST.

Tri-Town Alliance Seeks First Trash Pick-Up Bids

The Tri-Town Alliance issued their first Request for Proposals (RFP) this week as they sought bids for the joint collection of trash and recyclables in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth.

The RFP will be advertised in the state's Central Registry with the hope that the three municipalities will vastly improve their bargaining power with the joint bid.

The Alliance is an effort by Quincy's Mayor Thomas Koch, Braintree Mayor Joseph Sullivan and Weymouth Mayor Susan

Kay to create a regional system to save money by bidding jointly on purchases and services.

"We are entering this contract process with an eye toward cost-savings and improved services," said Koch, adding, "The potential for a three-city collaborative is without question worth pursuing."

At this time, Quincy budgets over $6 million a year for collecting and disposing of the city's roughly 36 tons of trash a year.

The alliance will increase the city's leverage by 40 percent if the three towns join together to collect and dispose of approximately 74 tons of trash annually. Braintree collects and disposes of 15 tons annually while Weymouth's total is 23 tons.

In addition, the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) offers special grants to multi-town efforts.

The RFP will also seek bids for "single stream recycling" which allows residents to dispose of all recycling in one barrel or bin without sorting.

Controversial Business C Zone Amendment Hearing March 3

The City Council will hold a public hearing at 6:45 p.m. on Monday, March in regard to a single sentence change in the "Explanatory Notes" of the zoning by-laws under Title 17.

Only a dozen words are in the proposed zoning change, but the issue has become highly controversial. The sentences specify the number of units allowed in a Business C zone on parcels that are 42,000 square feet or larger.

As one example, the change would allow an 80-unit apartment complex in North Quincy near Marina Bay while the current zoning language appears to restrict the number of units to only 25. Councillor Michael McFarland who has submitted the zoning amendment twice to the Planning Board and won approval twice said the current zoning language is contradictory.

"There's a flaw in the zoning code," said McFarland who stated that the proposed amendment simply "clarifies the language."

In addition, McFarland said the current language could hinder potential development projects in Quincy Center.

"People think this is exclusive to Marina Bay," McFarland said, stating the issue has considerably wider implications.

At council's previous public hearing on the issue Dec. 17, several dozen Marina Bay residents opposed the zoning change. At that time, councillors decided they needed more time for review of the issue.

Opponents said the change could open the door to a high-density development planned by O'Connell Construction at 260 Victory Rd. where 80 units are proposed.

On Feb. 14, former Planning Board Chairman Robert Harnais informed the City Council that his board had unanimously supported the change.

Harnais has since resigned from the Planning Board and is now chairman of the Braintree Planning Board.

Five Votes Needed To Keep Proposal Alive

Council Divided On 4-Year Mayor Term

By TOM HENSHAW

Council President Jay Davis has at least three, possibly four, of the five Council votes needed to push his proposal for a four-year term for the mayor of Quincy on to the state legislature.

A Quincy Sun survey of Davis' eight colleagues showed Mike McFarland and John Keenan in favor, Doug Gutro leaning toward a favorable vote, Joe Finn and Kevin Coughlin undecided, and Dan Raymond and Brian McNamee against it.

Mayor Tom Koch declined to comment, saying, "The voters just elected us to a two-year term and that's what we're focused on."

Leo Kelly was not available for comment.

"It's a positive thing and I support it," said McFarland. "It would give a new mayor a chance to accomplish something without having to worry about his reelection."

"I see what is happening in Boston, Weymouth and Braintree, where the mayors have four-year terms. Boston and Weymouth have had it for a while and it's working."

"I support it," said Keenan. "A new mayor needs more than two years to make changes in the administration.

"His first year, he's working with another mayor's budget. He doesn't get a chance to work with his own and it's reelection time before you know it."

"It's worth looking at," said Gutro. "I can understand the value of a four-year term but it's up to the voters. I lean to favor it but the voters deserve that right."

"A mayor who is in office for four years is more likely to attract talented people to head the departments. A DPW director or a traffic engineer who has a choice of four years in Braintree or Weymouth and two years in Quincy is not likely to pick Quincy."

"It's double edged," said Kevin Coughlin. "I haven't made a determination how I will vote."

"There is some advantages in the continuity of a four year term but four years is a long time if you make a mistake. Look at what's happened the last eight years in Washington. I want to think about it more."

"I haven't made up my mind," said Finn. "I want to listen to the debate. I can see merit on both sides. I am looking forward to the debate."

Raymond called the extended term proposal "the incumbent protection act."

"I'm against it," he said. "Our charter gives a lot of power to the mayor. It would create more problems than it would solve. If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

"I'm not in favor of it," said McNamee. "I you get someone who is not performing up to standards, you will have to suffer through four years before you have a chance to correct it at the ballot box."

"If the mayor does the job right, after two years he won't have an opponent or a serious challenger for reelection."

If it is passed by the City Council, Davis' proposal will go to the state legislature for approval and then to the voters of Quincy in the 2009 election.

UNIQUE souvenir album of his inaugural as the 33rd mayor of Quincy is presented to Tom Koch (left) by John Princiotta of Wollaston.

Souvenir Album Hails Koch's Election

What do you do when an old friend is elected mayor?

Why, you put together a souvenir album that he can treasure when the footlights dim and the music stops.

That's just what John Princiotta of Wollaston did for his friend Tom Koch when he became the 33rd mayor of Quincy. He made the presentation Friday.

"I wanted to present him with something unique," said Princiotta.

And unique it was, not only with pictures of Koch's inauguration at the Marriott but with pictures of the 32 previous mayors of Quincy, each accompanied by a recently issued John Adams dollar coin.

Princiotta campaigned for Koch, helping with the mailings and passing around flyers at the twice a week dances at the Quincy Legion Post.

And there were his kids, Katherine, Julie Ann and John Jr. or Jay.

"Our kids grew up in the Koch Club that Tom's father founded," said Princiotta. "The Koch Club played a big part in their lives."

4-Year Term Incumbent Comfort Cushion

Here we go again. City Council President Jay Davis proposes that the mayor's two-year term be extended to four.

Obviously, he thinks it's a good idea.

Frankly, we don't.

We were against it in 1986 and 1988 when our good friend, Frank McCauley as mayor first proposed it as a home-rule petition. And again in 2000 when he made another attempt at it as a city councillor.

The first try was killed by an 8-to-1 vote in the City Council. The second got through on a 5-to-4 vote but was shot down in the House of Representatives. The third made it to the legislature where it just died.

We felt then, and still do, that a four-year mayoral term (or council) is a political comfort cushion for the incumbent. Some coasting time between elections.

McCauley's attempts included four-year terms for city councillors.

Davis' proposal leaves the city council terms at two-years.

But McCauley is suggesting that he amend his proposal to include four-year terms for city councillors. "I'm still in favor of it," he says.

One election every four years for mayor, city council and school committee would bring a higher voter turnout he says.

Maybe. Maybe not. No guarantee.

We already have the mayor, city council and school committee members coming up for election every two years.

Davis feels a four-year term for the mayor would provide more stability and enable the city to make long-term plans.

"Successful government needs to be able to plan long-term," he says. "Not only is the task of running the city a full-time job, the learning curve for the mayor and department heads also takes time."

We've had some pretty good mayors down through

BURGIN

MCINTYRE

the years like Tom Burgin, Amelio Della Chiesa, James McIntyre to mention three who weren't handicapped by two-year terms and learning curves.

McCauley, himself, was another who served well during four two-year terms.

"The trouble with two-year terms," McCauley argued in 2000 "is that you get elected and before you know it, it's election time again."

That might be an inconvenience to an incumbent mayor. But to voters, it's more importantly accountability time every two years.

The best argument against a four-year term is electing the wrong mayor. Having to wait four years to correct an election day mistake is a long wait. Too long.

And if Davis' proposal should be amended to include the city council, imagine getting stuck with a wrong councillor - especially a wrong ward councillor - for four years.

A mayor (or councillor) doing his (her) job should have no fear about facing the jury-the voters-every two years.

And a first term mayor shouldn't have to worry about a second term. If the people see he is trying to do a good job, they'll give him that second term. There haven't been many one-term mayors.

Dan Raymondi, who opposed McCauley's proposal in 2000 probably summed it up best in just four words when he called a four-year term "The Incumbent Protection Act."

RAYMONDI

Raymondi, now the only member of that 2000 council still serving, says he feels the same way today and will oppose Davis' version.

"I see no good reason for four-year terms," he says. "There would be less accountability to the people. Four years would be a long time to wait to make a change in the mayor's office if it was needed."

Davis notes that neighboring Weymouth and Braintree have changed to a city form of government with four-year terms for the mayor.

"That's Weymouth and Braintree's choice but no valid reason for us to copycat," Raymondi says.

There are residents in those two towns who would have preferred two-year terms.

Davis' proposal in the form of a home-rule petition has a long process road to travel to reach reality.

First it will have to be approved by the City Council, signed by Mayor Tom Koch, approved by the state legislature, signed by the governor and then go to Quincy voters as a referendum in the 2009 city election.

If successful, the petition would require a change in Quincy's Plan A charter, which is looked upon as the ideal form of city government.

The people didn't ask for McCauley's two petitions or Davis' present one. There was no public clamor or outcry from them for a change.

Mayoral and council candidates know ahead that the office they seek has a two-year term renewable every two years depending on how they perform.

No elective seat has ever gone unfilled because of the two-year term.

Why take away the right of the people to make their judgement every two years and not have to wait twice as long to exercise that privilege.

Why tinker with an electoral system that ain't broken.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Council, Mayor Clash Over Appointments

By FRANK McCAULEY

The City Council and the LaRaia Administration clashed head on over appointments and when it was over, both sides declared peace, for the time being anyway.

The confrontation came unexpectedly, in the City Council Chamber, when a large number of LaRaia appointees showed up eager to spread their credentials on the table for Council inspection.

Even Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia himself, appeared to defend his people.

At issue was a request by Councillor James A. Sheets, chairman of the Council's Oversight Committee, for "all resumes and information on file, pertaining to all appointments made to date to be evaluated by a sub-committee."

Sheets expressed concern about "recurring ugly rumors and new allegations concerning certain individuals' appointments by the mayor."

GOV. GEORGE WALLACE, CAMPAIGNS HERE

Alabama Governor George Wallace visited Quincy in his quest to be elected President of the United States.

Wallace visited The Quincy Sun office and in a response to the question, "If you had the power to change one thing in this country, what would you do?" Wallace's response was "I would like to have the power to instill confidence in the people of this country. Some of them have lost it, you know."

Wallace also attended the Quincy Lions Club luncheon at Dutton's on Sea Street and told club members and guests that he wasn't as radical as some people made him out to be. Lions Club president Roger Perfetti presided at the meeting.

QUINCY-ISMS

City Councillor Leo J. Kelly called Mayor LaRaia to call a meeting to discuss the refunding of the seawall bond issue for Quincy... Councillor Paul D. Preservation Funding Requests Deadline March 28

Residents, city agencies or groups have until March 28 to file requests for 2008 funding grants through the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), according to Ward 3 City Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

CPC grants are used for historic, open space or affordable housing projects.

Addressing the City Council, Coughlin said that the CPC heard 11 presentations for a "terrific array of projects" at their recent public hearing.

However, there have been no decisions and the door is still open for four more weeks, according to Coughlin. He, also, said that the CPC will have slightly less than $1 million to disperse this year.

Locally, the funds are raised through a tax surcharge on real estate transactions and the state matches the city's funds.

Due to fewer transactions and a legislative vote, the state contribution will be lower this year than in the past. In addition, some CPC funds will cover bond payments for last year's open space purchases.

However, Coughlin said that the CPC funds will be dispersed to a wider geographic range of the city this year.

Among the current proposals are requests for protecting open space in Ward 3 and Ward 1. Funds have, also, been requested for the restoration of Wendell Moses Park in Ward 6, masonry work at Adams Academy and the restoration of stained glass windows at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Suggests Training Police For Response To P.T.S.D. Incidents

The unfortunate incident related by Lt. Minton in his column Feb. 14, in regards to the Marine, obviously suffering from P.T.S.D. (post-traumatic stress disorder), has presented the Quincy Police Department with an opportunity, similar to the one that led the Department to the forefront of domestic violence prevention.

The Department, in conjunction with District Attorney Keating's office, the Veterans Administration and certain social service agencies, should, as was done some years ago, establish a training program for Quincy Police officers on how to respond when involved in PTSD incidents. Who better, as in the one depicted in the column of Feb. 14 could deal with these incidents, than the properly trained Quincy Police officers?

The Quincy Police Department's intervention in domestic violence led the City of Quincy to be declared "the safest city in the United States." Don't we owe our returning heroes a similar commitment? We must as a community, through our police department, reach out to these men and women and show them that there will be help available.

This City must show these warriors, they are not abandoned. That help will be there, as it has been in the past, it will be in the future. They put their lives on the line for this country, now let us reach out and try to ensure a peaceful future for them.

Sugared Curry Walnut Candy

When I am talking to our niece Anita in Arizona, the subject of what we have been cooking that is different, or a new way to prepare a favorite food comes up.

And so it was one of those times when she gave me a great recipe for a sugared walnut candy she had made for the holidays. She liked it so much because of its simplicity, that she plans to make it all the time.

I was so pleased when I prepared it, because it takes just a few minutes for the entire recipe. And of course, the unbelievable flavor!

SUGARED CURRY WALNUTS

1 tablespoon olive oil

1 teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons honey
3 cups walnut halves (toasted)
1/2 teaspoon salt

In a large skillet, heat the olive oil over medium heat. Stir in the ginger, curry powder and cayenne until smooth. Add the sugar and honey, stir until blended. Stir in the walnuts until they are well coated.

Spread onto a waxed paper-lined baking sheet. Sprinkle with salt. Cool and break apart. It's just like peanut brittle. Store in an airtight container.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

CHANGES IN THE FOOT: WHAT'S NORMAL?

As we age, it can be challenging to figure out which changes in our feet are normal and which changes we need to have checked out by a podiatrist. It is natural for a foot to become wider and longer and for the pad on the bottom of the heel to thin out. It's also natural for the arch to slightly flatten and for the foot and ankle to develop a little stiffness. However, bunions, hammer and claw toes (curling of the toes), and arthritis are not simply natural parts of the aging process, and your podiatrist can help you deal with them. Corns and calluses, pinched nerves, and arthritis are also ailments that your podiatrist can address.

We are just as concerned about the reason for your discomfort as we are about the problem itself. Whether your foot problem is caused by aging, injury, disease, or deformity, or related to inappropriate footwear, strain, or overuse, we invite you to consult with us here at QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER. For more information about any topic we discuss in our column or for an appointment, please feel free to call us at 781-986-3668. Office hours are also available at 999 North Main St., in the Randolph Medical Office Building, and Milton Medical Building in Suite 221. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

P.S. The average person takes about 10,000 steps each day. Each step puts the force of two to three times your body weight on your foot.

The New Retirement:
From Vision to Reality
by Michael Falcon of Merrill Lynch

The generation that introduced "business casual" into the workplace is the same generation now giving the definition of retirement a makeover – the baby boomers. Sixty-five is no longer the magic number for retirement. In fact, according to The 2006 Merrill Lynch New Retirement Study, 71% of boomers say their ideal retirement actually involves working full- or part-time. Since there are no signs that this trend is waning, there are a few things you can do to help ensure that your own vision of the "new retirement" becomes a reality.

Determine Your Retirement Dream

Thinking about what kind of retirement lifestyle you would like to have is the first step in making your own vision of the new retirement a reality. Whether your vision entails embarking across the world or starting a new career or business, knowing how your vision will impact your financial life is important. Having an essential partner to help you develop a strategy for any of your goals from the very beginning may help ensure all of your goals are met successfully.

Have a plan

The Merrill Lynch study also found that individuals who have a comprehensive retirement plan are five times as likely to feel financially prepared than those who do not. Preparations such as planning to reduce debt help alleviate financial concerns. Planning future health care costs early can also help to answer lifestyle questions about where to live and to work. If you plan on working, it's important to know how the continued income stream can impact your employer-sponsored 401(k). The study showed that those who have comprehensive plans already are significantly more likely to be looking forward to retirement and are less likely to fear running out of money or possibly Social Security cut-backs.

Consider a New or Second Home

One of the many changes that come with retirement may be choosing where to live. If you want to live maintenance-free, you may want to downsize into a condo. Or, since your children are no longer a concern, you may want to relocate to a different area. Investing in vacation property may also be an enjoyable option. While most vacation properties are expensive, since costs include maintenance even when you're not visiting, some vacation properties may turn out to be a lucrative investment. Early planning with a trusted Financial Advisor and real estate agent can help ensure that you're spending your retirement savings wisely.

Invest in Yourself

Despite concerns over ageism in the workplace, only 25 percent of those who are already living the "new retirement" and have wanted to find work since turning 60 said that they had difficulty finding work that they wanted. As more baby boomers move into their 60s, this is likely to become even less of a concern. Because of this, many see retirement as a time to explore new opportunities or achieve a lifelong dream. Whether it's teaching, going back to school or working as a consultant, boomers may find it's never too late to consider paths they have always wanted to pursue.

Embracing the New Retirement Realities

Retirement today is fresh and active – complete with the flexibilities of other life stages, balancing work and leisure on one's own terms. While there are many uncertainties of aging, the one thing you can plan for is retirement. With the help of a Financial Advisor, you can both work together to develop a comprehensive approach to prepare for the type of retirement lifestyle you envision. The people who are finding the new retirement to be the most fulfilling are the ones who have defined their goals, planned for their new experiences and built the financial foundation on which they can rely on and fully enjoy their golden years without worry.

For more information, contact Merrill Lynch Financial Advisor, Kevin P. Mantville of the Quincy office at 617-745-5523.

Michael Falcon is a Managing Director and Head of the Retirement Group at Merrill Lynch. The Merrill Lynch New Retirement Study: A Perspective from Individuals and Employers was released in May 2006. For more information on the study, visit: www.totalmerrill.com/retirement.

One Woman Passion Play Sunday At St. Ann Church

St. Ann Church will host a special free Lenten presentation of the one-woman passion play "The Heart of the Cross" Sunday, March 2, at 4 p.m. at the church, 757 Hancock St., Wollaston.

The play, eloquently written and performed by Olivia Woodford, brings to life the spirit of Easter, through the love, faith and triumph of the gospel women as they witness the last hours of Jesus' life.

The play begins with women coming together to clean the house and prepare the food for the Passover feast, which will become the Last Supper.

After hearing the news of Jesus' arrest, audiences stand with Veronica in the crowd to watch Jesus carry the cross; join John and the women at the foot of the cross; enter the tomb with Jesus' mother, Mary, to prepare him for burial; and are with Mary Magdalene when she mistakes Jesus for a simple gardener after he has risen.

Ms. Woodford invites the audience into each character's thoughts, allowing them to take the journey with the character.

"It was more than a play," said Jill Woods, coordinator of Religious Education at St. Simon and Jude Catholic Community in Huntington Beach, Calif., where the play has been performed.

"I felt like a witness to actual events. I don't know what was more impressive. Olivia's performance or her script. But I do know that all who attended were touched by the experience. The youth were quiet and the adults were moved to tears."

"The Heart of the Cross" is open to all and is free, although a goodwill offering would be gratefully received.

Council Memorializes John Gilfeather

City Councillors honored the memory of the late John Gilfeather at the request of Councillor Michael McFarland.

A lifelong Quincy resident, Gilfeather, 79, served as a police officer for 32 years and, then, as a driver for the school department. He died Feb. 15 at Boston Medical Center.

In his memorial speech, McFarland described Gilfeather as "a very dedicated public servant. The kids loved him."

Gilfeather leaves his wife Barbara (DiBona) Gilfeather, daughter Marie Shaddock and sons Barry and Brian.

Burial was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Hamel Family Fundraiser March 30 To Benefit 7-Year-Old Samantha

Family, friends and neighbors of the Hamel family are asking for your support in their efforts to help seven-year old Samantha Hamel, who has recently been diagnosed, with Rasmussen's encephalitis.

This is an extremely rare disease (200 known cases since 1958), which usually appears in children. The disease initially affects only one side (hemisphere) of the brain and causes uncontrollable seizures and other symptoms that become progressively worse. And unless the affected hemisphere is surgically removed, the disorder eventually spreads to the brain's other hemisphere. But there is some cause for hope.

Young children under the age of ten may show little or no change in personality and no loss of intelligence or memory after having half their brain removed. The prognosis for children below age ten, who are treated early in the course of the syndrome, is good.

This group can often achieve normal psychosocial and intellectual functioning. Without a hemispherectomy, however, persons with Rasmussen's encephalitis eventually suffer near-continuous seizures, mental retardation and death.

On Sunday, March 30, a fundraiser will be held to benefit the Hamel Family Fund at the Venezia Restaurant in Dorchester from 5 to 9 p.m. The event will feature a comedy show, silent auction, raffles and a buffet dinner.

Tickets can be purchased for $25 each and a table of ten can be reserved for $250.

Samantha, her parents and siblings have responded to the daunting challenges of living with this dreadful disease, and are preparing for the only treatment available—the removal of the left hemisphere of her brain. They have consulted with the medical experts, New England Medical Center and John's Hopkins University in Maryland, which specializes in this disorder.

Needless to say, there has been a huge financial impact on the family, with lost work time spent at hospitals, and the added expense of medications.

Samantha's father, who is an auto mechanic, has Ankylosing Spondylitis and Peroni's disease. His condition is being maintained at present with medication, but he will be unable to work in the future as his disease progresses. Her mother has been able to work, but will soon need to leave work to tend full-time to her daughter's medical needs. The family is on the verge of losing their home.

Would you consider donating a product, service or gift certificate to help the Hamel family?

Any support, including donations, would be greatly appreciated and acknowledged at the fundraiser. If you have any questions, contact Margaret Laforest at 617-471-1806 (mlaforest01@hotmail.com), or Captain Dale Freeman at 617-359-8915 (frm564@comcast.net).

Donations may be sent to: The Hamel Family Fund, c/o Capt. Dale Freeman, 262 Palmer St., Quincy, MA 02169.

The Hamel Family Fund Committee includes Mayor Thomas Koch; City Councillor Leo Kelly; Penny Barakat, Fiona Canavan, Tom Fabrizio, Capt. Dale & Lisa Freeman, Kathryn Hobin, Margaret Laforest, Jim McCarthy, Lisa McLaughlin, Jack Nigro, John Prue, Joseph & Josephine Shea, Bill Spain and Amy Zero.

Squantum Residents Get Green Light For Moses Park

Squantum residents got the green light for a new passive recreation area Monday when the City Council's Park and Recreation Committee cleared the way for Phase 1 on Monday.

Plans include benches, pathways, and trees installed around an 80-foot (diameter) circle intended for play space at Wendell Moses Park.

The Wendell Moses Park, a two-acre parcel, is on Park Avenue, a short, unpaved street between Mayflower and Standish Roads. The site lies behind the Squantum School.

Ruth Kundsins, chairwoman of the Squantum Park Committee, said she's hoping the city will rename the small section of Wendell Moses Park in honor of a woman.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington said that Phase 1 of the park construction should begin in the spring. Harrington and planner Mary Smith presented a full color sketch of the proposed park.

In addition, Kristen Powers, director of Parks, Forestry and Cemetery, said her department would work toward the clearing and leveling of the property.

"I am ecstatic," said Kundsins who has been working with the park committee for nearly a decade. Kundsins particularly thanked Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee for his support.

"We all are ecstatic that we've gotten this far even though we have a hard job ahead," Kundsins said, referring to the thousands of dollars in major fund-raising still needed to complete the park.

It's been a long time coming, according to McNamee who said that Squantum residents have been working on the project for nearly a decade, through two mayors, two city council changes and two park commissioners.

McNamee described the area now is full of mud puddles, bad contours and inappropriate trees.

At McNamee's request, $6700 was set aside in the 2007 budget for the park and that money is still available.

"The money is going to be retained beyond this fiscal year," said McNamee. Those funds will be the seed money for Phase 1.

"It's very simple," said Smith who said that ten benches were located in pairs with a plot for wildflower plantings and Mountain Ash.

Harrington estimated the cost of Phase 1 at $20,000 while there is $6700 for the park in the city's 2007 budget set-aside.

Kundsins' committee applied for Community Preservation Act funding and said her committee plans a major fund-raising effort.

Kundsins' committee includes Tom Lynch, Mullen Wu, Bill Cody, Rosemary Wahlberg, Sally Wainwright, Bonnie Rudin and Karen Kenneally.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, Feb. 15, at approximately 6:40 p.m., Officers Steve Elmes, Paul Murphy and Tim Simmons were dispatched to the area of Lakin Square on a report of a neighbor disturbance.

Upon arrival, Officer Elmes spoke to one neighbor while Officers Murphy and Simmons spoke to the other. Officer Elmes noted that male neighbor/victim he interviewed had several marks on his neck and face, which had two bloody lacerations. The officer also observed that the victim's shirt was torn around the neck.

The victim said he shares a common driveway with his neighbors and when he got home this evening he found the neighbors car partially blocking his garage. He said this has been an ongoing problem, so he knocked on the neighbor's door to ask them to move the car. He said his neighbor opened the door and came out with car keys in hand. He stated he asked his neighbor to move the car, and again to not park in front of his garage.

At that point, the victim stated his neighbor said something back and then started pushing him off his porch and down the stairs. The victim said he blocked the pushes and told the suspect (#1) to stop. He also said when he began defending himself, suspect #1 yelled something into the house, followed by two males exiting the house and attacking him. He said they had him pinned in the corner of the porch and began punching him.

Officer Elmes asked the victim if he punched back and he stated he did in hopes of getting away. As he was being punched, he saw an older woman come from the house and then hit him over the head with a shoe, while the three men held him in place, punching him. The victim said his wife ran over from their house and tried to help him, but she was attacked with the same shoe.

The victim said at that point he heard his neighbor yelling for everyone to stop and his wife yelling to the neighbor to call the police. The neighbor/witness from across the street confirmed the victim's account.

Officer Elmes interviewed the neighbor/suspects and learned from suspect #1 that his neighbor came to his house and told him to move the car. He said his neighbor constantly came over about cars blocking the driveway, even when his cars were not in the way. Suspect #1 said he pushed his neighbor to get him off the porch and then the victim pushed back at him. Suspect #1 said he called to his two brothers and they came out to help him get his neighbor off his porch.

Officer Elmes then spoke with suspect #2, and learned that he heard the fight, so he went outside to help his brother. When asked if he hit his neighbor, he said, "No - I just held him - that was all." Officer Elmes interviewed the third brother, who denied hitting his neighbor. When asked how the victim had the bruises and blood on him, he said that he was only defending himself and did not hit anyone.

Officer Elmes reviewed the situation with the suspect family and inquired as to how the two stories could be so different. Suspect #1 added his neighbor started the fight by pushing him around as soon as he came outside. When questioned on the change in the story, suspect #1 said he was confused.

Suspect #1 then demanded his neighbor (and his wife) be charged with assault and battery.

Officer Elmes informed them that due to the circumstances - the visible injuries, the witness account, the change in the story, the brothers and the mother were the only ones being charged, and they would have to go to the court if they wanted to pursue charges against their neighbors. Officer Elmes then informed the three brothers that they were being charged with Assault and Battery and they would receive a summons in the mail to appear in court.

Officer Elmes then placed the mother under arrest on the charge of "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon (to wit shoe, 2 counts).

Nice Work!

In this case, a simple call to the Police could have prevented the escalation of the problem into a physical confrontation. Even though the issue really is a civil matter, it became a criminal matter when the assault took place. Now, not only do all those involved, including the neighbor/witness, have to go to court numerous times, at significant expense, they still have to live next to each other!

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Ben Franklin & Fire Prevention

"In the first place, as an Ounce of Prevention is worth a Pound of Cure, I would advise 'em to take care how they suffer living coals in a full shovel, to be carried out of one room into another, or up or down stairs, unless in a warming pan shut; for scraps of fire may fall into chinks and make no appearance until midnight; when your stairs being in flames, you may be forced, (as I once was) to leap out of your windows, and hazard your necks to avoid being oven-roasted." The Pennsylvania Gazette, 2/4/1735

As the comedians in the office just asked, "You were around then 'Cap' and read that first hand, right?"

Ben Franklin wrote that editorial as he did others concerning fire prevention, while in this instance he did so in Pennsylvania. He was a major figure in this country's earliest efforts to proactively prevent fire while he brought much of what he learned from Boston concerning fire prevention with him for his efforts in Philadelphia. His editorial, obviously, has to do with proper disposal of hot ashes and the consequences of inappropriate disposal, a concern in this century as well.

As I write this, I recall a fire at the beginning of my career where ashes were improperly disposed of within a cardboard box while the hot embers ignited the box and adjacent combustible materials. During the sleeping hours, the fire extended through the home.

With the price of fossil fuels increasing substantially, my concern for wood and coal stove use increases. Keep in mind that with any installation, a building permit must be obtained from the building department whenever a wood or coal stove is installed; the same must be inspected by a local building inspector as well. Be mindful of the need to maintain a clean chimney and flue pipe; over time, creosote, a tarry, flammable by-product of burning wood, can accumulate and possibly occlude the chimney, restricting the required draft for safe operation.

SWAP Earns Tax Abatements

The Council on Aging has a SWAP (Senior Workers' Abatement Program) that enable the elderly to work 89 1/2 hours a year and earn Allow at least 36-inches of clearance around an appliance to prevent combustibles from coming into contact with the heat source.

To prevent fire, and in the absence of a "warming pan," ashes removed from a stove or fireplace should be shoveled into a metal bucket with a metal lid and removed to the outside on the ground away from the house. Do not assume where they are ashes, that they (ashes) are harmless; embers can smolder and remain hot for days, igniting combustibles hours later.

Reading this portion of Ben Franklin's editorial has prompted me to conduct further research into his passion for preventing fire; a kindred spirit. His advice then on ash disposal is as appropriate now as it was back in 1735, but NO, I was not present then!

Just the same, be aware of proper ash disposal and keep yourself safe during this heating season. Thank you for doing so.

City Council Votes $1500 For Mini-Fenway Park

City councillors voted 8-1 to approve a $1500 contribution for Quincy's Mini-Fenway Park, officially Kids Replica Ballpark, Inc., from Ward 3 Stop and Shop mitigation funds.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who made the request, described the Mini-Fenway project as a potential boon for city youngsters and for tourism in the city. He's hoping the proposed park will someday draw a Little League World Series to Quincy.

"It's a terrific undertaking," said Coughlin, noting that the Mini-Fenway group offers programs regardless of the players' "socio-economic status." He, also, cited the group's camps that will provide total scholarships for all participants, strictly on ability.

Coughlin said, "This group will offer an opportunity for major league competitions" for Quincy youngsters which "never happened before."

Mini-Fenway will be located on 12 acres of the Blue Hills Reservation, Quincy at Quarry Hills and offer a half-sized replica of Boston's Fenway Park for young baseball players from across the state.

"We're very grateful for the gift," said organizer Rick Iaccobucci.

According to Iaccobucci, groundbreaking for the park will be held this spring and he hopes that the first ballgame will be played in Mini-Fenway Park in September.

All leagues across the Commonwealth will be invited to play, according to Iaccobucci, who said the regular season schedule will be set by a lottery system and players of all abilities, including challenged youngsters, will be welcomed.

In 1997, Red Sox third baseman Tim Lincecum proposed the mini-Fenway concept but Naehring suffered a disability and retired from baseball before the project got off the ground.

Iaccobucci and his brother, Ron Iaccobucci, revived the idea in 2001. Since then, the group has organized, received approval from the state for the land and been approved to register with the Major League Baseball Association.

To date, Iaccobucci said that Kids' Replica Ballpark,

Inc. has raised approximately $1.3 million in cash and pledges and needs roughly $2 million to complete construction.

Once the groundbreaking is underway, Iaccobucci said the group could sell commemorative bricks and seats at the stadium for $75 or $100 each to raise the balance.

In addition, Mini-Fenway benefits from the sale of Massachusetts license plates with the "Fenway Park" logo. The group earns $28 from the sale of each plate.

According to Iaccobucci, the license plate funds will provide an endowment for the permanent upkeep of Mini-Fenway Park.

Prior to the City Council vote, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee cited Mini-Fenway Park's license plate income and other forms of fund-raising before voting against the $1500 contribution.

McNamee said he wasn't against the baseball park concept but suggested the group had numerous methods of fund-raising and he'd prefer to increase the city's donations to DOVE which helps domestic violence victims.

Stud Finder Can See Behind Walls

Q. What's a stud finder? And how can I hang up a coat rack without it pulling out of the wall? — Jim T., Atlanta

A. The stud finder takes the arcane art of rapping the wall with your knuckles until you find what you think might be a stud, and places it in the hands of the common man. Or woman.

Why is this important? Because any item that is intended to be hung on a wall that weighs more than five pounds — or will hold other items totaling more than five pounds — should be anchored securely to that wall. And one of the most secure anchors is a stud — not the kind we women dream of meeting, but rather, the vertical framing boards behind the drywall.

Think of your wall, the visible part with paint or wallpaper on it, as a kind of curtain. It's a bit sturdier than cloth, but not by much. It's just sheets of material known as drywall or sheet rock, placed against and hammered to what is really your wall — a bank of vertical timbers spaced about 16 inches apart. These aren't just good for holding up your drywall, they're great for holding up heavy objects like shelves and coat racks.

Unfortunately, you can't see the studs, but a stud finder can — in a way. The most common type, a magnetic stud finder, locates metal studs or nails, while an electronic stud finder senses the density between a stud and the gap between studs. Operation is simple: Hold it flat against the wall surface and move it carefully from one side to another, at least 2 feet, until a green light glows.

So, to secure a coat hanger so it doesn't fall out of the wall, locate and mark the nearest stud (or stud pair), drill holes and attach the rack to the wall.

Turning Up The Heat While Minimizing Costs

(NAPS)—As temperatures drop around the country and heating costs rise, U.S. homeowners are turning to hearth products—including fireplaces, stoves and inserts—to save on their fuel bills.

The federal government predicts that consumers can expect to pay 10 percent more in heating costs this winter.

A recent poll commissioned by the Hearth, Patio & Barbecue Association (HPBA) found that one in three American adults indicated they will have and use various hearth products in their home. And these units, including woodburning, gas, pellet and corn stoves and high-efficiency woodburning fireplaces, will be important parts of their plans for home heating costs over the next six months.

"Consumers want products that not only provide efficient heat, but are also environment friendly," says Jack Goldman, president of HPBA. "Installing today's fireplaces, stoves and inserts can provide that efficient, clean heat without sacrificing the warm ambience that Americans enjoy in the winter months."

Benefits Of Zone Heating

A central furnace can waste money by heating your entire home—including unoccupied rooms. Zone heating with a fireplace, stove or insert warms the rooms families occupy most and allows the thermostat to be turned down on the central furnace. One study indicates that zone heating solutions can provide energy savings of 20 to 40 percent.

"Zone heating provides the heat where and when you need it, adding to a home's comfort and ambience, but also reducing household fuel consumption and savings consumers money," adds Goldman.

Calculate Energy Savings

Increased fuel costs and continued focus on efficiency are key reasons for the ongoing popularity of hearth products. With today's multiple options, a fireplace, stove or inserts can be installed almost anywhere in your home—even in non-traditional locations such as the kitchen, home office, master bedroom or bathroom.

To help consumers navigate the myriad of placement, product, and fuel choices, HPBA has developed an online comparison guide that highlights the differences between appliance options, fuels, approximate efficiency and the estimated costs of product purchase. The organization has also developed a calculator for estimating purposes only—that can assist consumers in determining the cost-saving benefits of various hearth products.

Visit www.hpba.org for more information.

Managing Your Money: Small Changes Can Save Big Bucks

(NAPS) - In today's economy, saving money can be an uphill battle. However, with a few small changes and the following money-saving tips, you can save a lot of money with little effort.

Save At The Bank

Choose a bank that offers free checking or has no minimum balance requirement. This can save you more than $100 a year in unnecessary fees. Also, if your employer offers a direct deposit option for your paychecks, take it! Banks will often give you free or low-cost checking if you choose this option because it saves them the hassle of paper handling.

Save At The Pump

When possible, walk, bike or take public transportation. If you must drive, there are several ways to avoid filling up as often. Don't drive too fast or too slow-most vehicles get the best gas mileage at 55 mph. Also, keep your vehicle in good working order. Cars that get regular oil changes, air filter inspections and have properly inflated tires are more fuel-efficient.

Save At The Mall

Cut back on trips to the mall by making better purchasing choices and taking care of the clothing you have. For example, instead of buying one trendy piece that can only be worn on certain occasions and will quickly go out of style, choose to buy basics. Basics can be mixed, matched and coordinated to make multiple outfits and generally never go out of style. Additionally, take advantage of season-end sales to stock up for next year-they can save you bundles.

Once you have your basics, keep them looking newer longer. Most consumers unnecessarily spend to replace faded and stained garments, which can add up quickly. To keep your colors bright and your whites white, add a stain remover to every load of laundry to protect your clothes.

Save At The Grocery Store

A trip to the grocery store can often wreak havoc on a person's finances, but by planning ahead and giving yourself a budget, you can significantly reduce your spending. Start by making a list-it not only helps you remember what you need, but steers you from impulse buying. Buy private labels over name brands, as they often come from the same manufacturer at a lower price.

Although adjusting the way you bank, drive and shop won't provide answers to all your financial problems, these small changes are great ways to start saving.

Computer Seminar At Registry Of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer assisted land records research at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham Wednesday, March 26 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the general public.

The program will include a brief presentation, written reference materials, and hands-on exercises. There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

"These services have proven valuable tools for our customers," O'Donnell said, "and we hope that this seminar will be helpful and informative."

There is no charge for the seminar, but persons planning to attend are asked to register by calling 781-461-6116. Include name, address and a daytime phone number when registering.

The Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County.

For more information, visit the registry website at www.norfolkdeeds.org or call 781-461-6116.

Ab Classes

Q. My gym offers 15-minute abdominal classes. Although I try to make at least three of these classes a week and definitely feel my abs burning during class, I have not seen much progress in flattening my abdominal area. Am I doing something wrong, or are these classes just a waste of time?

A. Abdominal classes have become common in many fitness facilities. The typical class consists of an instructor taking a group of participants through 15 to 20 minutes of various abdominal exercises. Unfortunately, the popularity of these classes has many people crunching themselves into disappointment, since abdominal exercises alone will not slim your middle.

The purpose of abdominal classes should be to focus on increasing the stability and strength of the core muscles (abdominal, back, hips), not to develop a "six pack." Since we cannot actually "flatten" our abdominals, our goal should be to lower our body-fat percentage, which will decrease the amount of fat around our middle, making our abdominal muscles more visible.

Before attending your first abdominal class, I recommend understanding what to expect. Your goal should be to increase core strength and stability, not experience soreness for the next two days. Avoid gauging how well the class was taught by how "hard" the exercises were, or by how much of a burn you felt in your abdominal muscles. You should feel like you have more control, strength and stability within your back, abdominals and hips with each class completed. This should determine the success of each class. Focus on quality, not quantity.

To get the best results from abdominal classes, be sure you know how to correctly perform each exercise. Many participants use the wrong techniques when completing abdominal exercises, and repeat these poor techniques repetition after repetition, class after class. Straining the muscles of your neck and arching your lower back while completing abdominal exercises is one example of what should be avoided and could cause not just discomfort but injury if repeated.

Although, group classes tend to encourage participants to keep up with their neighbors, go at your own pace. Use modifications to exercises that may be too advanced, and only progress to a more difficult exercise once you have mastered the basic exercise. At the beginning of class, inform the instructor of any medical conditions that might need a safer version to be demonstrated. The instructor should be able to accommodate your needs.

Your abdominal class should be part of a balanced workout routine that includes cardiovascular exercise and strength training, partnered with healthy nutritional habits. Consistent exercise, proper nutrition and genetics will help you reach your goal of lowering your body fat around your abdomen, which will give the appearance of "flatter abs."

Tips On Losing Weight Safely

(NAPS) – You might dramatically decrease your risk of a number of health ailments by simply losing weight. Yet about two-thirds of the population fall into the overweight or obese categories.

Regular checkups with your doctor are important to monitor and control conditions associated with excessive weight gain. In addition, nurses and pharmacists are good resources for information about healthy weight management, as well as diseases and conditions associated with weight gain. For instance, Medco now has pharmacists who are trained specifically in diabetes.

Here are some helpful weight-loss tips:

See Your Doctor: Before starting any weight-loss plan, talk with your doctor about your medical history, including medications you are currently taking. Weight gain can be a side effect of many prescription medications.

Know The Facts: Weight-loss medications are only meant for people with a significant amount of weight to lose and who are at risk for serious health problems.

Ask Questions: Check with your pharmacist or doctor about possible dangers before starting a new treatment.

Here is some information about different types of weight-loss aids:

Prescriptions: Two common prescription weight-loss medications are Sibutramine and Orlistat. Sibutramine is not for people who have uncontrolled high blood pressure, heart disease or a history of stroke. Orlistat decreases the absorption of fat-soluble vitamins. A daily multivitamin may need to be taken with the drug.

Over-The-Counter Most over-the-counter diet pills consist of appetite suppressants. However, Alli, the first FDA-approved nonprescription weight-loss drug, is a fat-blocker. It prevents your digestive system from breaking down up to a quarter of the fat you eat.

Herbal Remedies: Certain herbal supplements can have adverse affects ranging from vomiting to life-threatening conditions such as liver or kidney dysfunction. In more than two-thirds of cases, these remedies have never been clinically proven to be effective.

Good Test Scores Key For People With Diabetes

(NAPS) – There's good news for people with diabetes. Research indicates that the majority of those with the condition are doing a better job of managing it.

Just over 20 million Americans have diabetes. Most have type 2, or adult-onset diabetes, in which the body loses its ability to use insulin properly.

If not managed properly, type 2 diabetes can lead to the loss of limbs and eyesight, blindness and heart disease. It's estimated that diseases linked to type 2 diabetes, particularly those that involve obesity and lack of exercise, tax the U.S. health system to the tune of $22.9 billion a year in direct medical costs.

Key to managing the condition properly is testing. The good news, according to a recent Health Trends Report by the lab testing company Quest Diagnostics, is that more people with the condition are controlling the disease better. The study-based on 22.7 million lab tests performed by Quest Diagnostics-reveals that between 2001 and 2006, diabetes control improved by 44 percent.

The key test reveals the status of a person's blood sugar levels over a period of several weeks. The test is called hemoglobin A1c.

The target for those with diabetes is a blood sugar level of less than 7 percent of hemoglobin-the main protein in red blood cells. Experts believe that every reduction of a percentage point of glucose in hemoglobin represents a 40 percent reduction in a patient's risk of eye, kidney or nerve-related complications.

According to Dr. Francine Kaufman, a professor at the University of Southern California and past president of the American Diabetes Association, "Diabetes can be a life-taking, life-altering disease if you don't manage it."

Said Kaufman, who analyzed the data, "Control has gotten better and impressively so." However, she added that there was still more to do in terms of controlling the disease given that the data suggests that the rate of improvement has slowed.

The results were presented at the American Diabetes Association's annual scientific meeting in Chicago. The study also found that people with diabetes have a worse time controlling the condition in winter-possibly as a result of holiday feasting-and that men struggle with it more than women.

Said Kaufman, "People with diabetes will have to get out and get walking, lose that five to 10 pounds. Just taking a pill and not doing anything else isn't enough."

Trouble Could Be Afoot From Ill-Fitting Shoes

(NU) – If winter is one of the harshest seasons, summer can be just as unkind – at least to our feet.

And with warmer weather just around the corner, most consumers will be turning in their Ugg boots and galoshes for flip-flops and sandals.

However, experts warn that while those sassy summer sandals may be simple to slip on and easy on the pocketbook, they also come with their own inherent problems.

"Flip-flops offer little in terms of arch support, foot protection and shock absorption. Tendonitis, arch pain and sprained ankles are just some of the problems flip-flops can cause," said Dr. Christian Robertozzi, president of the American Podiatric Medical Association (APMA).

In fact, most industry experts agree that flip-flops and sandals were never meant to be worn as everyday shoes, but instead were meant to be worn from the locker room to the pool or in the shower.

However, if you can't beat the thought of foregoing those sassy, strappy sandals, APMA offers this advice that can provide some tender loving care for your tootsies, while still showing off your toes:

• Consider whether the shoes are made for walking. Flats and slides shouldn't be worn for long periods of time or when walking long distances. Instead, select a sole that doesn't bend or twist excessively, to avoid arch and heel pain.

• Choose the source of material carefully. Flip-flops and sandals that are made of natural material, such as soft, supple leather, will prevent calluses and dead skin build-up around the heels.

• Watch the height. Most fashion magazines tout minimum 2-inch heels as a way of lengthening the legs and looking slimmer. However, anything higher changes the way the foot functions and causes the foot to wobble. Rather, look for sandals with lower, wider heels and a stable sole to offer greater support and balance, reducing pressure on the toes and ball of the foot.

• Don't forget the lotion. It's easy to forget to apply sunscreen to your feet and ankles, but doing so will ensure sunburn. In addition, reapply after getting out of the water.

• Wear shoes specific to the activity. Although the high wedges may look fabulous, they are of little help in a volleyball game or Frisbee tournament. To avoid toe and ankle injuries, wear appropriate footwear.

NEW GAIN ON NO PAIN?

Some patients are concerned about the prospect of enduring discomfort in the dental chair. When dentists block pain with injections of local anesthesia, they not only deaden the pain-sensing nerve cells, they block all nerve cells. As a result, patients may experience temporary numbness and muscle weakness, which causes drooling. In an effort to address this side effect, researchers have been investigating a way to target not only the pain-sensing nerve cells while avoiding the neurons responsible for muscle movement and touch sensations. According to this research, injections of the active ingredient found in chili peppers (capsaicin), which is a derivative of the common local anesthetic lidocaine, solely target the pain-sensing neurons. This finding could lead to improved future pain-blocking techniques.

Because certain drugs can interact with local anesthetic solutions, tell your dentist about all medications – both prescription and over-the-counter – you are taking. We will make suggestions to help you maintain good oral health. Today, life expectancy is projected well into an individual's eighties and beyond. Edge Bishop Feehan 53-51

Presidents Win Div. II Preliminary Round

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents (13-8) hung on to defeat Bishop Feehan High School, 53-51, Monday night in a South Sectional Division II preliminary round game at QHS' East Gym.

And, in this game, the score really was as close as it looks.

Bishop Feehan's Michael McGowan back rimmed a game winning three-pointer as time expired and Quincy held on to win a game that they dominated for three-quarters.

No. 14 seeded Quincy raced out to an 18-13 first quarter lead over No. 20 BF on the strength of a 18-7 scoring run over the final six minutes of play in the opening quarter. Junior guard Doug Scott (20 points, 7 assists) scored four points and dished out three assists in the quarter and senior forward Martin Bowes (eight points) scored four points, as the Presidents took control of the quarter after Bishop Feehan had started the game on a 6-0 run.

The second quarter was not a thing of basketball beauty, as both teams struggled to find an offensive groove.

Bishop Feehan cut into the Presidents lead with a fast-break lay-up to start the quarter (18-15), but Scott, senior forward Kenny Francis (player of the game) and senior guard Paris Amado (nine points) pushed Quincy's lead back to 24-15 with a flurry of activity.

After Bishop Feehan scored, Scott drove the paint and scored on a left-handed lay-up; Francis came up with a monster block on the defensive end; Scott scored another basket in transition on a feed from Amado and Amado closed out the 6-0 run with a bucket off an assist from Scott.

Scott and Amado scored the final four points of the half for the Presidents and Quincy's defense held Bishop Feehan to only seven second quarter points. The score at the break was 28-20, Quincy.

Whatever both coaches said to their team in the locker room worked. Both teams came out of the break fighting for their post-season lives, and the result was a high scoring third quarter.

Scott got the home crowd (and visiting crowd) buzzing with a Globetrotter-like, behind-the-back pass to

BOYS' BASKETBALL

Francis in transition to push the Quincy lead to double digits (30-20). After Bishop Feehan's Ryan Lee drained a three from the corner, Bowes, Francis, and Scott gave Quincy its biggest lead of the night at 35-23.

Following a BFlay-up that cut the lead back to ten (35-25), things got a little testy. Bowes, who played a gritty game down low in the paint, was called for a suspect technical foul during a battle for a loose ball, and Bishop Feehan converted two foul shots that cut the deficit to 35-28.

Quincy senior Andy Boucicaut's basket gave the Presidents back a nine-point lead, but Bishop Feehan responded with another basket (37-30), and seemed to be gaining some momentum.

Enter Doug Scott.

Scott (nine points in the quarter) buried two long-range three-pointers and hit one-of-two from the foul line to help quell a late quarter run by the visitors (two three pointers by Matt Adams), and Quincy took a 44-38 advantage into the final eight minutes of play.

The final quarter did not start well for the hosts as Bishop Feehan, riding wave of emotion as the No. 20 seed smelling upset, went on a 4-0 run that cut the lead to 44-42 (closest they had been since 18-15).

A pull-up jumper by Scott (sweetest stroke in the city) and a put-back by Bowes gave Quincy a 46-42 lead with six minutes remaining, but Bishop Feehan came right back to cut it again to two points at 48-46.

With the season in the balance and Bishop Feehan breathing down Quincy's necks, the Presidents' Kenny Francis single-handedly altered the game.

First he hit one of two from the line, and then followed that by taking a charge on the defensive end. Scott, sensing Francis' mojo, found him for another lay-up to give Quincy a 51-46 lead and Francis continued his great play with a huge defensive rebound on the other end.

A three-point play by BF's Adams brought the score to 51-49, but again, Francis collected a huge defensive rebound (after a Quincy turnover) and hit one-of-two free throws for a 52-49 lead.

Those five possessions, four points, two rebounds, and a charge in the final four minutes by Francis were the difference in the game.

Bishop Feehan would get to 52-51, but Scott hit one-of-two free throws with ten seconds left, and after a timeout by Bishop Feehan with 3.7 seconds left, the game came down to the final shot.

As the road team and lower seed, Bishop Feehan went for the win. The in-bounds pass went to McGowan, and he had an open look from the right corner. His shot was off and Quincy survived 53-51.

No. 14 Quincy played a first-round game last night (Feb. 27) against No. 3 Plymouth North. The Presidents were familiar with Ply. North as both teams play in the Atlantic Coast League North Division.

Game Notes: Scott and Amado scored 17 of the team's 28 first-half points... Bishop Feehan finished the year at 8-13... Quincy went 7-for-12 from the free throw line.

NQ Girls' Basketball, Both Boys' Basketball And High School Hockey Teams In Postseason It's High School Tournament Time Again

By SEAN BRENNAN

High school tournament madness gets underway this week and several Quincy teams will be looking to extend their seasons another day, with the hope that a trip to the South Sectional finals is in the cards.

Basketball

North Quincy Girls

The Lady Red Raiders enter the post season as the Atlantic Coast League North Division champions. At 13-5 overall and 12-1 in the competitive ACL, the Red Raiders earned the eight seed in the South Sectional bracket.

Their regular season record earned North Quincy a bye into the first round and a home date with No. 9 seed Bridgewater-Raynham High School (12-6 overall) last night (Feb. 27) at NQHS. If the Red Raiders won last night, they would meet the winner of the Franklin HS (No. 1 seed)/Natick/Attleboro game on February 29 in the quarterfinals.

North Quincy enters the post-season on fire. Winners of twelve straight league games, the Red Raiders captured their second straight ACL North crown (they were co-champions with Whitman-Hanson HS in 2006-2007) this season.

The Raiders ended their regular season with a 69-55 victory over Quincy HS, and in the process swept the season series against the Presidents, and knocked Quincy out of post-season contention.

Senior Rebecca Goreham leads North Quincy. Goreham finished the season with a 14.5 points per game average, and continually averaged a double-double. She finished her high school career as the program's all-time rebound leader and this season became a member of the 1,000-point club.

Other players to keep an eye on include seniors Paige Bonanni, Kasey O'Connell, Kerry Coughlin, Mary Kate Stille and Rachel Goreham, juniors Jess Howlett, Kathleen Lynch, Siobhan Carnell and Catherine O'Connell, and sophomores Sammy Bonanni and Rushri Wijesundera.

The Red Raiders, under first-year head coach Michael Jorgenson, took care of business in the regular season, but the post-season is a different beast. Last year, North rolled into the tournament as co-champions of the ACL with a 16-5 record, but were upset in a first-round home game, 62-50, by Durfee HS.

"We came out of the season feeling pretty good. The players are excited to start the second part of the season," said Jorgenson. "But good teams can go into other gyms and play their game, you can't depend on the home advantage."

In Bridgewater-Raynham, the team's first-round foe last night, North Quincy faced a familiar face. B-R is a former conference rival from the Old Colony

Blood Pressure

Clinics For Seniors

Weekly blood pressure screenings for elders will be held the first and third Monday of the month from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Council on Aging, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy.

League, and is a team that could give North trouble with their solid guard play and fundamental basketball skills.

A win last night more than likely means that NQ will travel to Franklin HS (should they win) for a quarterfinal game on Friday night.

North Quincy Boys

The Red Raiders also enter the Division I South Sectionals on a serious high. NQ defeated Quincy, for the third straight time this winter, in the championship game of the Vin Moscardelli Tournament over the school vacation week to finish the regular season with an impressive 15-7 overall record and a 10-4 record in the ACL.

As the No. 5 seed in the South Sectional bracket, the Raiders drew No. 9 Bridgewater-Raynham HS. The two teams will meet tonight (Thursday, Feb. 28) at 7 p.m. at NQHS with the winner advancing to the quarterfinals to play the winner of the Framingham/New Bedford in the next round. North Quincy would host that quarterfinal game if they beat B-R and No. 13 New Bedford wins over No. 4 Framingham.

"We are very familiar with B-R," said NQ head coach Kevin Barrett. "We played them twice this year already in a home-and-away format. We beat them by six at home and then got thumped on the road, but we are playing pretty good entering the post-season and if we execute like we need to, we should be in good shape."

"The team is confident and we are hoping to make a little bit of noise. The bracket is set up for us to make a run."

Super senior Marcellus Lee leads the Raiders. Lee averaged 20.5 points per game this winter and was a force on the offensive and defensive boards all year.

Along with Lee, other players to watch for include senior guards Dennis Martin, Alex Tragellis, Sean Clifford and Phouc Nguyen. Senior forwards Jordan Thompson and Matt O'Neill join junior forward Tim Stille as a potent combination down in the paint.

Quincy Boys

The Quincy Presidents limped into the South Sectional Division II tournament, and as a result, they needed to play a home preliminary round game

Monday night (Feb. 25) against Bishop Feehan High School (see story Page 19).

Quincy finished the 2007-2008 regular season with a 12-8 overall record and was seeded by the MIAA as the No. 14 seed. No. 20 Bishop Feehan (8-12 overall) was the last team into the South Sectional Division II bracket.

The Presidents won Monday night, 53-51, and had to travel to Plymouth to play No. 3 Plymouth North HS (17-3 overall, 1st place in the ACL North) last night (Feb. 27) in a first-round game.

Quincy will be looking to match last year's run to the Division II South Sectional semifinals where they lost to Catholic Memorial 75-66.

Hockey

North Quincy

The Red Raiders finished the regular season with a 10-6-4 record and are seeded No. 9 in the Division II South Sectional tournament.

The team played its first-round game last night (Feb. 27) against No. 8 Franklin High School in Franklin, MA.

This first-round game marked a rematch of last season's quarterfinal game between the two schools. A game that then No. 1 Franklin won 4-2 over then No. 9 NQ. If NQ won last night, they would meet No. 1 Coyle & Cassidy in the quarterfinals (date to be announced).

NQ is led by forwards Brandon Gilmore (25-13-38 totals) and Scott Richardson (13-13-26) and goalie Matt Brundige (1.95 GAA). Others skaters to keep an eye on include Zac Deegan, Matt Rodriguez, Joe Vialpando and Matt Furey.

Quincy

The Presidents, who qualified for post-season play on the strength of their huge 4-2 win over NQ on Feb. 13, are the No. 12 seed in the D.II South Sectionals.

Quincy (9-9-2) will play No. 5 Mansfield HS (15-4-1) today (Feb. 28, 6 p.m.) in Foxboro in a first round game.

Quincy lost to the Raiders in a first round game last year, 2-1 in overtime.

If Quincy wins its opening round game, they will play against No. 4 Canton HS in the quarterfinals.

Players to watch for include Jeff Giordani (2.70 GAA), Casey Conley, Mark Gilbody, Ted Walsh (13-15-28 totals), Kevin Keith and Mike LeBel.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

There is an old-fashioned word that is used rarely these days. The word is "mettle." It means courage and even more than courage. It is an ingrained capacity to bear up under strain. To be one's mettle is to be roused or prepared to do one's best with spirit, courage and ardor.

Nathaniel Hawthorne, who traveled a difficult road before he found the key to triumph, wrote, "He must keep his faith in himself while the incredulous world assails him with its utter disbelief."

That, I suspect, is where all of us have to begin when our hopes are thwarted. Faith in ourselves is one thing we never can afford to surrender. It is the key to "mettle," to courage to keep going when we feel drained. When we cease to believe in ourselves and our God-given powers and possibilities, we are finished. It is the man/woman who can go on believing in himself/herself while the incredulous world assails him with its utter unbelief who comes thru undefeated.

And, yes, these are times to test the "mettle" of us all.

GRADE 7 STUDENTS at Broad Meadows Middle School are finishing an exhibit for the USS Massachusetts honoring the pioneering World War II women of the Quincy Fore River and Bethlehem-Hingham shipyards. Here Samantha McCardle, Rachel Ring, Theresa Lepore and Erica Amato display their tributes to welders Mary Heggarty Cedrone, Margaret Jolly Aristide, Pearl Pottle and Flo DiTullio Joyce.

Broad Meadows Girls' Exhibit Hails World War II Women

Call it a tribute to the women of the past from the girls of today.

A new exhibit will open Saturday, March 8, aboard the USS Massachusetts in Battleship Cove, Fall River, a memorial to the Women of World War II by 12 and 13-year-old girls from Quincy.

It began when Laurie Carlson of Battleship Cove was searching out artifacts and stories of the Massachusetts women who served in the military during World War II for the new exhibit.

The search led her to the girls from Broadmeadows Middle School.

Ever since 1986, when the Fore River Shipyard closed, seventh grade students at Broadmeadows have been locating, recording and preserving oral histories of the men and women who worked there during the war.

Over the past 22 years, dozens of female shipbuilders stepped forward to tell the Broadmeadows girls first hand of their patriotism and the students recorded each story in an oral history.

They called the collection "The Winnie the Welder Story."

The current year's historians, Samantha McCardle, Theresa Lepore, Erica Amato and Rachel Ring, showed Carlson some of their transcripts, tapes, vintage photos and memorabilia.

Carlson asked the girls to construct from their collection a "Winnie the Welder" exhibit for the official Massachusetts WWII Memorial aboard the USS Massachusetts.

The exhibit was delivered Tuesday to Battleship Cove, where it has become a permanent part of the Massachusetts Women of World War II exhibit, opening for all to see on Saturday.

3 Captains In Line For Appointment Crowley Retirement Eases Police Tensions

By TOM HENSHAW

The turmoil that has wracked the Quincy Police Department for the past three years relaxed somewhat last week when it was announced that beleaguered Chief Robert Crowley was taking early retirement.

But the basic animosity remained.

"I did not seem to be getting the support that I deserved," said Crowley, who had been engaged in a running battle of words and deeds with the patrolmen's union almost since his appointment in 2004.

And he added quickly, "I don't mean from the mayor's office."

Union President Bruce Tait, leader of what sometimes verged on open rebellion against the chief, was equally blunt.

"I have no comment for now," he told The Sun. "I will have some after he goes."

Crowley, 61, a Quincy cop for 36 years, will retire from the $177,000 job on June 30, four years short of his mandatory retirement year of 2012. A Wollaston boy, he was a Boston policeman for two years before coming back to Quincy.

Mayor Tom Koch, who replaced Mayor William Phelan, who appointed Crowley, was non-committal.

"I respect the police chief and, on behalf of the city of Quincy, I express my deep gratitude for his 36 years service to our city," Policy Director Christopher Walker quoted him as saying.

"I look forward to working together with Chief Crowley in the coming months as we move forward on the transition."

Three captains are in line to succeed Crowley as chief, although there are those who would change the rules to take the job out of Civil Service and throw it open to candidates from outside the city of Quincy.

The three captains and their years of experience include:

- Alan Gillan, age 45, joined the QPD in 1986, sergeant in 1991, lieutenant in 1994 and captain in 1999.

- Michael Miller, age 44, joined the QPD in 1986, sergeant in 1996, lieutenant in 1999 and captain in 2004.

- Paul Keenan, age 49, joined the QPD in 1983, sergeant in 1991, lieutenant in 1995 and captain in 2005.

Gillan is at the top of the existing Civil Service list. Miller and Keenan are tied

'Fiscally Out Of Control' Phantom Jobs Put Workers On City Payroll

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Auditor Rick Fitzpatrick told city councillors Monday that city department heads have filled jobs and "hired (workers) with absolutely no budget for that individual."

In such instances, the job is not listed anywhere and does not exist in the city's budget.

However, people have been repeatedly hired for non-existent jobs, according to Fitzpatrick, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and Councillor Joseph Finn.

"We are that loose," Fitzpatrick said, adding the practice is "fiscally out of control," and he hopes that "the new administration will tighten up procedures."

As an example, Fitzpatrick said the approved budget may include an annual payroll for five laborers, but the department head goes ahead and hires a sixth laborer.

"We need more checks and balances," Fitzpatrick said, citing the need for what he called "Position Control."

At this time, Fitzpatrick said that he has no way of knowing a department head is hiring a new employee until

$40,000 Approved For N.Q. Community Center

City Councillors unanimously approved a $40,000 appropriation for the North Quincy Community Center, the new center under construction at North Quincy Library Branch, 381 Hancock Street.

The transfer from Granite Lofts Mitigation Fund will help provide furnishing, fixtures and renovations for the center which has been located in Good Shepherd Lutheran Church on West Squantum Street.

City Saves $900,000 As Bid Protest Rejected

City officials got additional good news on the school building front this week when the state attorney general's office rejected a bid protest by Empire Masonry Corp that would have cost the city an additional $900,000.

The difference between high bidder, Empire Masonry, and the winning bidder, D'Agostino Associates, Inc. was $900,000, according to City Solicitor James Timmins.

The school building committee faced that new cost if the attorney general upheld the bid protest.

"That part of the work has been held up," Timmins said, adding, "We're free to move now."

Empire had challenged the city's award of the bricklayers' contract charging the winning bidder, D'Agostino, misrepresented information about prevailing wage violations and could not perform for such a low bid.

"The protest is denied," wrote Asst. Attorney General Deborah Anderson in the final words of her 11-page brief which found for Quincy.

The bids were both submitted in mid-January with D'Agostino bidding $5,777,000 without alternates and $5,115,400 with alternates. Empire's bid was $6,544,000 with alternates and $5,948,000 without alternates.

Last week, Mayor Thomas Koch announced that the state had allowed the city to cut the high school building costs by $1.5 million by eliminating a buffer zone.

While the news has been good lately, city councillors Monday agreed to seek additional information on such questionable issues as costs of a sewer line replacement.

In addition, the city must also prevail on a bid protest on the electricians' bid award.

Adams Movie Seen Bringing Visitors Surge City-Wide Tourism Campaign Kicks Off March 20

Congressman William Delahunt and Mayor Thomas Koch this week announced a community-wide tourism initiative that will kick off with a gala fundraiser March 20 at the Granite Links Golf Club.

The "Discover Quincy, Celebrate Adams" campaign strives to meet the challenges of what is expected to be an unprecedented surge in visitors to Quincy over the coming months and years due in part to the premiere of a new HBO mini-series based on David McCullough's landmark biography "John Adams."

"Both of us pledge our full support toward this historic opportunity, but this effort will require the entire city's involvement; our civic leaders, and our residents," Koch said. "Tourism is a great economic engine, and all of the things we plan to do will not only help attract visitors but improve three quality of life for our residents and businesses."

"I am pleased with the enormous amount of support this initiative has received from the Mayor and city officials as well as local chambers of commerce and from the travel and tourism industry," said Delahunt. "What brings people back year after year to places like the City of Presidents is not just the history and culture, but also the values of freedom and democracy we all hold dear as Americans."

Council Dedicates Meeting to Millie Kusser

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly dedicated Monday's meeting to council secretary Millie Kusser with wishes from all for a speedy recovery. Delahunt and Koch are sponsoring the March 20 gala, and invited the public to attend the celebration. The event will include entertainment, dancing and an auction. Tickets are $25, and proceeds will benefit tourism efforts in the city through Discover Quincy, the city's nonprofit tourism agency.

Organizers are also seeking corporate sponsors for the tourism campaign. For more information, businesses and residents can contact Discover Quincy at 617-657-0527 or at www.discoverquincy.com.

Thousands of new visitors are expected to visit the Adams National Historic Park and other attractions around Quincy because of the HBO film. When McCullough's book was originally released, visitation to the Adams Park and the city skyrocketed.

Mark Carey, director of Discover Quincy, said the city could "double or even triple those numbers based on the success of the movie."

The city, Congressman Delahunt's office, Discover Quincy and the National Park Service are working together on a series of programs and projects to prepare for the surge in tourism. Adams Park officials are seeking additional money from the federal government for transportation; are reviewing conditions of streets and sidewalks along trolley routes; and are working on "themed tours" that will make visitor flow to the Adams sites easier to manage.

Delahunt, who has made tourism a top priority during his tenure in Washington, is working to make Quincy a destination hub for visitors by providing tourism-based ferry service in Quincy and coordinating regional partnerships through the "Cultural Coast" initiative he started several years ago.

Koch has pledged a series of major beautification efforts that are now in the planning stages, as well new street banners, stepped-up street-sweeping, improved signage and increased enforcement to stop sign pollution around the city.

"This kind of opportunity will only come once, so it is going to be huge benefit to have so many people get involved and work together on this campaign," Carey said. "I know our residents, businesses, and visitors will all see the results."

Morrissey - Keating Bill Targets Internet Sex Sites

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Norfolk District Attorney William Keating have filed legislation taking dead aim at sex offenders who use the Internet to ply their nefarious pursuits among the innocent.

An Act Regulating Sex Offender Registration in the 21st Century would mandate any individual registering as a sex offender to include with their names and home and work addresses all Internet screen names, domain names and electronic mailing addresses.

Registered individuals would be required to provide updated information to the Sex Offender Registry Board under the same guidelines as all currently required information.

"This legislation is an important additional step toward obtaining the necessary electronic information used by individuals who are registered as sex offenders," said Morrissey in testimony before the Joint Committee on the Judiciary.

MIKE MORRISSEY

WILLIAM KEATING

"Screen names and e-mail addresses are as identifiable to someone as their names or home addresses. It makes sense to have all names and identifications, including e-identifications, under the same registration requirements as addresses, names and aliases."

"With registered and updated electronic identification information, we hope to make it that much more difficult for offenders to gain access to minors through these popular websites," said Keating.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 6, 1899, the Imperial Patent Office in Berlin registers Aspirin, the brand name for acetylsalicylic acid, on behalf of the German pharmaceutical company Friedrich Bayer & Co. In its primitive form, the active ingredient, salicin, had been used for centuries in folk medicine.

• On March 9, 1913, writer Virginia Woolf delivers the manuscript of her first novel, "The Voyage Out," to her publisher. In 1941, fearful for her own mental state and afraid of the coming world war, she filled her pockets with rocks and drowned herself.

• On March 3, 1931, President Herbert Hoover signs a congressional act making "The Star-Spangled Banner" the official national anthem of the United States. Francis Scott Key composed the lyrics to "The Star-Spangled Banner" in 1814.

• On March 7, 1946, actress Joan Crawford, born Lucille Fay Le Sueur in 1905 in Texas, is awarded the Oscar for her performance in "Mildred Pierce." Crawford made some of the finest films of her career after age 40.

• On March 4, 1952, Ernest Hemingway completes his short novel "The Old Man and the Sea." He wrote his publisher the same day, saying he had finished the book and that it was the best writing he had ever done. The critics agreed, and the book won the Pulitzer Prize in 1953.

• On March 5, 1963, the Hula-Hoop, a hip-swiveling toy that became a huge fad across America when it was first marketed by Wham-O in 1958, is patented by the company's co-founder, Arthur "Spud" Melin. An estimated 25 million Hula-Hoops were sold in its first four months of production alone.

• On March 8, 1986, "Mask," starring Eric Stoltz and Cher, opens. Cher, who had launched a serious acting career with her appearance in Robert Altman's "Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean" in 1982, received the Best Actress prize at the Cannes Film Festival for her role in "Mask."

Holy Honey And Memories

Ever hear of Holy Honey?

For some 20 years you could get a tasty jar of it at Bethany Congregational Church fairs.

Direct from the bees in residence.

Rev. John D. Banks, who was pastor of the church from 1954 to 1980, when he retired also had another title: beekeeper.

He began keeping bees here in 1960 and had four hives on the flat top roof of the Parish House.

To set up the hives and tend to them, he would have to go up through the church tower. Hence, the nickname, Holy Honey.

Each hive could house up to 40,000 honey working bees. The Queen Bee was a pretty busy gal, producing 1,000 eggs a day to populate the hives.

Yes, he got stung a few times.

I mentioned John in a recent column about people and things I wish I could see, do or hear one more time.

Now retired, he and his wife, Billie, are living in Chapel Hill, N.C., but keep up with what's going in Quincy with a mail subscription to The Sun.

That particular column brought a nice note from him about those mentioned in the column and some fond memories of his own. He said he didn't mind sharing his thoughts with friends here in Quincy:

"You rang the bell over and over for many, including me, with your recollections in the recent issue of The Sun: Munroe MacLean, Muriel Goudey, (Amelio) Della Chiesa, (James) McIntyre, Percy Lane, Tom Burgin and the HoJo restaurant in the Granite Trust. I'd add Frank Hunt (Quincy Ledger reporter and yachtsman) and Delcevere King, (president Granite Trust and civic leader).

"This old beekeeper-preacher didn't belong amidst that glorious company, but thank you for squeezing me in.

"Perhaps you picked up a jar (of honey) at the church fair and it is the sweetness rather than the producer bringing back the experience.

"I renewed beekeeping on a small scale for a few years in retirement but had to give it up when the mites raised havoc with the hives.

"Incidentally, did you know that modern beekeeping began about 150 years ago with Lorenzo Langstroth, a Congregational minister who served an Andover church? He designed the moveable frames for the comb, and the world over, most hive bodies still bear his name.

"Billie and I have been very fortunate to stay active into our 90s. We have had to limit distant travel, so will probably not again return to our beloved Quincy.

parental permission.

Diversity Celebration March 13

For tickets and more information, call 617-472-0737 or visit stchrysostom.org.

REV. JOHN BANKS is shown tending to his beehives at Bethany Congregational Church where he was pastor from 1954 to 1980.

"We retain connections with the Bethany family and rejoice in Bill Harding's return after three overseas assignments as chaplain.

"And we read The Sun to keep abreast of developments in the whole community. I remember when you started up, I asked Hespil Sutherland if he thought you would succeed. 'O, yes' he replied. 'We were glad to take an ad (Quincy Cooperative Bank) in the first edition.'

"And you richly succeeded and became a major factor enhancing the spirit of the town. Congratulations and thanks.

"One of my most poignant memories is of the funeral service for Fred Hunt. You'll remember he was an ardent seagoer, even to the point of arranging for his wedding to take place in the middle of Quincy Bay.

"He left word for me to read at the service 'Sea Fever' by John Masfield. It was so affective that Arthur Tobin asked me to read it again at the next council meeting.

'... And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow-rover. And a quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over.'

"I retain my keen interest in the Scottish homeland of my parents. Here at this continuing care community of 650 we have a Burns Anniversary celebration at which the haggis is piped in, a Highland dancer performs, Burns' songs are sung and I recite "To a Mouse" and nine other of his works. Remember locating his statue to Granite Street?

"Billie and I wish you many more years of success in bringing together the people of Quincy in voicing their hopes during their trails and celebrating their victories."

John, thank you for your fond memories and those kind words.

Your mention of Hespil Sutherland made me smile. I think he may have been more sure of The Sun making it than I was.

There were those who were predicting we wouldn't last six months. And there were days when I thought they might be right.

But we're still here-in our 40th year. And we owe it to people and friends like Hespil and others like Remo and Pete DeNicola, George Reardon, Bob Fitzgerald and Bob Costello, Leo Darr, Win Sargent, who helped get us through those crucial first years.

And, of course, readers like you, John.

Scenes From Yesterday

9 7211 Hancock St., Quincy, Mass
It's 11:14 Stayed at this best of out yesterday had a fine time - looking over the granite quarry today. Ed

THIS 1906 POSTCARD view of Quincy Square was one of the first published after Congress allowed full picture postcards. The backs of the cards were for the address only so messages were written in a white area on the front. On the left in this scene the horses were drinking from a Quincy granite fountain donated by the Village Improvement Association. The elms around the church and city hall were planted during the Civil War. On the right the Quincy and Boston Street Railway Co. had a waiting room for the electric trolleys that provided service to pretty much every corner of Quincy. There were only a handful of automobiles registered in Quincy at this time, but it was only a few years later when this scene would be congested with traffic as it is today. READERS FORUM

Opposes 4-Year Term For Mayor

Councillor Davis invited public input regarding his proposal to extend the term of office for the Quincy mayor from two to four years. Well, I am opposed to it.

If someone seeks the job of mayor, he, or she, should be prepared to do that job, as the presidential candidates say, "from day one." The citizens and taxpayers of this city should not endure a prolonged "learning curve." We should not pay for on the job training. Again, anyone who seeks this office should be able to do the job and, if he, or she, is not capable, I, for one, would like the opportunity to vote an incompetent mayor out of office as soon as possible. The two-year term seems reasonable.

The city faces a number of problems: crime, traffic, crumbling streets and sidewalks, and outrageous property tax evaluations. I would rather see the City Council fix some of these before overhauling the city charter.

B. McDonough
 Quincy

Three Years for Mayor and Councillors

I agree two years is not enough. I also agree four years is too long. Why not three years for mayor and councillors? The three-year cycle may not coincide with state and national elections every other cycle but any additional costs to the city for an off-year election could be funded by the campaign funds from those local candidates on the ballot.

The three-year cycle would reduce the number of local elections thereby reducing political sign litter, traffic distracting sign holders and campaign monetary solicitations by politicians from taxpayers. With all the monetary savings for the candidates, they may consider donating 10% of all campaign contributions to the hotel/motel tax for the purchase of land for open space.

Thank You For Successful John Hancock Plunge

On behalf of the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, we would like to extend a huge "Thank You" to all who braved the cold waters of Mound Street Beach Jan. 26 to raise monies for the benefit of Interfaith Social Services.

For all the wonderful people who contributed money to sponsor the Plunges and Dunking Tons for this fun event, which honors Quincy's own, John Hancock, your generosity contributed to our raising over $5,400. Job well done!

Without the following business and organizations, we could not have made this event happen: Coops Bar & Grill; Great Chow; Dunkin Donuts on Sea Street; Fallon Ambulance; Jeanie Communications; Quincy Police Department Marine Unit; Quincy Point Community Police Unit; City of Quincy Park Department and Mayor Thomas Koch. A huge "Thank You" to all.

Thank you for all the wonderful press coverage to The Quincy Sun, Patriot Ledger, Quincy Access Television and all the stores that let us put a flyer in their windows.

It's not too late to contribute to this worthy cause. Donations are still being accepted. Please make your check payable to the Quincy Beach and Coastal Commission, c/o Chickie Abdallah, Treasurer, 48 Silver Street, Quincy, MA 02169. Any amount is greatly appreciated and will help Interfaith Social Services continue do-

Quincy's Yesterdays Quincy Point Site For $5.7M Renewal Project

By FRANK McCAULEY

Quincy Point has been selected for a planned potential $5.7 million Neighborhood Improvement Code Enforcement Program, the city's second residential rehabilitation project.

The 116-block area was recommended by Geoffrey A. Davidson, director of City Planning, after an extensive survey, Mayor James R. McIntyre announced.

"There has been a tremendous favorable response to our first project in North Quincy," the mayor noted. "This will be a continuation of the revitalization of our residential areas."

POLLUTION THREAT COULD CLOSE WOLLASTON BEACH

Mayor McIntyre has requested a meeting with the state health officials to avert a possible closing of Wollaston and Quincy Bat beaches this summer because of a pollution threat.

The mayor said several clam beds in the area have already been closed.

In a letter to State Public Health Commissioner Alfred L. Frechette, Mayor McIntyre said, "I know that you are aware of our problems along Wollaston Beach, which came close to being closed last year because of the pollution which affected other areas in the Boston Harbor."

McIntyre said that pollution factors could possibly endanger the health of people who would be using Quincy beaches during the 1970 season.

Residents, Business Owners Debate Business Zone C Change

Some 25 residents, mostly from Marina Bay, and a dozen business owners filled council chambers Monday to debate, for a second time, a zoning change that would allow increased density for apartment buildings in a Business C zone.

After 90 minutes, City Council President Jay Davis suspended, but did not close, the public hearing, which allows the council to revisit the issue at any time in the future.

Councillors repeatedly noted that Mayor Thomas Koch has appointed a zoning committee to review the city's zoning and this issue should be considered by that committee first.

"Let that body sit," said Ward 5 Councillor Douglas Gutro, noting that the committee will review the city's zoning as a whole.

Koch's Chief of Staff James Fatseas said the mayor has brought in a varied team of the "best and brightest" lawyers, architects, developers, to review the city's code.

"They'll be taking a thorough look at the city's zoning code," said Fatseas.

Councillor Michael McFarland proposed the zoning change under discussion. The change affects only one sentence in the zoning code.

However, a revision would affect the number of units allowed in Business C zones on parcels of 42,000 square feet or larger.

The debate centers on whether 325 square foot apartment units are allowed in such Business C developments or the requirement is 2500 square feet.

"This council has shown they want to control density," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, adding "Let's have an acid test. If we're really serious about this, let's show the voters."

Gutro noted that passage of the change would have a "ripple effect" in five or six other locations. That includes a parcel located across the street from the Adams mansion where a similar development would be legal.

The issue for Marina Bay residents is the proposed development of a 1.25-acre parcel at nearby 260 Victory Road owned by O'Connell Construction.

O'Connell Construction wants to build 80 units on the 1.25-acre parcel while a strict interpretation of the zoning by-law would limit the development to 25 units.

Marina Bay residents have been battling the O'Connell Company in court for the past four years in an effort to halt the project. They cite such issues as the lack of transportation, the off-site parking plan and the less than ten-foot setback in the plan.

During their pleas to the council, the residents noted they have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in an effort to protect their property. The case may not be heard in court until summer.

"The amendment would have the unintended effect of mooting the condominiums' case," said their attorney, Edmund Alcock, adding, "It would be unfortunate to have the rug pulled out from under them."

Developer Peter O'Connell, a city resident for 64 years, said he and his staff had followed the proper procedures, received the green light from the Planning Board and his firm has spent considerable money.

"It's been delayed a long time," said O'Connell, adding, "It may be too late for that job."

Business owners, including Bob Fitzgerald of South Shore Buick, Robert Galligan of Best Western, Tony Agnitti of Agnitti Insurance Agency lined up to support O'Connell's interpretation.

Galligan also said, "I may have to take the hotel and make a change."

Marina Bay residents mailed three to four dozen letters, most form letters, to councillors and the city clerk, asking them to oppose McFarland's motion.

At the hearing, residents presented records indicating that such density has not been proposed or built anywhere in the city.

One resident, Fred Alibrandi, asked councillors to remember that the 277 Marina Bay residents are Quincy residents and love the city as much as they do.

Alibrandi suggested that several councillors don't know Marina Bay and don't consider the residents as real Quincy residents.

"What we're asking for is empathy," said Alibrandi.

Councillors may revisit the issue in 90 days but no vote was taken.

Phantom Jobs Put Workers On City Payroll

after it is done.
Fitzpatrick said he will have more details on all financial matters when he reports to city council on March 17.
"Our budget is meaningless," said Raymondi who raised the issue. He said that he knows of at least one individual hired for a non-existent position. He declined to name the person to protect his privacy.

Hiring under such circumstances can be very unfair to the employee as well, said Raymondi who noted that one person left a job, was hired and now has no job because the job doesn't exist.
"There is no job in the budget, no job," said Raymondi. "We're overspending," said Raymondi, adding, "I couldn't even vote against that position because we didn't even know it existed."

"This happened to two people," said Finn who noted that, in other cases, department budgets overestimate the number of positions and costs.
"Many of those positions were never filled," Finn said, adding he hopes that, in the future, he hopes to "have a budget we can rely on."

City Awarded $69,000 For Wind Turbine Project Feasibility

The City of Quincy has been awarded $69,000 for the Wind Turbine Project Feasibility Study from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative.
It was announced by State Senator Michael W. Morrissey, Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano, and A.

Stephen Tobin along with Mayor Tom Koch.
The feasibility study will provide crucial information that will help Quincy determine whether to pursue a wind power project at Quarry Hills.
"This study is the next step in an ongoing effort among state and local officials, and concerned citizens to bring clean, renewable power to the city," said Sen. Morrissey.

He added, "We hope that the initial study will show that the site makes some sense for wind power."

Davis Submits First Zoning Changes For Lowe's Home Center

Plans for a four-acre Lowe's Home Center off Burgin Parkway in South Quincy moved forward Monday when City Council President Jay Davis submitted proposals for zoning changes on 15 parcels in the area.

Under the plan, nine parcels will be rezoned for Planned Unit Development or PUD while six parcels will be rezoned as Open Space or parkland.

Davis has also asked that a section of Penn Street be discontinued to make way for the home improvement center. Grasso Park will be relocated under the plan.

Council members voted to send all three petitions to the Ordinance Committee for review and recommendations.

The City Council plays a major role in the permitting process for the PUD project. However, the Lowe's plan also requires approval by the state for a change in parkland and some conservation issues.

Atty. Edward Fleming who represented Lowe's Home Centers Inc. reluctantly withdrew the company's application for technical reasons.

Fleming expects to resubmit the application by the next council meeting.

There's a procedural issue," Davis said referring to questions raised by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and City Solicitor James Timmins.
